THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have grown weary of them and thought I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth a little more, I think, I guess, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,
Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Cosmopolitan. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and my former Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health Much Improved at 64 than at 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.
MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Cordiac he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lungs trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

Poker and Politics.

They were talking politics and playing bean poker, twenty beans for a quarter. There were three of them, all democrats, and for convenience we will call the Smith, Brown, and Robinson. Smith was dealer, and while he was dealing the cards Brown and Robinson were discussing the overwhelming corruption among the officials of the land and shoving cards up their sleeves. The cards being dealt, Brown, who sat next the dealer, passed, at the same time remarking: "As I was saying, the fearful corruption which runs through every branch of the public service is horrifying to every true patriot; the blush of shame mantles my cheek when I think of Grant, the President of the United States, lending himself to all kinds of thievery and jobbery, and surrounding himself with a horde of blood-sucking robbers, who are draining the very life-blood of the people."

"It's perfectly awful. I chip," said Robinson as he neatly disposed of his hand and got four kings out of his sleeve.

"I pass out," said Smith.

"Just look at Belknap, and Babcock, and Blaine and the rest of them fellows. I raise you twenty beans," remarked Brown as he deftly got from his sleeve the four aces which were there concealed.

"Yes, and think of Bristow and them mules. Let's see; I call the raise and go you twenty better," replied Robinson.

"That sizes my pile. Just go back a few years in this Administration and ponder on the Credit Mobilier, the back-pay steal, the raising of the President's salary, and the use of money to carry elections in New York. Such things as them were never heard of in Andrew Jackson's time, or when the democrats were in power. I call you; what have you got?" said Brown.

"I've got pretty nigh an invincible—here's two little pairs of kings," replied Mr. Robinson, as he laid his hand on the table.

"Oh, I can rake them—here's four bullets," said Brown, as he reached for the pot.

"Great snakes!" exclaimed Robinson; "you're a nice pill to be talking about the corruption of the Administration, ain't you? If I couldn't play poker honester'n you I'd never talk about other folks. You and Mr. Smith continue this game while I go out and rustle some more soap."—Austin (Texas) Reveille.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1876.

Speaker Kerr's Case.

The House committee whose deliberations (as to how most effectually to damage republican reputations by mud-slinging) are presided over by Heister Clymer, are now engaged in the most distaseful job they have yet undertaken—an effort to save the democratic Speaker of the democratic "reform" House from the damaging effects of a charge of corruption.

The proved and acknowledged facts in the case are as follows: In 1866, Mr. Kerr, a democratic member of Congress from Indiana, secured an appointment in the regular army for one Greene, a republican of the State of New York, and of whom Kerr knew nothing previously. Greene was court-martialed and cashiered some years later.

Now Greene swears that he paid to one Harney, then a doorkeeper of the House, $450 to get him appointed; Harney acknowledges this, and swears positively that he paid the money to Kerr; and that it was in consideration of this payment that Kerr, a western democrat, successfully interested himself to get a commission for Greene, an eastern republican and a stranger. Kerr swears just as positively that he never received any money from Harney or any one else, and that he never knew Harney at all.

We are loath to believe that a man who has borne so high a character as Mr. Kerr for many years, would sell his influence and his honor for so pitiful a bribe; yet the charge, viewed purely in the legal bearing of the evidence, is better supported than any scandal yet launched against any republican since the democratic scandal-mills commenced turning out their vile products,—better supported, even, than the original charge against Belknap, setting aside the confession which Belknap claims he made to save his wife's name and on Clymer's implied promise that if he would confess and resign he should not be impeached.

True, Greene is shown by the army records to be an improper person,—and probably was such when he was commissioned, which adds another element to the mystery why he should have been appointed by Kerr,—and Harney is confessedly the man who arranged the affair and handed Kerr the money. The democrats say,—and with justice, too,—that the positive denial of a man of honorable standing should more than offset the assertions of many known rogues; but sauce for the republican goose should be sauce for the democratic gander, and the democrats must remember that they have considered the totally unsupported testimony of convicted thieves, acknowledged perjurers and bribe-givers, and bribe-takers, ex-office holders discharged for cause, and swindlers and scoundrels of every degree, as ample justification for assailing the reputations of republicans who through many years of public service have stood quite as high in reputation as ever did Michael C. Kerr of Indiana. The sworn testimony against Kerr comes from men much more reputable than most of the witnesses on whose evidence the democrats have relied to ruin republicans, and is more strongly corroborated by documentary proof than have been many of the charges against republicans which the democratic committees have bruited abroad as decisively proved.

We do not mean to imply that we regard the charge against Mr. Kerr as being proved. He has borne a good name, and been supposed to possess common-sense; and to credit the story of his bribe-taking in the manner imputed would show him to be not only corrupt but a silly fool. But Mr. Kerr appointed his investigating committees with express reference to the dirty work they were expected to do and have so faithfully done, and there is a sort of poetical justice in his finding out from practical experience how it is himself.

There is one gratifying feature in the case,—the manner in which Clymer's committee treated Mr. Kerr. From the way in which previous investigations had been conducted the impression had gone abroad that the committee didn't have an idea as to what honesty, justice and common decency demand; and it is pleasing indeed to find that they do know what is proper, and do it,—when a democrat is accused. The charges were no sooner made than Mr. Kerr was notified of them, in order that his defence might be ready; and when the witnesses against him were present before the committee, and all was ready save Mr. Kerr, the enquiry was adjourned at once in order to allow him to be present at the examination. But this one instance of showing an accused person fair play only makes the usual customs of these investigating committees all the more contemptible.

The Demoralized Ring.

At the present outlook Blaine and Hayes, possibly Blaine and Bristow, promise to be the winning ticket both in June and November.—Nashua Telegraph.

"Politics makes strange bed fellows," and we fear brother Moore sought counsel from interested politicians during his visit to Washington. Either this or the recent convention in the Western States, which have been conceded to Blaine from first to last, have unsettled his usual equanimity and correct judgment, and made him the subject of the most remarkable political conversion of the season. We hope the figures we have given in another column will have the good effect to bring our weak brother back to his old faith and strengthen him in it. There is not in any recent development, and there will not be before the meeting of the Cincinnati convention, the slightest occasion for "crow eating" by any advocate of Mr. Bristow.—Exeter News-Letter.

That was an unkind cut, after such close companionship. The News-Letter has been travelling around in a peck measure, while the Telegraph has seen visions of the future which are revelations of the mistakes of the past.

News and Notes.

A despatch from Lincoln, Nebraska, gives the following particulars of the massacre by Indians of a large portion of Capt. Stone's company of Cincinnatians en route for the Black Hills. Part of the expedition was passing through the Sand Hills, about fifty miles from Red Cloud Agency. The day was warm, and the roads nearly impassable from sand. The men who had deposited their coats and weapons in the wagons, were straggling wearily behind, when the Indians rushed down and cut them off from the train. A massacre followed, with but little resistence, the Indians numbering several hundreds. The leaders of the party, Capt. Stone and James Wood, were among the first to fall.

Mary Healy, who is accused of killing her child in South Boston by throwing a pair of scissors at it, will be tried for manslaughter instead of murder.

Paris will name a street after A. T. Stewart.

A Kentucky couple, weighing 1200 pounds, visited the Centennial recently. If you don't believe it, ask the Philadelphia Bulletin.

It is the opinion of the Detroit Free Press man that the coming Fourth of July, "will jist stand up on her hind legs and howl for glory."

Let us see. How does the new anti-hanging law operate in Maine? Page killed his wife at Chelsea; Finn killed his child at Waldoboro; and lastly at Canaan, Herring killed his son-in-law, Harmon. Which is one murder a month since the new law went into effect.—Belfast Journal.

Seventy-five hundred Sir Knights were in the Masonic procession at Philadelphia on Thursday last.

Chicagos 9, Bostons 3.

There will be a grand reunion of reformed men at Concord June 29th. In the evening there will be a band concert and torchlight procession, the concert to be a competitive one between at least five bands of the State, and to be given in front of the State House. Extra trains will be run on the several railroads to return after the evening's festivities. The preparations for this grand rally are in the hands of five committees appointed for the purpose. This is the programme as arranged. A prominent gentleman of the order expresses great confidence in its success, as nearly all the clubs in the State, with a membership of about 70,000, have expressed themselves in favor of the project, and he estimates the number that will participate at least 10,000 people. Wendell Phillips is mentioned as one of the orators expected.

A Plucky Clam.

A clam of the large, hard-shell species taken at the beach, with a grip like a vice, had been left lying loose, and had opened its mouth wide for a breath of air and gone to sleep with it open, when a grimalkin chanced to pass that way, and, inhaling the scent of the delicious morsel, forthwith commenced a search, which revealed the whereabouts of the bivalve. Pussy was bound to possess the clam Cautiously, yet earnestly, she went to work. First she walked round and round it, eyeing it on every side. Then she poked it with her paw, turning it round and round. The clam, by this time, had got its eyes open. Its curiosity was aroused to see what the cat would do. Next, pussy tried to insert its nose between the shells. The clam knew she couldn't do it, and he lay there and laughed in his sleeve. Next pussy inserted one of her paws between the shells and rapidly withdrew it, watching its effect on the objective point. Not a muscle, however, did his clamship move, not so much as an eye-winker. Emboldened by this, puss put her paw full upon the coveted carcase of the bivalve. The latter winked with one eye, as much as to say, "Now, old lady, I've got you?" and bringing those two jaws of his together with a snap, held that cat's paw with a grip that filled her with astonishment. First came a spit, then a prolonged yell, then spit and yell alternately, and a series of gyrations that would have done honor to a circus performer. She snaked that clam all over the yard, up against a doorstep, between two fence pickets, and over a stone wall. But the clam meant business, and wouldn't let go. Finally the cries and antics of the poor creature brought two men to the scene, and by their united efforts the grip of the clam was loosened and pass released.—Providence Press.

A Signal Service Romance.

I heard a couple of days ago a hitherto-unpublished romance connected with the life of one of the most prominent officials of the Signal Service Bureau. He was, my informant states, once engaged to be married to a lovely, charming and wealthy girl. The eve of the wedding had dawned—if an eve can dawn—and they were occupying the same rocking-chair and talking as inanely as only lovers can talk, when the fair one said; "Albert, duckey, there is one thing I wish you to do when we are married." "Name it, lovey," he replied. "That is, petty, to have no rain on Monday, because, you know darling, that Monday is washing day, and if the things are not washed and dried, then the week's work is so fearfully put back. You will, won't you, my owny?" This young man's heart was torn, but he replied: "Maud, dearest, my duty to my bleeding country demands imperatively that I shall whoop her up the precise sort of weather that heaven will probably send impartially during the next twenty-four hours upon the just and unjust, without regard to age, sex or previous condition of servitude. If an area of barometric disturbance exists in the Middle States on Monday, how can I consistently with my duty declare that the probabilities favor clear weather with light winds from the southeast? No, angel; ask me anything but that. I could not love thee, dear, so darn much, loved I not honor more."

"Then you do not love me," she sobbed, bursting into tears. The reader will readily understand how they progressed to a quarrel and parted enemies. She returned his presents, and is now lecturing on woman's rights, and he is a confirmed misogynist and sits up all Sunday night at the Signal Service office, with fiendish glee making out bulletins for Monday announcing falling barometers, atmospheric disturbances, heavy rains, showery weather, and so on. Wash. Cor. N. Y. World.

Observations on Anna and Others.

Joe Howard was in Boston to see Anna Dickinson off, and so was Whitelaw Reid; and the former takes this occasion to show that the latter takes this occasion to show that the former takes this occasion to show that the latter is shockingly fickle. We dare say, however, it is mostly the fault of the girls. Mr. Howard says:

Among others already here we have met Whitelaw Reid, gotten up within an inch of his life, and pretty as a peach. As he paces Washington street, his tower-like form attracts the attention of the ladies, while the Apolyonic graces of his figure impress all beholders.

Miss Dickinson has enslaved him; Miss Kate Field has enslaved him.

For years the Tribune has chronicled the marvelous beauty and extraordinary success of the Field, and now in person and clad in the very essence of chivalry, the young editor forsakes the tower and presses with vigor on to report the conquest of his more modern Jane.

I never could understand this butterfly business.

It seems to me if I had one girl I'd stick to one girl.

If I had a Kate I wouldn't want an Ann.

And if I had once twanged the harp of regard in honor of a Field, I'm tolerably certain I could never go on an air on a Dickinson.

I like Ann myself.

Not that I know her—heaven forbid.

Not that I've ever basked in the sunlight of her eyes, or twined my lily finger in her short cut hair.

But she's a ripper.

I always preferred men to women, and she comes about as near being a man as any woman I ever heard of.

—Good tea has been raised in North Carolina, and as the experiment has been well tested the people of the State are anticipating the successful inauguration of a new industry.

—A Berkshire (Mass.,) paper recalls how, years ago, two ladies went into a Pittsfield entertainment wearing such "shocking country hats" that the nobby young women who sat near could hardly enjoy the performance for laughing. The two were Harriet Beecher Stowe and Fanny Fern, who were rusticating in Stockbridge.

Dear Old "Yankee Doodle."

It sings in the hearts of the people! Our boys have whistled it, our girls have sung and played it, our sturdy men have marched to it, and now we have it in picture—a grand and masterly production of art, by A. M. Willard. The original adorns Memorial Hall, at Philadelphia, and is daily admired by thousands. The copy is a fine chromo, and should adorn the walls of every American home.

HAVING NOTICED

The statements in the city papers, that certain persons have been injured by eating pressed corned beef put up in Chicago, and feeling that if not explained these facts will result in injury where it does not belong, and as after a thorough investigation we find that the beef complained of is in every instance beef packed in rolls and enclosed in tin foil by parties unknown to us, and not at all similar to canned beef; therefore we, the undersigned, in simple justice to the public and to the reliable firm that pack the canned article, wish to state that we have for a long time sold Pressed CANNED Corned Beef and Beef Tongues packed in 2, 4, 6 and 14 lb cans, by Messrs. Libby, McNeil & Libby of Chicago, and we cheerfully recommend this brand of goods as a safe, nutritious and economical article of food.

I would respectfully invite the people of Portsmouth and vicinity, who have lost relatives or friends, or have occasion for the use of any kind of stone work to call before purchasing elsewhere. The Next Celebration.

There was a large meeting of citizens at the Common Council room, Thursday evening, to take measures toward a proper celebration of the coming 4th of July. Col. Jerome C. Butler was chosen chairman, and Mr. Oliver M. Knight secretary. On motion, a committee of three was appointed by the chair, to report a general committee of forty citizens to arrange all details. The following names were reported:

Ichabod Goodwin, Jerome C. Butler, Wm. H. Sise, Wm. R. Boardman, Thomas H. Odion, E. G. Peirce, Jr., Daniel Marcy, E. D. Coffin, Samuel Dodge, Geo. E. Hanson, Frank Jones, Augustus W. Odiorne, Albert R. Hatch, Oliver S. Loomis, Jos. H. Foster, Alfred F. Howard, John Laighton, Charles A. Holbrook, G. M. Goodrich, Chas. W. Gardner, T. E. O. Marvin, Andrew P. Wendell, O. M. Knight, M. T. Betton, Plumer D. Norton, James H. Dow, James R. May, Chas. A. Hazlett, John H. Wells, John E. Rider, Jos. P. Morse, John S. Perry, Ira. C. Seymour, Frank Williams, W. R. Preston, John Stekell, Wm. O. Sides, Wm. R. Martin, Cyrus L. Brown, John P. Sweetser.

Col. Wm. H. Sise was chosen by the meeting as Chief Marshal for the day.

A meeting of the general committee was appointed for Friday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Common Council room, to discuss a plan of proceedings and appoint sub-committees. The meeting then adjourned.

The following copy of a document relating to a Fourth of July celebration of long ago will be read with much interest to-day. Fifty-six years have passed since that goodly company sat down to the dinner furnished by J. Wildes at 12s per plate, and celebrated the anniversary of the Nation's independence in (among other things) "23 Gallons Punch" at 9s per gallon. Names of many noted men—John Langdon, J. Mason, Levi Woodbury, and others—are in the list of subscribers.

We the subscribers agree to unite in celebrating the approaching anniversary of American Independence by a procession, oration, musick, and a public dinner,—or such of them as the Committee of Arrangements may deem expedient—and we hereby severally promise said COMMITTEE, viz: John N. Sherburne, Ichabod Bartlett, Augustus Lord, David C. Foster, Charles A. Cheever and N. A. Haven, Jr., to pay our several proportions of the expense of said celebration, provided that at least ONE HUNDRED PERSONS unite in this subscription.

Corner-Stone Deposit.

On Friday, Marcellus Eldredge, Esq., deposited beneath the corner stone of his new mansion house on Islington street a sealed box whose contents are particularly appropriate to this centennial year. They were partly contributed from the extensive collection of Mr. James F. Jenness, one of the members of the Eldredge Brewing Co., and who, having duplicates of many valuable and rare coins, would be pleased to furnish them for a like purpose wherever they would be appreciated as a gift. Mr. Eldredge's house is to be when completed, one of the finest wooden structures in Portsmouth, its proportions being such as to suggest convenient and airy rooms and a commodious and comfortable establishment. It will be finished inside with black walnut trimming throughout, and heated by steam. The box of which we speak contains the following articles:

Trade Dollar, U. S.

Spanish Dollar, 1793.

First issue American Cent, 1793, Copper, (perfect.)

Last issue American Cent, 1857, Copper, (perfect.)

U. S. Copper and Silver Coin of every issue of date of Mr. Eldredge's birth.

U. S. Silver Coin of the year 1875, of every denomination.

A Postage Stamp of every denomination of 1, 2 and 3 cents, ever issued by the P. O. Department.

A piece of every issue of U. S. Coin ever put in circulation by our government, of silver and copper.

This box is enclosed in another, likewise closely sealed, which also contains a number of old and curious relics appertaining to Mr. Eldredge's family, together with copies of the latest issue of the Portsmouth Journal, the DAILY CHRONICLE, and the Daily Evening Times.

Aldermanic.

There will be a practice game of base ball at the Plains, between two picked nines, this afternoon. Game will be called at 2:30 o'clock.

The petition of Daniel Littlefield for leave to relay his sidewalk on Russell street was referred to the committee on streets, with power.

The subject of joining with George Bilbruck in the construction of a sewer on Creek street was referred to the committee on streets with the Mayor added, with power.

A communication from the keeper of the powder magazine relating to the ownership of certain ammunition stored there was referred to the Mayor.

The use of State street school house on July 4, was granted to the Knights of Pythias.

The subject of selecting location for erecting an engine house for steamer No. 1, was referred to the committee on fire department, to report.

The committee to whom was referred the petition of Jerome C. Butler for the widening and straightening of Lafayette and Middle roads at their intersection, reported in favor of granting the prayer of the petitioner. The report was accepted and adopted.

Adjourned.

Jottings.

Elmer Tuttle, the thirteen years old boy who was placed under $200 bonds to appear before the Circuit Court, by Judge Page, Thursday, for stealing property from Mr. John Malsbensden, was on Friday, on appeal of his parents, sentenced to two years in the Reform School. Mr. Malsbensden was not aware he had been robbed until Officer Hobbs took a portion of the stolen property to him for identification.

Some contemptible wretch whom it were gross flattery to call a swine, either to show off his "wit" or to gratify his petty malice cut off the flowers and tore up the plants set out by Kearsarge Engine Company at Langdon Park. This wretched piece of sceaking Vandalism is about on a par with the acts of the graveyard-thieves who make a practice of stealing flowers from the graves in the cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McDermott of San Francisco are visiting at Mr. Charles Main's estate, after a three years' tour in Europe.

Mr. J. Albert Walker is erecting a double tenement on Bridge street in the rear of the Tompson estate, to be rented.

A line of omnibuses is again to run this season to this city from Rye, to connect with the Shoals steamers.

Several persons are to be baptized at the Middle street church on Sunday forenoon.

Two cars went from this city to Newburyport Thursday afternoon at 6:30 o'clock by special train, crowded with temperance reformers to attend the grand rally. The club received a very enthusiastic reception. It is estimated that there were seventeen hundred persons present. The club reached home at midnight.

Mr. Andrew G. Holmes, of Boston, has purchased Capt. Salter's farm at Greenland, for $9000.

Marcellus Eldredge, Esq., has purchased the house and lot immediately in rear of the land upon which he is erecting his new residence.

We are requested to state that should it rain this afternoon, the dedication of the Haven School tree at the Park, appointed to take place at two o'clock, will be postponed until next Wednesday.

As soon as the potato bug took up his residence hereabouts, the tent caterpillar and the canker worm took their departure for another climate. "Its an ill wind that—"

Owing to the sickness of Hon. Edward Carswell, who was to have spoken at the Temple Sunday evening, the Temperance Reform Club will hold their meeting at Rechabite Hall, and local talent will interest the audience. There will be no admission fee but a collection will be taken up. The meeting will commence at 7 1-2 o'clock.

On Friday morning Master George Wilson, son of Mr. John B. Wilson, of Kittery, in attempting to remove a loaded pistol from a bureau drawer, accidentally discharged it, the ball passing through the third finger, near the hand, into the little finger, breaking the bone between the second joint and the hand and lodging in the finger. In the absence of the local physicians, the boy was taken to the U. S. S. "Sabine," where the ball was extracted and the wound dressed by Dr. R. C. Parsons, U. S. N.

Mr. Charles M. Rand is leader of the Rye Cornet Band,—not Mr. G. Harrison Jenness, as at first reported; and Mr. Davis Rand is director. The mistake as to the leadership was quite natural, for no one could look at the Band without seeing "Harry's" portly form and raven beard; and as he has ably and energetically performed the duties of Superintending School Committee of Rye ever since the Declaration of Independence, and been Moderator of every town-meeting for the same length of time, besides keeping one of the most popular (and deservedly so) summer boarding-houses in the place, and one of the best conducted refreshment saloons (with bowling-alley attached) for ladies and gentlemen to be found anywhere, our reporter naturally concluded he was the band-leader also. But our reporter wonders how a man who does so much as the genial and jovial G. Harrison does, can keep so fat, and thinks he must feed regularly at his own table, and visit the bowling-saloon at very long intervals.

A number of French laborers from Manchester have been substituted for the striking stevedores at Concord Railroad wharf.

Second Lieut. George W. Rand, of the St. Cloud Hotel, New York (a son of Portsmouth,) has been elected First Lieutenant in Company F of the famous New York Seventh Regiment.

Political.

The Concord Monitor says: "The delegation to Cincinnati is composed, with posibly one or two exceptions, of friends of Blaine, Rollins and the republican party."

Mr. Blaine is fighting a hydra. No sooner is one head of the monster cut off than two grow in its place. Hercules gained his victory over the many-headed serpent by the process of cautery, but Mr. Blaine has as yet only had time to slash lustily about him to avoid being swallowed. How the battle will end we do not attempt to predict, but Mr. Blaine's defence is remarkable as an exhibition of address and manly vigor against the odds of numbers.—Worcester Gazette.

Ex-"Bigerman" Fitzhugh has carried off some valuable records from the doorkeeper's office, and certain index books showing the documents and books drawn by the members as well as the number to which each was entitled. He promises to become an investigating committee of one on the affairs of his late democratic friends and supporters, and to make it lively for some of them.

As a whole we doubt if New Hampshire ever before sent to a republican convention a class of men more free from personal bias or prejudice or more determined to faithfully and fairly carry out the people's wishes. While it is undoubtedly true that most of the delegates are the friends of Mr. Blaine and will give him their votes if in view of the whole ground he shall appear to be the strongest candidate, yet we believe there is not one among them who is so pledged or has such decided preferences that he will not heartily agree to the nomination of any man who can present stronger claims or make republican success more assured than Mr. Blaine.—Dover Enquirer.

"W. S. B.," a guest of the Eagle Hotel in Concord, during the sitting of the recent Republican State Convention, thus compliments that body in a letter: "My first visit to this delightful city occurred during the Republican State Convention, and was declared to be the largest and most intelligent body of men ever before convened in the State. But what I most desired to state is this: That I never have seen so large a number of men together that in all respects seemed so worthy of the confidence of the people. I mingled for about two days in the throng at the Eagle Hotel, where about 500 of their number were accommodated, and not a rough or disorderly word was heard, and what was more remarkable and worthy of imitation, no sign of intoxicating liquor was discernible, and no alcholic fumes tainted the air with its pestiferous odors. Surely the interests of the people are safe in their hands."

The Supply Depot of the Body.

The stomach is the grand supply depot of the body, upon which it draws for all the elements needed in the composition of bone, muscle, brain and blood. The liver is an important auxiliary of this mighty organ, and the two are most intimately connected. Nothing so certainly ensures the harmonious action of these viscera, and so completely removes the disorders which simultaneously affect both, as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the most popular American specific for all complaints to which the stomach, liver and bowels are subject, and the foremost tonic on this side of the Atlantic. Indigestion, costiveness, inactivity and congestion of the liver, poverty of the blood, debility of the bladder and kidneys, and many other ailments produced by or causing weakness, are entirely removed by its use.

Stump speakers do not always tell the truth; they would tell it exactly if they said that Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam is the best remedy in the world for hoarseness, coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs.

Pyle's Dietetic Saleratus.—Universally acknowledged the best in use. Each pound bears the name of JAMES PYLE. None genuine without. tje76

Important to persons visiting New York or the Centennial. The Grand Union Hotel, New York, opposite the Grand Central Depot, has over 350 elegantly furnished rooms. Elevator, steam and all improvements. European plan. Carriage hire is saved, as baggage is taken to and from the depot free. Guests can live better for less money at the Grand Union than at any other dollar-and-a-half house in the world for hoarseness, coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR SORE THROAT, PULMOCINE CORDIAL is for sale at the UNION STORE, Market Street. Price 50 cents per bottle.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Slinging Slang.

As a newly engaged commercial traveller was about starting on a drumming trip from his place in Chicago, he suddenly turned to his employer, a grave old merchant, and inquired: "I say boss, what shall I do when I get out of soap?" "Soap?" said the old gentleman, "why, save your samples, and then you won't get out." "But I mean what shall I do when I get out of grease?" continued the young man. "Grease? grease?" pondered the old man, "why, you don't need any grease—you are not working for a lubricating estab—" "Oh, but you don't understand me," chimed in the youthful employee, rather embarrassed. "I mean what shall I do if I run out of spondulix—stamps—wealth?" "Spondulix? stamps? wealth?" echoed the mystified merchant, looking at the young fellow over his glasses, to see if he had gone crazy. "Yes, currency—greenbacks," exclaimed the drummer, "cash, money, you know?" A light seemed to dawn on the old gentleman's mind at this moment, for gazing upon the creature before him with a look of contempt and pity, he broke forth: "Young man, I rather guess you needn't go out, for I don't believe our class of customers could get along very well with you—they all speak English. Step up to the desk and that man there will settle with you." And that is the way the high-toned kid got bounced—all through the pernicious habit of slinging slang.

Which Shall I Take?

This is often a serious question with the invalid. He finds the market flooded with proprietary medicines, scores of which are recommended as certain cures for his peculiar ailment. He reads the papers, circulars, and almanacs, and finds each sustained by plausible arguments setting for its virtues and specific action. The recommendations are as strong for one as for another. The cures claimed to have been wrought by one are as wonderful as those claimed to have been wrought by another. In his perplexity and doubt, the sufferer is sometimes led to reject all. But it should be borne in mind that this condition of things is one that cannot be remedied. In a land where all are free, the good—the truly valuable—must come into competition with the vile and worthless, and must be brought to public notice by the same instrumentality, which is advertising. In such a case, perhaps the only absolute proof that a remedy is what it claims to be, is to try it. The "test of a pudding is the eating of it." "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good," is the apostolic injunction. There may however, be stronger presumtive evidence in favor of one remedy than there is in favor of another, and this should be allowed its due weight. A due regard to this may save a vast amount of experimenting and a useless outlay of money. As presumptive evidence in favor of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines, the Proprietor desires to say, that they are prepared by a new and scientific process by which the virtues of the crude plants and roots are extracted without the use of a particle of alcohol. Not a particle of this destroyer of our race enters into the composition of either his Golden Medical Discovery or Favorite Prescription. This consideration alone ought certainly to rank them high above the vile compounds saturated with alcohol, Jamaica rum, sour beer, or vinegar, which are everywhere offered for sale. Again, they are of uniform strength, and their virtues can never be impaired by age. They are also made from fresh herbs and roots, gathered in their appropriate season, when they are flush with medicinal properties. In support of these claims, the following testimony is offered;

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., NEWARK, N. J.

Dear Sir,—I have sold a great deal of your excellent remedies, and I prefer to sell them before others, because they give good satisfaction to those who use them. I hear such remarks as "Sage's Remedy completely cured me; it is a splendid thing;" or, "Pierce's Discovery is just what I wanted; I feel better than I ever did." One of our celebrated singers uses it for strengthening her voice, and says "there is nothing equals it;" and so I might give scores of remarks said about your preparations. A colored woman was using your Discovery, and after taking three bottles was completely cured. She, being in the store, said to me, "I don't want no doctors 'round me so long as I can get the Discovery; it beats all your doctors." And so I might go on.

I am, most respectfully yours,

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1871, and from the sale of the first year their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time traveller's came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE,—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and this Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and had to take to my bed, where I lay several days. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefitted by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can repeat my self cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several my friends and have obtained orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.
SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,
Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, quite unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must be a blessing to humanity, and wish you will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Reslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

PULMOCINE.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.

"YANKEE DOODLE."

Were the Centennial Exposition to be entirely unsupplied with music, the lack would almost be filled by placing Willard's picture, "Yankee Doodle," where it could meet the eye of every American visitor, for but a glance at it is needed to set all the fires of patriotism burning in one's veins, and to compel his footsteps to keep time to the music which he feels if he does not hear—for every line in the picture equals a drum tap, and every color thrills like the shrill martial note of the fife. The artist has seized a moment when all artificialities fail from a man's soul, as the cumbersome baggage falls from his shoulders,—in that supreme moment when he leads or is led into battle. The three main figures which have been sketched upon the canvass meet all the requirements of the situation, and are in keeping with the surroundings. Over them the clouds of smoke lower, dimming the red and blue of the flag which waves behind them and markes the line of the advancing column, where a few brave Continentals struggle up the perilous height. At their feet is a dismantled cannon, on the ruins of which a dead soldier lies, his peaceful sleep in sad contrast to the motion and action all about him.

But the picture itself lies in the center, where the trio of homespun musicians are furnishing, with all their might and power, that music which has been since "heard round the world," and whose shrill melody is so full of patriotism that it is, and always will be, the Grand National Tune of America—glorious, grand old Yankee Doodle! The old drummer who walks in the center, bare headed, grand in his fearlessness, with his coat thrown off and his back as straight as though the years were not piled so thick upon it, with one sleeve rolled up as though he had thrown down the spade to grasp the drumsticks, his white hair blown in the air and his eyes set clear and defiant as though he saw the danger but feared it not, with the sharp curves around his mouth drawn to a set determination which is not angry defiance, but heroic resistance—all these combine to make up that wonderful figure in history which no rags could degrade nor splendor make nobler—the Continental soldier! The face is rugged and hard, but in it one sees that heroism and endurance which made 1776 stand out, forever prominent, among the great years of history.

On the left of the old drummer is the fifer, whose calm, collected face wears a look as full of heroism, but of a far simpler and more patient kind, than that of the other. The man seems to have come there for one object—to blow his fife; and that he will do as well, here in the shower of bullets, as though at the porch of his cottage. His eyes are fixed toward the sky as tho' reading the notes of his music on the clouds. His step is even, and his face calm, and only the bloody handkerchief around his brow tells of the bullet that came so near, but spared him for the work in hand. His blue coat, buttoned to the chin, is neat and orderly, and he seems to have left all direction and guidance to his companion, so that he could pour his whole force and energy into the reed at his lips. And how he does blow! It seems almost as though one could hear the shrill notes, as he goes marching on over the broken cannon and dead soldier—raising "Yankee Doodle" above the clamor and noise of battle.

On the right of the old drummer marches a boy—hardly in his teens—as clean and sweet as though just kissed by his mother before the daily run to school. His drum keeps time to the music of the other, and his face is upturned to the old man—perhaps his graudfather—as though to question the route or the danger. But he never falters, and no shade of fear lurks in those open eyes, while the "rub-a-dub" of his little drum seems to sound as clear and distinct as the shrill notes of the fife or the heavier roll of the heavier drummer.

It is a picture worth seeing—in itself an embodiment of the hardships of the Revolution. Its conception is wonderful, and its execution a crown of honor to the painter. It is a story which tells itself at a glance, and has been told as truthfully and poetically as art could tell it. To have wrought so great a work, proclaims Willard as one on whom genius has placed her hand, and the city should be proud that he has made it his home. The critic, who views it merely as a work of art, may possibly find flaws in the execution, but the American who looks upon it and remembers Bunker Hill will recognize that he has found a man who could crown the Centennial year with a grand artistic triumph. "Yankee Doodle" has been glorified in art as it never was before.

There is much more that could be said with pleasure, but it is not needed. The picture itself will tell its own story, and is more eloquent than words. It will remain at Ryder's for a few days longer, where all can see it for themselves.—Cleveland Leader.

Mulligan vs. Blaine.

The democratic committee charged with the duty of in some way implicating Mr. Blaine in disreputable transactions with railroads or in railroad-bonds, has been electrified during the past week by the appearance as a witness of one Mr. Mulligan, treasurer of the Globe Theatre, of Boston, who took with him to Washington a lot of Mr. Blaine's private letters, which it is claimed by his enemies would ruin him if made public. These letters Mr. Blaine secured possession of at a private interview with Mulligan, and refuses to give up. Mulligan tells a story which sounds very much like a yarn of a cock and a bull, about Mr. Blaine's begging him (Mulligan) with tears in his eyes to spare him, and trying to buy him off with a consulship; this Mr. Blaine flatly denies. Mulligan further says he entrusted the letters to Mr. Blaine only on the latter's solemn promise to return them. Mr. Mulligan is said to be a bitterly-partisan democrat, and he is seemingly actuated by a fierce personal hatred of Mr. Blaine; yet all he has said may be true, in which case Mr. Blaine is in a bad way as a public man. And even if Mulligan should turn out to be a "swift witness" on the side of those who wish to kill off the Presidential candidate whom of all others the democrats evidently most fear as the republican nominee, Mr. Blaine owes it to his supporters, his party and himself to clear up everything in this instance as promptly, as cleary and as convincingly as he has in all previous assaults on his good name. Mr. Mulligan is vouched for by some of the Boston papers as the very soul of honor,—which he may possibly be, though we find it very hard to conceive of an "honorable" man even glancing at the private letters of another without permission, not to mention his stealing or otherwise surreptitiously possessing himself of them, and retaining them for years in his possession. Mr. Mulligan's "honor" must be about on a par with that of Maddox, the friend of the unlucky Fitzhugh, who, when the ex-doorkeeper did not give him and his friends the offices asked for, revenged himself by publishing the gushingly-boastful confidential letter which led to Fitzhugh's removal. Maddox convicted Fitzhugh of being a fool, but in doing it stamped himself an unprincipled scoundrel. Mulligan may be able to show that Mr. Blaine is not the honorable man we still consider him, but his first move in that direction—the production of private letters with which he had no business—knocks his own "honor" higher than a kite. An "honorable" letter-filcher! Pah!

News and Notes.

Edward Tatro, 18 years old, a workman for Charles Butler, a farmer of Highgate, Vt., on Friday night murdered Mrs. Butler by smashing her head with an axe.

For the first time in many years no logs are being sent down the Pemigewasset river.

A lad eight years of age, son of Mr. Chester Martin of Hinsdale, while learning to swim was drowned in a pond, May 25.

Philip Pray, 40 years old, was found dead in bed at Merrimack on Thursday, it is supposed from apoplexy.

I saw General Belknap in the Senate before it retired for private meditations, and thought him greatly changed. He is far from being emaciated or looking haggard, but has that look of tension and flabbiness that bears equal witness to mental wear and tear. Unfortunately for himself, he has been a handsome man (it is very hard for a pretty man to get on uncentangled in this world;) but in the storm of the last few weeks that beauty has vanished. The bright color, the golden locks, the important part, are all alike bleached out. His hair is rapidly turning, his eyes are baggy and overhang, his skin is gray. A gray look like blight envelops the man. I have seen it come over more than one in this city within the last few years. It is the look that turned Schuyler Colfax into parchment in the Credit Mobilier days; that came over the face of Oakes Ames. The whole story of the change in Belknap's fortunes seemed told in the flying hack that passed me the other morning on its way to the Capitol and impeachment. In it sat Belknap smoking a cigar, surrounded by his lawyers. It was a ragged-looking vehicle with an unkempt driver, and bore as little resemblance to the stately coach of the War Department devoted to its Secretary, as the distraught looking man inside bore to the lemon-gloved gentleman sitting up in self-conscious state beside a handsome woman driving through the West End.—Mary Clemmer, in Cincinnati Commercial.

Counsel for Lapage, the Langmaid murderer, will file exceptions at the law term of the Superior Court at the June term, which begins the sixth inst. They will probably not be argued till August.

The Boston Globe is very much troubled by these long names of benevolent and other societies, and suggests that they be abbreviated by making a word out of their initial letters. For example, it thinks that "Boston Young Men's Christian association" could be cut down to "Bymca." On this principle, the title the paper carries at the head of its columns, "The Daily and Weekly Globe," should be made to read "The Dawg."

Daniel Drew's curious testimony, which shows that he kept no books of account for his complicated stock transactions, makes it probable that this was one of his habits as a drover which he has kept up through life.

The renomination of Senator Anthony of Rhode Island insures him an uninterrupted term as Senator of 24 years—equal to that for which Mr. Sumner was elected and exceeding by two years that for which Mr. Wilson was elected. If he serves out his full term, his actual tenure will have been one year longer than that of Mr. Sumner, and six years longer than that of Mr. Wilson, the former of whom was removed from the Senate by death, and the latter by his elevation to the Vice Presidency.

Political.

The Springfield Republican's Boston man writes: In case of Conkling's nomination Butler will run in the Lowell district, but at present the coming man is Mr. Russell, of Lawrence, who was chosen delegate the other day, and who would like to go to Congress. He is a paper-maker, a friend of Gov. Rice, a man of wealth, liberal and popular in the use of it, and has few enemies. He would run better in the northern and western part of the district than any Lowell candidate, and would contest Lawrence with Mr. Tarbox. Dr. Ayer is wholly out of the question, even as an ally of any other candidate. His health has broken down, his mind is affected, and he has left the State for an indefinite time. Butler is waiting for a word, and is wholly undecided what to do except to oppose both Blaine and Bristow.

According to the Chicago Tribune, the scarcity of Bristow men in the Illinois delegation is due to the "Don" Cameron appointment. The editor, who has been an earnest advocate of Mr. Bristow, and was himself an unsuccessful candidate for delegate at large, says: "Had the Illinois convention been held ten days ago there is every reason to believe that the delegation to Cincinnati would have been pretty evenly divided between Blaine and Bristow. But the reason for the sudden unanimity in favor of Blaine is to be traced directly to the appointment of Don Cameron as Secretary of War. That appointment has been interpreted and accepted in the West as an intimation of an agreement that the Pennsylvania delegation shall be transferred to Conkling; and in order to combat this new element of strength in Conkling's behalf, Illinois resolved to unite on one candidate, and selected the one who, in the judgment of the convention, would start out at Cincinnati with the greatest strength as opposed to Conkling. We are very much mistaken if several other Western States have not been influenced in much the same way, and if all the Western delegates do not join Illinois in uniting solidly on Blaine as the surest means of defeating the nomination of Conkling. It is an unfortunate turn of affairs for Mr. Bristow's friends, but they will not complain if it shall become necessary to drop Bristow in order that Conkling shall not be nominated."

An Ohican writes: Next to our own true Governor, we prefer Blaine for President. It is truly pitiful if we have come to that state that a dozen years of public life, brilliant and unsullied, unfit a man for the Presidential chair. It sounds somewhat "ringy" to hear much of this patronizing talk over the "availability" of some obscure candidates. We like Bristow, but we would think more of him if he would call off some of the scoundrels that go forth ostensibly in his service.

A delegate to the Cincinnati convention writes to the New York Times that it is doubtful if Ex-Gov. Straw will attend the convention; that Mr. Burns' first choice is Blaine; and that it is not impossible that the vote of the State will be cast unanimously for Mr. Blaine under certain contingencies. We presume this means that such might be the action of the delegation should Mr. Blaine clear himself completely from the suspicions cast upon him by his enemies. There are certain contingencies in which New Hampshire's vote might go to Bristow.

Mulligan is a much more brilliant sensationalist in his way than Harney, and it is to be hoped for his own sake, if not for Mr. Blaine's, that he may turn out to have rather more character. But on the face of it common fairness requires us to say that his tale is rather highly colored, and that people who, having been private secretaries, flower out into public accusers, must not expect to be received with open arms by honorable men, however sure they may be of being received with open mouths by the multitude.—N. Y. World.

Mr. Tilden's friends are going to make a move in the St. Louis convention to repeal the two-thirds rule. This will be their first move. Two weeks ago they felt that Tilden could be nominated under the two-thirds rule, but they have become alarmed at his decline in strength during the last ten days, but they feel assured of a majority in the convention, and with the rule repealed they consider Mr. Tilden's nomination a foregone conclusion.

The "Unknown" has been discovered. His name is O. Gotoel—at least that name seemed to be the choice of a majority of the passengers on an Iowa railroad the other day when an ardent republican went through the train for the purpose of taking a vote.

By means of postal-cards, the New York Weekly Witness has been making a quiet canvass of its own subscribers. Of 1,399 heard from, 677 are for Bristow, 417 for Blaine, 48 for Hayes, 44 for Tilden, 33 for Adams, 26 for Conkling, 24 for Wheeler, 19 for Morton, and the rest scattering. For Vice President, Hayes has 367, Bristow 286, Blaine 260, Hartranft and Wheeler 23 each.

Montgomery Blair was first in the field for Tilden. The refusal of the Maryland Convention to make him a delegate, either at large or from his district, will probably be taken as an emphatic declaration that Maryland is not for Tilden.

With the proneness of mankind to believe only what they wish true, it will be seen how strong a support is behind Mr. Blaine, no matter what happens. If they give him up, it will be with the most profound reluctance and regret. The situation is at present a little foggy, but a few days may clear the atmosphere. Certainly it is a crisis for the supporters of Mr. Blaine, and they must weigh carefully, not only the charges against him, but the effect of their reiteration in a canvass.—Worcester Gazette.

The Massachusetts delegates to the republican National Convention rendezvous at Cincinnati, the 12th, two days before the convention assembles.

The majority in the Cincinnati convention is 379. Blaine has 302, Morton 130, Bristow 126, Conkling 87, Hartranft 58, Hayes 49. These are New York Tribune figures.

Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, heads the Kentucky delegation to St. Louis.

"Election Day" at Concord.

The ceremonies of "election day" at Concord on the 8th inst., will probably be of a more imposing character than for many years, recalling old-time enthusiasm. Adjutant General Ira Cross, Manchester, has made arrangements with the following military organizations to attend: Ameskeag Veterans, Manchester, Captain A. C. Wallace, will do escort duty to Governor Cheney; Peterboro' Cavalry, Captain D. M. White; Monadnock Rangers, Peterboro', Captain John D. Diamond; Lyndeborough Artillery, Captain C. H. Holt; Merrimac Guards, Chichester, Captain True Sanborn; Portsmouth, Heavy Artillery, Captain Frank Williams; Weston Guards, Pittsfield, Captain Joseph A. Jacob: Ashland Guards, Section C, Light Artillery, Hancock, Lieutenant Jacquith; Portsmouth Guards, Captain Jacob H. Haddock; Lincoln Rifles, Milford, Captain John W. Crosby; Messer Rifles, New London, Captain William A. Messer. It is probable that the Head Guards, Captain George M. Lane; the Straw Rifles, Captain C. M. Wise; the Haines Rifles, Captain J. S. Everett; the Sheridan Guards, Captain F. A. Devine; First Light Battery, Section B, Captain S. S. Piper, and the Manchester High School Cadets, Captain F. N. Chellis, all of Manchester, will attend. The Governor's staff will be present in uniform and mounted. The militia will be under the command of Colonel J. M. Clough of the Second Regiment, assisted by Colonel J. J. Dillon of Manchester. Brigadier-General J. R. Patterson of Concord will be chief marshal.

HAVING NOTICED

The statements in the city papers, that certain persons have been injured by eating pressed corned beef put up in Chicago, and feeling that if not explained these facts will result in injury where it does not belong, and as after a thorough investigation we find that the beef complained of is in every instance beef packed in rolls and enclosed in tin foil by parties unknown to us, and not at all similar to canned beef: therefore we, the undersigned, in simple justice to the public and to the reliable firm that pack the canned article, wish to state that we have for a long time sold Pressed CANNED Corned Beef and Beef Tongues packed in 2, 4, 6 and 14 ℔ cans, by Messrs. Libby, McNeil & Libby of Chicago, and we cheerfully recommend this brand of goods as a safe, nutritious and economical article of food.

Jottings.

At Dover Point, Friday evening, the body of a young man apparently about twenty years of age, clothed with two woolen shirts, black pants, and coat and vest of "mixed" goods, nearly gray, was found in the water. In the pockets a photograph of a young lady and $1.75 in money were found. He was about five feet high and would weigh about 135 lbs.

The Mayor and committee on fire department have ordered one of the Gould steam fire engines of the makers at Burlington, Vermont. It is to be delivered by July 5th, and will then be thoroughly tested, and if the working powers and specifications are found all that are promised, the steamer will be accepted. It is to be of the second class, having all the capacity of the fine steamer Kearsarge, and built more for work than show. It has been decided to name the steamer "Moses H. Goodrich, No. 4."

"The types" made a terrible blunder in Saturday's CHRONICLE. Under the head "Aldermanic" it was stated that "a practice game of base ball will be played at the Plains, between two picked nines, this afternoon." We sincerely hope that our exchanges will not from this blunder gather the ruinous impression that our City Fathers are accustomed, as part of their official business, to appoint times and places for batting miniature cannon-balls to hit each other in the stomach, or that those grave and reverend rulers are often to be seen scooting around the bases to the admiring chorus of "Hi! yah!" from the small boys. Such is not the fact at all. Were they to start out to play a game the play would probably end with the first whack any one made at the ball; all the rest of the day would be spent in discussing whether the hit at the ball could or could not legally be called a "strike."

REMINISCENCES OF THE WAR.

The account which we recently published of the escape of Capt. Porter from Libby Prison reminds us that there are quite a number of veterans who long since returned to the peaceful pursuits of civil life, whose histories if written out would furnish material of greater interest than the most exciting novels of the day. Among these men are some who endured the horrors of Libby, Andersonville and other prison pens.

Everybody in Portsmouth knows "Tom" Entwistle, a jolly and quick-witted man on the sunny side of forty years, who for a long time was an Assistant Marshal of the police force, and whose genial face and happy disposition made him a favorite in camp and prison as well as at home. Mr. Entwistle enlisted in Co. D., 3d Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers, June 22, 1861, and had a checkered experience which finally brought him within the stockades of the South, where thousands of Union prisoners perished of starvation. On the 18th of May, 1864, the 3d Regiment being in Gen. Gilmore's division of Gen. Butler's army, Mr. Entwistle was taken prisoner in front of Fort Darling on the James River, Virginia, Beauregard's army having flanked the division. Finding the position they held untenable, the Union army retreated and Mr. Entwistle was gobbled up by the rebel infantry while limping off the field, having received a wound in the leg by a spent ball. In a few hours, he was introduced to the beauties of the far-famed Libby prison in Richmond. The prison rations at that time consisted of a half loaf of brown bread and a small piece of bacon for each man, every twenty-four hours—better fare than he obtained elsewhere while a prisoner.

The brown bread and bacon luxury lasted but three weeks, however, and then with a detachment of fellow prisoners he was sent to the Andersonville stockade, the scene of horror over which Wirz had command. This stockade was about twenty-five acres in size enclosed by a fence of slabs, there being no roof to it. Here thousands of prisoners were turned in like as many cattle. A brook some eight feet wide ran through this stockade from the rebel camp, and the sinks, cook-houses and privies of the rebel guard emptied into it above the stockade, poisoning the only water that the Union prisoners had to drink. The rations at Andersonville were one pint of corn meal, ground with the cob, to each man every twenty-four hours, a teaspoonful of salt every two days, and a small piece of hard pine wood with which to cook the meal with the water from the foul brook. After two or three months of this kind of living a spring broke out a few feet from the stockade. The prisoners obtained permission of Capt. Wirz to construct a spout of two boards to run the water inside the deadline. The men would regularly fall in line to take their turn to secure a drink of this pure water, there being nearly all the time while daylight lasted 1500 men waiting for their turn.

The prisoners protected themselves from the weather by burrowing in the ground, digging holes several feet deep and then running shafts horizontally. These they covered with boughs of trees obtained when details of prisoners were made to get the regular supply of wood. Many were the schemes planned for escape by tunnelling, the dirt removed being carried off to some corner of the stockade and concealed by the handful. When prisoners succeeded in tunnelling beyond the rebel guard and escaped all rations were stopped until starvation forced some one to reveal the names of the missing. The deaths averaged from 150 to 175 per diem, but the stockade was kept filled by new arrivals, there being inside at one time between 35,000 and 37,000, hundreds of them entirely naked. The sufferings of these men, Mr. Entwistle describes with a vividness that shocks the hearer. Many of the particulars are too revolting for publication. Among other things he states that food was eaten over and over again, the stomach refusing to digest it. The half-starved prisoners would in some cases eat the scabs from sores on their bodies. Corn meal, raw, was a great luxury.

Reports of Gen. Sherman's approach were eager topics of conversation, and kept up a spark of hope among the famishing thousands. Each corner of the stockade had a battery mounted on it. The members of the rebel guard had furloughs offered them for thirty days for each prisoner shot dead outside the dead-line. Prisoners partially deranged and dreading life more than death would walk beyond the line seeking relief by death. Hundreds perished in this manner. When victims were not plenty, the guard would throw a piece of bread just outside the line, the hungry men would rush for it, and the guard would fire at them, killing one or more and wounding others. During Mr. Entwistle's confinement he received a pair of pants and a government shirt. His feet were naked and swollen until, to use his own expression, he was unable to "distinguish them from Bunker Hill monument." Mr. Entwistle and five others secretly dug a tunnel hoping to escape, and had burrowed about one hundred feet when orders came to transfer 13,000 prisoners from Andersonville to Florence, South Carolina. John Mahoney of the Fourth New Hampshire Regiment, Hugh McGrouty of the Third, and a German member of the Sixteenth Connecticut band were among the disappointed tunnel diggers.

The stockade at Florence covered about six acres. The prisoners were landed from the cars in an open field, under guard, in a low state of health, the weather being very warm. When darkness came on, the stockade was not ready for occupancy, and Entwistle, Mahoney and McGrouty escaped without the knowledge of the guard. They travelled about twenty miles and were recaptured by a detachment of cavalry, which followed them, dogs being used for the trail. The discouraged prisoners were returned to the stockade, but went unpunished, the rebels being too busy just then, as Gen. Sherman was in the neighborhood. They remained at Florence some two or three months, when they were taken toward Wilmington. While nearing the city, with about seventy five others, Entwistle, the German and McGrouty jumped from the train while it was going about two miles an hour. The railway was in poor condition and had been used so much that greater speed would have been dangerous. The guard had been on duty several days and nights without sleep, and thought it best not to stop the train, fearing a general escape and attack; and had a stoppage been made it would have been difficult to start the train on the curve it was passing over. The guard contented themselves with shooting into the fugitives, one volley wounding six or seven. Mr. Entwistle and his two companions kept together for three nights in the swamps and two of them finally reached Wilmington without opposition, McGrouty having been left to die fifteen miles from the city, his companions being too exhausted to carry him. While hiding in the outskirts of the city, a batch of prisoners passed along the road, among whom was McGrouty, who had been recaptured. His life was saved by the good fortune which led the rebel detachment to take him along with the other prisoners to Wilmington. During their tour through the forests they were seen once by a man and two old ladies, but escaped while the man was going to a house for a gun to shoot them. He dared not follow them and they passed unmolested.

Entwistle and the German crawled under a barn and became close companions with two fat hogs. Soon after, a negro went to feed them and the escaped prisoners hid from him. After he left they drove the hogs from the swill, and ate from it a better meal than they had discussed since they had been in rebel hands. The next day they made themselves known to the negro when he fed the hogs, and asked him for food. He turned pallid, but on recovery from his fright promised to get them something to eat. He said Wilmington was to be evacuated and burned, but advised them to remain concealed, as there were about one hundred soldiers in the city, probably in the houses, who would shoot them on sight, having orders to shoot any "Yank" seen about the place. With an injunction "For God's sake" to keep out of sight he left them. He returned during the day with a warm loaf of corn bread. They had water enough—and never enjoyed a meal better. On the next day, the rebels evacuated Wilmington, which surrendered to our troops, Gen. Terry having reduced Fort Fisher. The rebel soldiers were continually passing the barn and some entered it. The hidden men expected capture, but were safely concealed. The negro once more appeared and reported that "the rebels am all gone and the Union people's taken the place." They emerged from their hiding place without bidding farewell to their porcine companions, whom they never met in life again. A company of federal cavalry was met riding through the streets. They were taken in charge and were soon among friends. The first regiment they saw was the Third New Hampshire Regiment, to which Mr. Entwistle's company was attached when captured ten months before. The Tenth Corps had been ordered to Fort Fisher during the siege, and took possession of Wilmington, receiving their comrade Entwistle with cheers. Tom felt good, half forgot his sorrowful captivity and joined in the jubilee with the boys, who greeted him "as one risen from the dead." He was properly clothed and sent to Camp Parole. On the following day, the rebels paroled a large number of prisoners, among whom was McGrouty. Before leaving Wilmington, Entwistle went back to the barn to show the boys his hiding place, and found the hogs killed, dressed and roasting for the benefit of the troops. He thinks the 22d of February, 1865, the day he found his regiment, the happiest on record.

The Supply Depot of the Body.

The stomach is the grand supply depot of the body, upon which it draws for all the elements needed in the composition of bone, muscle, brain and blood. The liver is an important auxiliary of this mighty organ, and the two are most intimately connected. Nothing so certainly ensures the harmonious action of these viscera, and so completely removes the disorders which simultaneously affect both, as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the most popular American specific for all complaints to which the stomach, liver and bowels are subject, and the foremost tonic on this side of the Atlantic. Indigestion, costiveness, inactivity and congestion of the liver, poverty of the blood, debility of the bladder and kidneys, and many other ailments produced by or causing weakness, are entirely removed by its use.

Stump speakers do not always tell the truth; they would tell it exactly if they said that Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam is the best remedy in the world for hoarseness, coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having some into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Snapper Fishing in Florida.

The "red snapper" of the Florida reefs has his home about twenty miles directly out to sea from the mouth of St. John's River. He bites greedily, is full of game, and is esteemed of delicious flavor. A correspondent of the Forest and Stream thus describes a day's sport: "After throwing out a buoy to mark the place, the fishermen baited their hooks and cast them out, and it was at this stage of the proceeding that I, who had not stirred from the cabin, heard a frantic yell of "Snapper! Snapper!" accompanied by a scampering on deck as if bedlam was broken loose. The noise continued, the yells grew more frequent and were of a different character, for mingled with the cries of "Snapper," I now heard "Blackfish! shark!" My sporting instinct was aroused, and in spite of myself I staggered to my feet, and grasping my line, frantically I gained the deck. Such a sight! The deck was strewn with blackfish, and five or six large snappers, while over the side leaned five and thirty excited men, some pulling in, some throwing out, and all yelling like madmen. I forgot that I was sick. It was a triumph of mind over matter; baiting my hook, I quickly lowered my line. It hardly touched the bottom before I felt a pull that nearly pulled me over. I responded with right good will, and oh! ye ghost of Isaac Walton, was it a fish? I had never in my limited experience had anything hooked to a line to compare to it. I pulled, he pulled, sometimes he gained, and then with a mighty effort I would bring him in. The deck resounded with encouraging shouts. Finally he appeared in sight, four or five fathoms deep in the clear blue water, like a ghost being drawn out of the depths of the sea. I soon had him to the surface, and grasping my line I had him aboard. What a beauty? Talk about sport. I never experienced such a feeling of triumph, as when out of sight of land I landed that snapper. Congratulations poured in, for he was the largest caught that day, and weighed full forty pounds. I returned to the sport, and though I hooked another snapper, I did not land him, but I caught a noble string of blackfish, sometimes two at a time. We only could stay on the bank 45 minutes, for we had to get back in order to cross the bar at high tide. But in that time were caught twenty snappers, weighing in the aggregate 600 pounds, and over two hundred and fifty blackfish, which weighed from three-quarters to one and a quarter pounds each."

— Queer things are occasionally to be seen in Paris, but a queerer sight than that which I witnessed, this morning, on the Rue de la Paix, it has rarely, if ever, been my lot to behold. In taking my morning walk, I met a large white poodle, shaved and clipped lion-fashion, who wore a round, black velvet cap, coquettishly placed on the side of his curly head. In his mouth he carried a basket, to the handle of which a small ecru silk parasol had been adroitly attached in such a manner that in carrying the basket the dog held the parasol over his head, and so shaded himself from the rays of the sun. It is impossible to describe the gravity and aplomb of his dogship, nor the immense amusement of the street boys and he passers-by at this novel spectacle.—Paris. Cor.

Which Shall I Take?

This is often a serious question with the invalid. He finds the market flooded with proprietary medicines, scores of which are recommended as certain cures for his peculiar ailment. He reads the papers, circulars, and almanacs, and finds each sustained by plausible arguments setting for its virtues and specific action. The recommendations are as strong for one as for another. The cures claimed to have been wrought by one are as wonderful as those claimed to have been wrought by another. In this perplexity and doubt, the sufferer is sometimes led to reject all. But it should be borne in mind that this condition of things is one that cannot be remedied. In a land where all are free, the good—the truly valuable—must come into competition with the vile and worthless, and must be brought to public notice by the same instrumentality, which is advertising. In such a case, perhaps the only absolute guide to find a remedy is what it claims to be, is to try it. The "test of a pudding is the eating of it." "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good," is the apostolic injunction. There may however, be stronger presumptive evidence in favor of one remedy than there is in favor of another, and this should be allowed its due weight. A due regard to this may save a vast amount of experimenting and a useless outlay of money. As presumptive evidence in favor of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines, the Proprietor desires to say, that they are prepared by a new and scientific process by which the virtues of the crude plants and roots are extracted without the use of a particle of alcohol. Not a particle of this destroyer of our race enters into the composition of either his Golden Medical Discovery or Favorite Prescription. This consideration alone ought certainly to rank them high above the vile compounds saturated with alcohol, Jamaica rum, sour beer, or vinegar, which are everywhere offered for sale. Again, they are of uniform strength, and their virtues can never be impaired by age. They are also made from fresh herbs and roots, gathered in their appropriate season, when they are flush with medicinal properties. In support of these claims, the following testimony is offered;

R. V. PIERCE, M.D., NEWARK, N. J.

Dear Sir,—I have sold a great deal of your excellent remedies, and I prefer to sell them before others, because they give good satisfaction to those who use them. I hear such remarks as "Sage's Remedy completely cured me; it is a splendid thing;" or, "Pierce's Discovery is just what I wanted; I feel better than I ever did." One of our celebrated singers uses it for strengthening her voice, and says "there is nothing equals it;" and so I might give scores of remarks said about your preparations. A colored woman was using your Discovery, and after taking three bottles was completely cured. She, being in the store, said to me, "I don't want no doctors 'round me so long as I can get the Discovery; it beats all your doctors." And so I might go on.

I am, most respectfully yours,
ATHA B. CROOKS.

DR. QUAIN'S
MAGIC
CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time could not do my work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, but finally took my book, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefitted by the first dose, and after taking one box I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, ME., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried almost everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaint, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for one package of your Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be glad to get them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

— AND

Diphtheria,

DATE SLIPS,

Asthma, etc.,

With a Large Assortment of Display Type,

— USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

ARMSTRONG'S

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.

Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.

BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.

Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farms in the butter counties around Philadelphia.

In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, green feed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

A REJECTED ROSEBUD.

The dearest little rosebud of a girl, with cheeks where a pink flush came and went, and blue eyes, with long, golden brown lashes, and hair that waved without the aid of pins and irons. I always thought her name was the most suitable that could have been chosen for her, though the only wonder is that old Father Budd did not name his only daughter Deborah, or Rebecca, or Sarah Jane.

Rosanna had fortunately been her father's grandmother's name, however, and so came a Rose Budd into the world, for Mrs. Budd had made the Anna a middle name instead of part of the first, and dropped it.

When I began to like Rose Budd so much that I seriously thought of proposing to her, Hiram Roper liked her too. He was five years older than I; a plain man of twenty-nine, faint scars on his face, and a bald spot on the middle of his head. A poor man, studying medicine late in life, because he had not been able to study in his youth, only hoping for his diploma in a year, with the practice all in the future; and I at twenty-four, had the Mosswood estate for my own, and money enough to live on comfortably. There could be no comparison drawn between us, I loudly hoped, that would not be favorable to me; and I coolly, though politely, took my place before him, and cut him out on all occasions with Rosebud. I, rich, young and handsome, and, as I supposed, elegantly dressed; he, plain, poor and shabby, looking ten years older than he really was. What chance had he against me?

And so he slipped quietly into the background, and I made love to Rosebud, and one day kissed her on the cheek, and told her life would not be worth having to me if I could not win her; and she said nothing, but outblushed all the roses, and let me kiss her again. After that we walked through the village, and friends teased me, and the other beaux dropped away, and one day I gave her a ring to wear on her left hand fore finger.

Two weeks from that day I went to London on business. I intended to stay a week, but I was so successful that I remained longer; finally I went into business in the city, and began to know people. I visited at the houses of wealthy merchants, and met their wives and daughters, and by degrees began to understand that, though my Rosebud was very fair and sweet, she was not a hot-house flower. In other words, her dress was not like the dress of a fashionable belle; her manners were homespun, her education poor. She was very good—excessively good, but not an elegant lady. Then too, she sent me notes in big envelopes, and used little "i's" for the personal pronoun.

And Father Budd, with his uncouth coats and wonderful hats, and long straggling beard and hair, was not the sort of father-in-law that I should admire; and there was Miss Hannover. Perhaps that fact was the most powerful one of all the workings of my disenchantment; for Miss Hannover was beautiful, all millinery; and Papa Hannever was called Prince Hannover by his friends, and had his dinner table set for forty every day, and wore a fortune in diamonds on his bosom, and made friends wherever he went by his lavish gifts, and was the greatest stock gambler in London.

Papa Hannover had smiled on me, and counselled me how to invest, and had dined me with his daily forty friends, and had said, "Violette, love, this is Mr. Markham, one of those country gentlemen of whom we are trying to make city men."

And Violette had smiled radiantly upon me.

Since then how many tete-a-tetes had I not had with her—how many rides? I was learning to dance with her, and I had forgotten to write to Rosebud for two weeks. Then came an anxious little note on thin blue paper, beginning thus:

Dear Henry,—I take my pen in hand much troubled in my mind regarding you I know you would write if you was not sick—O, Henry, if you are sick do tellygraph and let father come up and see you. Henry i will not write any more until i hear from you—I am sore troubled in my mind. We are all well and in the hopes that you will enjoy the same blessings i remain

Yours truly,

Rose Budd.

P. S.—Do let pa come if you are sick. I am so troubled in my mind.

I hastened to reply, "the awful dread of Mr. Budd's fatherly care hanging over me, so to speak, by a single hair. I wrote to Rose, but how? I shall not copy that cowardly letter here. When it was in the box I did try to fish it out again, but it was too late. It had gone, and its determination, "Thanks, Miss Budd, for your friendly anxiety concerning my health; I am sure Mr. Budd does not share it," was perhaps the worst of all the lines by which I told her, not in frank, honest words, but in a manner that no woman could fail to understand, that I did not choose to remember that we were betrothed.

After that no more letters in yellow envelopes came to trouble me, and I paid attention to Miss Hannover, and invested my money according to Hannover's advice. And days and weeks and months rolled by, and if a thought of my little Rosebud, fading because the sunlight of my love was withdrawn from it, crossed my mind, I drove it away with a sigh. I could not help it, I said, it was fate. Fate meant me for Miss Hannover, for Violette, and we had line—that was all. No, not quite all; one letter did come after that, and it was from Rosebud. It was a little, pathetic, reproachful, yet forgiving letter, telling me that I had broken her heart, and that she was very, very sorry, but that she would try to live and be good, and not let anybody know how I had made her suffer. I was very, very sorry, too, that I had made her suffer, but I was married to Violette, and I was very happy, and I was sure she would be happy with Hiram Roper, who was a good man, and would make a good husband, and I was sure I was glad that I had not married a country girl, who would be miserable in London society, and who would be ashamed of her husband because he was a gentleman of fashion and she was a country bumpkin.

day—I remember it was the day after a splendid ball, and I called on Violette, whose escort I had been the night before—one day I made this latter statement to Violette Hannover, and she, having heard it, bestowed on me her most aristocratic stare, and asked me if I did not know she had been engaged to Mr. Twentyplum for six long months.

"And shall be married next week, Mr. Markham," added she. "So you see you must be mistaken about fate."

"And you have only been flirting with me?" I said bitterly. "Do you know that you gave me reason to hope everything from you?"

"I know it is time for me to dress for a drive," she said. "So you must say good afternoon; and don't look so ridiculously tragic, Mr. Markham. I hate scenes."

And I felt that I deserved it all, as I went for the last time down the steps of the Hannover mansion.

Mr. Blaine's Vindication.

Mr. Blaine took the floor on a priviledged question, Monday, and read to the House all the letters taken from Mulligan. He denounced the one-sided conduct of the rebel sub-committee, and declared that as long ago as Thursday of last week, the chairman had received a telegram from Josiah Caldwell exonerating him from all blame. This statement was greeted by thunders of applause on the floor and in the galleries. Mr. Blaine then moved that the committee be instructed to report the telegram referred to, and the chairman arose to speak.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1.

A profound sensation has resulted from the arraignment of Speaker Kerr for alleged corrupt practices. Notwithstanding the gravity of the charge, the directness of Harney's testimony and the abundant provocation given republicans during the session to desire an opportunity for revenge, I have yet to find the first prominent man of that party who has not expressed a feeling of sympathy for the democratic Speaker, and a determination to give him the benefit of every doubt. Some statements made by Mr. Kerr, seemingly inconsistent with evidence furnished by the records of War Department, and his action in going out of his own State, to the ranks of his political opponents, to select a beneficiary of his official favors, equally inconsistent with his know character as an uncompromising partisan, constitute the only bar to a verdict of acquittal by republicans generally. The disposition manifested by them in this case is in marked contrast to that shown in cases of accused republicans, when the testimony of the most detestable class of dead beats, blackmailers and criminals has been used without scruple for the destruction of every one known to be inimical to the designs of their party to restore this country to its ante bellum status as far as possible.

Mr. Blaine just now appears to be the focus for all the mud balls hurled by hands rendered nervous and inaccurate by the incessant efforts made to discredit that gentleman with the intelligent and exacting masses of the American people, who make and unmake Presidents at their pleasure and good will. It is a noticeable fact that just in proportion as any republican aspirant for the Cincinnati nomination has acquired prominence as a probably successful candidate, these unscrupulous efforts have been centred against him with a corresponding relief to other candidates who have apparently fallen behind in the race. And the fact is patent to even the wayfaring man that this is the last desperate resort of rebel hatred, aided and abetted by the personal enemies of Mr. Blaine, to break him down and defeat his (now probable) nomination at Cincinnati.

There is no evidence of an accommodation of the differences between the ex-Confederate House and the republican Senate on the appropriation bills. The conference committee on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill affects nothing more than to bring out more prominently the apparently irreconcilable character of their views; and the appropriations contemplated by the legislative, executive and judicial bill appear quite as hopeless of availability. The indecent haste with which the swindle involved in the river and harbor appropriation bill was rushed through the House by the democrats, and their profligate waste of public money in bringing to this city hodrs of disreputable witnesses from our farthest frontier for partizan purposes which everyone understands or ought to, is a striking dommentary on the sweeping reductions proposed in the two bills first mentioned, professedly in the interests of economy.

The affirmative decision of the Senate relative to its jurisdiction in the Belknap matter produced no excitement outside of official circles. It throws wide open the door to partisan malice, but may have a deterring effect upon future officials in the hour of temptation. A strong move is being made to defer further action in the matter till next December, so that the more pressing legislation may be proceded with. It is generally believed that the trial will consume many weeks, as defendent's able counsel will stubbornly fight for every advantage. The trial of a Cabinet officer before the Senate and arraignment of a Beecher before a court only rarely occur. And it is believed that Belknap's lawyers will make as much of the opportunity as did the opposing counsel in the famous Brooklyn case.

Fitzhugh is a disagreeable subject of conversation with his party friends: and his every move is watched by them with grave apprehensions, lest he make good his threat to reveal what he knows of democratic "true inwardness."

Beneath the unruffled exterior of the friends of the several candidates for the St. Louis nomination, is much heart burning. It occasionally breaks out to the great edification of republicans who "laugh at their calamities and mock when their fear cometh." Tilden is openly charged with buying up entire State delegations, as in Missouri. This is regarded as quite significant, coming from democratic sources,—particularly so when it is remembered that he is to be nominated as the great "reform" candidate who commends himself to the suffrages of all honest men. It must be soothing to the republican deserters who assembled in New York a few days ago and declared their willingness to support Mr. Tilden because of his reform record. The "auction sale" of the Connecticut Senatorship, a few weeks ago, must also be very reassuring to those who contemplate supporting the democratic nominee because of his "reform" intentions. And lastly it would be the most unique spectacle to see a reform President go into the White House through the debauchery and corruption wrought by his (the reformer's) own money.

A more elaborate and general observance of "decoration day" occurred here on the 30th ult., than ever before. Every one seemed to enter into the spirit of the occasion with greater enthusiasm and with a deeper sense of gratitude and love to there who slept in the graves beautified by many garlands of flowers placed there by loving hands. Somehow the presence of our Centennial year added a new interest to the occasion and invested the custom with more hallowed purposes than usual.

KNOX.

Political.

The democratic papers are beginning to smell mice. The Boston Post's Washington dispatch says: The more Blaine's actions and declarations and the testimony in his investigation are considered and discussed the more singular and incomprehensible does the whole case appear. The testimony thus far goes to prove that Mr. Blaine did not invest in any of the Northern Pacific ventures, and the statements of all who have read the now famous letters corroborate his assertion that they contain nothing reflecting upon his integrity. * * * * * There is a growing opinion here that all this hullabaloo about the letters which Blaine and all who have read them declare harmless is only Blaine's latest trick. A prominent political friend and worker of his gave it to-day as a theory which he had brought out that Blaine believes the sympathies of the people are with him in his refusal to give up private letters, that when he has sufficiently played upon sympathy he will read the letters in Congress and publish them to the world, and that their innocence will be a reactionary furore in his favor just in time to secure him the Cincinnati nomination.

The Memphis Avalanche will not support Tilden if nominated.

When Speaker Kerr is charged with selling a cadetship, he is, the New York World says, "a little vexed at such a charge, but has such a contempt for it, as do men of all parties, that he does not even care to dignify the falsehood by talking about it to any one." Were the Speaker a republican the World and all the other democratic papers would have regarded his vexation and contempt as clear evidence—a virtual confession, in fact—of his guilt. But as it turns out Mr. Kerr does not regard the charge as being too contemptible to be noticed; he is fighting it and the proofs of it with all the means in his power.

And as for Blaine and all the rest of the candidates, let us have it understood once for all that no man can be President of the United States who is not ready to have published all his correspondence, foreign and domestic, social and political, sentimental and financial, from the day he learned his pot-hooks. All the anti-Blaine editors are willing to do this, and not to keep back their applications for railroad passes even. N. Y. Tribune.

The difference in the treatment of Speaker Kerr and Secretary Robeson by the democratic "drag-net" fishermen, shows the animus of their work. How tenderly Mr. Kerr has been treated. Clymer even waited for two hours while the inculpated Speaker consulted his friends as to his defence, and both accusation and defence were published together. How different the secret manipulations against Robeson, whose repeated demands for an open investigation and a chance for self-defence are ignored. Out upon such hypocresy! In the one case an attempt is made to shield the accused, and in the other to prove him guilty without even a hearing.—Saratoga Journal.

The friends of Blaine are likely to go to Cincinnati with a most intimate knowledge of his political history. No delegate can rise in his place and honestly ask for any information about him.

Speaker Kerr's counsel, in cross-examining Harney, is said by a Boston Journal correspondent to have made it "the grossest and most brutal and most indecent abuse of a witness ever witnessed" in Washington. The vilest questions were suggested to the lawyer by prominent democrats, but the witness was unshaken. That style of defence will not do Mr. Kerr's case much good. Democratic employes of the House folding-room hooted at and insulted Harney when he left the committee room.

Tom Ewing, of Ohio, thinks Hancock is coming forward rapidly.

There are hints in the Massachusetts journals indicating a probability that Professor Seelye will be the next Prohibition candidate for Governor.

The "Mulligan guards marched, marched away" with ex-Speaker Blaine's private letters. It was a piece of confiscation entirely repugnant to civilized warfare. A prominent gentleman stated yesterday that had they been his private letters he would have followed the thief to the uttermost ends of the earth and taken them by force, even though he lost the Presidency. Certainly. "God helps him who helps himself."—Washington Republican.

The Springfield Republican thinks that the Cameron influence is as likely to go to Bristow as to anybody else.

There is an old proverb that should encourage Mr. Blaine and his friends: "The largest clubs are always found under the best apple trees." He is assailed as the foremost candidate at Cincinnati. Men do not go out with swords and staves to hunt gnats. He is recognized as a strong, shrewd and able man, and is feared correspondingly as a representative of party and partisan strength. It is not the first time that a conspiracy has been set on foot to break down a political opponent in this very way, the time being chosen at a period sufficient to spread far and wide the assault, yet not enough to allow time for full vindication.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The republicans of Florida have renominated Gov. Stearns, and have chosen eight delegates to the Cincinnati convention—seven for Blaine and one for Conkling.

A dispatch to the New York World says Saturday's testimony is strongly corroborative of Blaine's assertion that he did not himself invest in or own Northern Pacific stock.

Spain inaugurates her policy of religious toleration by summarily closing all the Protestant schools at the request of the priestly party. It will not take much "toleration" of that kind to stir up another revolution. It seems that Spain can never learn wisdom.

The committee of the New York City Bar Association, appointed to investigate the charges against Charles O'Conor in relation to his professional conduct in the Forrest case, report that on a full hearing of the evidence they "unanimously pronounce the charges without foundation."

MARBLE WORK,

I would respectfully invite the people of Portsmouth and vicinity, who have lost relatives or friends, or have occasion for the use of any kind of stone work to call before purchasing elsewhere. My stock consists of Monuments, Headstones, Marble Posts, Mantel Shelves, Pier Tops, &c., the stock for which was bought and men employed to work the same, since the commencement of the present hard times. I have not sufficient room in which to place more work, and do not wish to discharge any of my hands. For the above reasons, I feel confident that no one can undersell me with the same quality of stock and work. I take occasion to call the attention of all who are repairing or building houses, to my large stock of Mantel Shelves and Pier Tops!

Langdon Park — A Card.

The Trustees of Langdon Park desire, for themselves and in behalf of the public, to acknowledge their indebtedness to each and every person who aided in any way in the recent preparation of the Park for its intended use. Especially to Rev. Mr. DeNormandie, for his very able and beautiful oration on the occasion; also to Rev Dr. Alden, Messrs. Bartlett, Goodwin, Austin, Woodbury, Elwyn, and all others who took part in the exercises of the day.

To Marshal Wm. H. Sise, and City Marshal Israel Marden and his Assistants, and the Police, for their voluntary and efficient services, in regard to the procession, etc.

To the Portsmouth Horticultural Society, for their donation of $200 to the Park.

To Messrs. George A. Perkins, H. G. Gray, M. Sheridan, A. J. Beck, J. Chase Gray, George Smart, Robert Green, P. H. Kirby, Dr. D. W. Jones, Oxford & Johnston, John F. Marden, F. W. Rogers, Stephen B. Pearson, James Janvrin, Jacob Haddock, and any and all others who furnished labor gratuitously, on the grounds or fence.

To Messrs. Samuel Adams & Co., T. E. Call & Sons, and A. A. Fernald, for donations of lumber for the fence. Also to Mr. E. D. Coffin, for paint for same. Likewise to Messrs. John H. Bailey, Isaiah Wilson, and A. P. Wendell & Co., for donations of hardware, tools, etc. And to Hon. Moses H. Goodrich, for plank for seats.

To Mr. M. Eldredge, for the pair of large elms at the entrance. Also to the various Societies and bodies which have added their elaborate decorations to the other attractions of the Park.

To Messrs. Dennis Shea & Co., for a donation of their excellent cement drain pipe, and laying the same.

To the Portsmouth Aqueduct Company, for the gift of the pump and pipe in the well; and to Mr. John P. Sweetser for waterpot and dippers. Also to Messrs. N. F. Mathes & Co., for tool-chest, and to Messrs. Wm. Ward and Alexander Robinson for water tanks. Also to all who have extended similar favors, great or small.

Last, but by no means least—to Mr. C. W. Gardner, for printing; to the city press generally, for gratuitous advertising; and to Mr. Thomas S. Gay, for decorating the grounds on the opening day.

The Board deem it best to state, for the public information, that the expenses of the recent improvements at the Park, for labor of grading, fencing, clearing the grounds, providing good soil for the trees, etc., has been about $600, and the receipts thus far about $300. Those persons who approve the recent action of the Trustees, and desire to encourage and aid their further progress, are requested to send such sums of money as they see fit, to Mr. H. M. Clark, the Treasurer, or to either of the other trustees, immediately.

Per order of the Board of Trustees of Langdon Park.

T. SALTER TREDICK, Secretary.

Portsmouth, June 5th, 1876.

A Choice Job-Lot.

The evil results which may naturally be expected to follow a neglect of duty by parents, is emplified by the career of three boys named Tuttle, Weeks and Allard, the oldest one (Tuttle) being only about thirteen years of age. Tuttle and Weeks were last week arraigned before Judge Page for stealing two watches and a chain from Mr. Malsbensden, Tuttle receiving a sentence of two years in the Reform School, and Weeks being placed on probation. On Saturday the three were brought before the Police Court, charged with breaking into the soap manufactory of Mr. William E. Hadley, the case being continued until Monday,—on which day they were arraigned on two other charges, and found guilty. Tuttle's sentence was not altered; Weeks and Allard were each required to furnish bonds in the sum of $50 for their appearance at the October term of the Circuit Court, and for their good behavior until then. As the latter two are even younger than Tuttle it is quite likely their parents will appeal to have them sent to the Reform School by the Police Judge, rather than to have them tried by the higher court. According to Tuttle's confession he has forcibly entered eleven places since the 14th of March last, and on every occasion has been accompanied by either Weeks or Allard. But one of these petty burglaries (that at the house of John P. Hart, Esq., where a lot of keys was stolen) was reported to the police, and in several instances the parties aggrieved did not know they had met with any loss until after the police had notified them of it. It seems hardly possibly these boys could have for so long a time carried on such a system of petty thefts, had they been properly looked after by their parents; but when mere children, who ought to be spanked and put to bed at 9 o'clock or earlier, are allowed to roam until all hours of the night, unquestioned as to their habits and associates, there is little to be wondered at if they make good headway toward the State Prison, as these boys have done.

Jottings.

The citizens are invited to attend the meeting of the committee appointed on the proposed celebration of July Fourth, to be held this evening at the Common Council room, at 8 o'clock.

Nine persons were baptised at Noble's island, (six from the Methodist and three from the Christian Baptist,) eleven at the Middle Street church and one at the Methodist church, on Sunday.

The gymnastic editor of the Times says he didn't know, until we told him of it, that it was orange peel which caused him to go down stairs in such an eccentric manner recently. He would have known it was so had he given the matter due consideration, for isn't it always orange peel which makes men fall down stairs? We hear it said that the lofty scorn with which Bro. Guppy takes to the middle of the street now to circumnavigate and circumvent a piece of orange peel lying on the sidewalk, is a striking commentary on the folly of those pessemists who maintain that "our civilization is a failure and the Caucasian played out."

The store of Wm. F. Russell, on Water street, was entered on Thursday night by some person who broke a pane of glass and by reaching through the opening thus made succeeded in pushing back a bolt. The thief probably cut his hand with the broken glass while effecting his entrance, as blood stains were found about the store. The cash booty secured amounted to about eight dollars.

The annual meeting of the P. S. & P. Railroad was held in Kittery on Monday. A vote was passed authorizing the issue of $500,000 in six per cent. bonds secured by mortgage, to pay all debts and provide funds for contingencies. The following persons were elected Directors: S. Lothrop Thorndike, John B. Brown, Charles E. Barrett, George E. B. Jackson, Nathaniel Hooper, William H. Y. Hackett, Samuel C. Lawrence. A vote of thanks to Ex-Gov. Goodwin, who retires, was passed, the Governor heartily responding.

Mr. John Perkins, of Hampton, aged 78 years, while out gunning a few days ago on the flats, was seen to fall while trying to approach a flock of birds, and on going to him he was found in a dying condition, and lived only a few minutes.

The dedication of the tree planted at Langdon Park by the teachers and scholars of the Haven School took place on Saturday afternoon. The scholars marched to the Park, headed by the Naval Band. The exercises consisted of selections by the Band, prayer by Rev. Mr. Noyes, singing by the scholars, and a very interesting and appropriate dedicatory address by Mr. Perkins, Principal of the Haven School. Mr. Perkins was followed by the following-named gentlemen, in short addresses which were attentively listened to and enjoyed by all present: Charles W. Gardner, Esq., Rev. Charles A. Holbrook, Rev. James DeNormandie, Hon. Thomas E. O. Marvin, and Stephen W. Clark, Esq., Principal of the High School. The exercises closed with the performance of some choice selections by the Band. The attendance was large, and the occasion was one of much pleasure to participants and spectators, and particularly creditable to Mr. Perkins, who planned and so successfully carried out the whole affair.

The water tank on the top of St. George's Hospital, New York, gave way Saturday morning, and thousands of gallons of water went crashing down through the wards underneath, carrying patients in their beds before it, tearing out walls and deluging the entire building. Several patients were killed and many seriously injured.

The town of Ciego de Avila, in the jurisdiction of Santo Spiritu, Cuba, was attacked on the night of May 26, by the insurgent leader Maximo Gomez, with 1600 men, most of them mounted. The place was defended by a garrison 400 strong. The insurgents were repulsed after desperate fighting, and retired without being pursued. They lost 30 killed and about 70 wounded. The Spanish casualties were two officers killed and three men wounded.

Wm. A. Stuart, of Gorham, was drowned while fishing at Milan, on Saturday.

The Jarrett & Palmer special train from New York arrived in San Francisco seven hours and a half ahead of time, reaching there at 9.25 A. M., the trip being made in eighty hours and thirty minutes. The actual average running time from Ogden to Oakland wharf was 41 1-8 miles per hour. Considerable trouble was experienced on the Central Pacific from the wearing out of brake-shoes on the Pennsylvania cars, and in the mountains the Central Pacific put on two of their own coaches to brake the train. There was no accident of any kind during the trip. Shortly after the arrival breakfast was served, to which prominent citizens, army and navy officers, representatives of the press and theatrical profession, railroad officials and the Mayor of the city were invited. A salute of thirteen guns was fired from the roof of the Palace Hotel on the arrival of the train at the wharf. The remainder of the day was devoted to needed rest. The excursionists were serenaded in the evening.

The annual report of Solon A. Carter, State Treasurer, will contain the following interesting statistics: The revenue of the State for the current year amounts to $503,328.19, a decrease of $2326.02 from the previous year. The expenses have been reduced from $420,394.64 in 1875, to $391,536.23, a gross reduction of $28,854.41, and a net reduction or gain to the State of $26,532.39. The net indebtedness of the State is $3,629,538.49, against $3,741,330.45, showing a reduction of $111,791.96.

On Friday night, a young farmer named Charles Butler, living in Highgate, Vt., left his home to go to the village, leaving his wife and a hired man, Edward Tatre, in the house. On his return two hours later, he stumbled over the dead body of his wife, whose head had been pounded with an axe until hardly recognizable. While Butler was putting up his horse, Tatro had fled from the house with nothing on but a shirt, and reported contradictory stories to neighbors that two or three men had broken into the house and murdered Mrs. Butler. It was evident, however, that he was the murderer, for his shirt was torn, his neck scratched and his person covered with blood. He was arrested. It is supposed that Tatro attempted to violate the person of the unfortunate woman, and failing, murdered her, hoping to avoid exposure. The murdered woman was very pretty and attractive, of the petite style, and probably would not weigh more than 100 pounds. She was about 21 years of age.

While the Nova Scotian barque Eliza McLaughlin was leaving New York for Antwerp one of the crew leaped overboard to escape maltreatment at the hands of one of the officers. The affair occurred several miles outside of Sandy Hook, and but for the timely appearance of the pilot boat Mary E. Williams, the unfortunate man would beyond doubt have been drowned. The man gave evidence of having been terribly maltreated, and his case is to be investigated by the authorities.

A grist and sawmill at Hampton, owned by a Mr. Wilbur, was burned Saturday evening. Loss about $8000; insurance small.

The situation in the Black Hills country is daily becoming more critical. The mail line to the Red Cloud and Spotted Tail agencies has been abandoned. All the Indians belonging to these agencies are on the war path. A regiment of troops has been ordered West from the Department of Missouri.

The City Councils of Dover have appropriated $1000 for the 4th of July celebration. The Legal Reform Clubs of Strafford county propose to have a mass meeting on the same day at Dover.

It is rumored that the Newmarket Manufacturing Company will suspend operations July 1, for two months, to make repairs on their dams. They have 1600 bales of cloth on hand ready for the market.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. Daily Chronicle.

An Awful Mistake.

Theatrical people are yet laughing over a joke practised by John L. Smith, the agent of the Vokes troupe, while here. The Vokes were doing their best to rather poor houses, for they were in Washington during the opening of the Centennial, and the town was deserted. Smith, one of the most efficient agents, if not the most efficient, was in a high state of disgust. He does not succumb readily, and to the midst of his distress Henry Ward Beecher appeared at the National capital to lecture. John L. Smith, Henry Ward Beecher and Co. To this end he sent unscrupulous emissaries throughout the hotels, club-houses, lobbies, lunch-rooms, and elsewhere to spread the intelligence that on that night Henry Ward was to visit the Vokes entertainment at the theatre. Now it cost a dollar to hear Henry lecture, but for that sum one could enjoy the Vokes, and see the great Brooklyn Pope at one and the same time. The result was a crowded house. And the people were disappointed? Not a bit of it.

John L. invited John Chamberlain to the theatre. He gave the famous sporting character a box. Nay, this wicked man did worse; he invegled Chamberlain to his room at the Arlington, and under sundry pretenses got on him a white choker. Sitting in a conspicuous place in the box, John Chamberlain would have been embarrassed, had he known how, at the way the entire house turned and stared at him, for John L.'s wicked emissaries, busy roving about in an utter disregard of truth and grammar, were saying "that's him," "that's him." This was pleasant enough till John was wending his way out, when a fellow stared at him for some seconds, then said in an earnest way:

"Cuss me if I don't think him guilty; never saw a wild countenance in all my life."

"What's that fellor making such remarks about?" asked Chamberlain.

"Because," responded John L. coolly, "he thinks you are Henry Ward Beecher. I don't know how it is, but the impression is general to-night that you are the reverend friend of the family."

John Chamberlain says that when he gets near John L. again there will be a vacancy in the tribe of Smith.—Washington Capital.

One of the finest churches in the world is that which they are not going to build in Cuba. A lady of that ever-faithful isle maiden will not long sigh, to which she directed that $30,000 of her money should be invested in lottery tickets, and that a magnificent church should be built with the proceeds. The money was invested accordingly, but as she might have known, if building materials for churches had been selling at fifteen cents per church, the prize drawn would have bought the shadow of a pine shingle. There are immense fortunes in lottery tickets—for the men who sell them.

One Ohio editor says of a contemporary who had assumed the part of a mummy in a dramatic performance: "He was obliged to put a little animation into himself to come up to the character, and to wear more recent linen, but that was about all. Nature had admirably qualified him to act the part."

Which Shall I Take?

This is often a serious question with the invalid. He finds the market flooded with proprietary medicines, scores of which are recommended as certain cures for his peculiar ailment. He reads the papers, circulars, and almanacs, and finds each sustained by plausible arguments setting forth its virtues and specific action. The recommendations differ as strong for one as for another. The cures claimed to have been wrought by one are as wonderful as those claimed to have been wrought by another. In his perplexity and doubt the sufferer is sometimes tempted to reject all. But it should be borne in mind that this condition of things is one that cannot be remedied. In a land where all are free, the good—the truly valuable—must come into competition with the vile and worthless, and must be brought to public notice by the same instrumentality, which is otherwise used. In such a case, perhaps the only absolute proof that a remedy is what it claims to be, is to try it. The test of a pudding is the eating of it. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." Is the apostolic injunction. There may however, be stronger presumptive evidence in favor of one remedy than there is for any other, and this should be allowed its due weight. A due regard to this may save a vast amount of experiment—frightful waste of time and money. A presumptive evidence in favor of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines, the Proprietor desires to say, that they are prepared by a new and scientific process by which the virtues of the crude medicinal vegetable extract without the use of a particle of alcohol. Not a particle of this destroyer of our race enters into the composition of either his Golden Medical Discovery or Favorite Prescription. This consideration alone ought certainly to rank them high above the nauseous compounds saturated with alcohol, Jamaica rum, sour beer, or vinegar, which are so generally offered for sale. Again, they are of unform strength, and their virtues can never be impaired by age. They are made up from fresh herbs and roots, gathered in their appropriate season, when they are flush with medicinal properties. In support of these claims, the following testimony is offered;

R. V. PIERCE, M. D.; NEWARK, N. J.

Dear Sir,—I have sold a great deal of your excellent remedies, and I prefer to sell them before others, because they give good satisfaction to those who use them. I hear such remarks as "Sage's Remedy completely cured me; it is a splendid thing;" or, "Pierce's Discovery is just what I wanted; I feel better than I ever did." One of our celebrated singers uses it for strengthening her voice, and says "there is nothing equals it;" and so I might give scores of remarks said about your preparations. A colored woman was using your Discovery, and after taking three bottles was completely cured. She, being in the store, said to me, "I don't want no doctors round me so long as I can get the Discovery; it beats all your doctors." "And so I might go on."

I am, most respectfully yours,
ATHA B. CROOKS.

CONDITION PILLS!!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood.

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1872, but from the size of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package, soon procured more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, but finally took your pills, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hope of receiving any benefit, although I had tried everything I could hear of. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking two packages I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package had done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed find one dollar for two packages.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, ME., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and they have done me more good than dollars for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "send for a package for me." I have told many who took them to write to me and do so. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. I tried almost everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would go without them. In this please find $1.50 for the Pills, for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint, Piles, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have tried several physicians, and a great deal for medicine which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no neuralgia pain, can walk as well as any man. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them for twenty times the price. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 14—Neuralgia and Kidney Trouble Cured completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, no Kidney Trouble, and I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed." My health is much better at 64 than it was at 14. This, with the testimony of others, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends that are taking your Pills, and a lady in Reading, Mass., who is a habitual sufferer, has already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients hitherto unknown to physicians in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

Concluded from yesterday.

A REJECTED ROSEBUD.

In a fortnight Violette was Mrs. Twenty-plum. In a month Mr. Hannover was a bankrupt—one of those who take a foreign trip with plenty of money in their pockets, while others lie crushed beneath their evil deeds at home.

My money went with his. I had come to London with a moderate competence. I had increased it by speculations until I was absolutely wealthy. Now I found myself suddenly almost poor.

There remained to me only the Mosswood property, which must be turned into a farm, and I myself must leave my hope of being one of the city millionaires behind me, and become a plain farmer—a man of the same status as Rosebud's father, without his comfortable knowledge of money in the bank to comfort me.

However, with the bursting of the bubble fortune, the circle which gathered around Hannover had been seemingly scattered to the winds, and people knew that Miss Violette had jilted me and also that my money was gone. The city had lost many of its charms, and I wrote to the old woman who had kept the house at Mosswood for my father until his death, to make it ready for my return. Then selling the furniture of my bachelor rooms, and packing my smaller belongings in a few trunks, I started homeward.

I must go back to Mosswood and become a farmer. I suould find Rosebud fading gradually away, of course, and yet I knew she would be prettier than ever. How she had loved me—how ungrateful I had been for that love. Now I would make amends. I would write as many repentant letters as were necessary, and she would of course, forgive me. No woman ever forgets or ceases to love any man she has ever loved, you know. Yes, after a little maidenly resistance. Rosebud would bloom for me again. I was sure of this as the train bore me onward, as I was that the moon would rise that night.

There is no adage more true than the one that declares that misfortunes never come alone, but always in troops. Often, of course, one brings the other. In my case, the anxieties that had trooped so thickly about me made me nervous, and so led to a severe accident.

Having alighted at the station, I delayed my return to the carriages until they had started. I remember running after them, and then—what do I remember then? Darkness, dreams, pain, an awakening in a little room, with white curtains, and a toilet table, and a vision charmingly dressed. Then some one saying, slowly:

"Yes, yes, yes; I think he'll do."

And understanding this was my old friend, Hiram Roper, I asked:

"How did I come here?" trying to sit up, and falling in the attempt.

"Well," said Hiram, "wife and I were at the station, and I saw you were a good deal hurt, and we brought you on. You know this is my house?"

"Yours?" said I. "And you are married, and in good practice, I suppose?"

"Yes," said Roper. "Oh, yes; getting on famously. And you've had a bad time, but you'll be right soon. Come and tell him he will, Rosebud."

And there—yes, there was Rose. After I had ruminated on the fact a few minutes, I felt that truth was stranger than fiction.

"Are you better, Mr. Markham?" said Rosebud, bending towards me.

Here was a poetical story, being worked out in our proper persons. A wounded and repentant hero, I had been sent back to Rosebud, to be nursed and forgiven. Had she not forgiven me, she never would have flown to my aid. All that I could do just then was to squeeze her hand.

She took it away rather quickly; but that was very natural; I had not seen her for three years. She did not know of my contrition. But she had not pined or faded; she was, on the contrary, stouter and rosier than ever.

Just then, Dr. Roper being present, I said nothing, but afterward, as the evening shadows fell, she brought my tea and toast; and then I took her hand, and said:

"Dear Rosebud, how good of you."

And she answered:

"O, dear, no—don't mention it."

"You are an angel of forgiveness," I said; "and—O, I have always loved you, Rosebud. 'Tis true, a siren laid her spells upon me, but the hallucination once over——"

"I shall think you are wandering again," said she, "if you do not stop talking. Do take your toast."

"No," said I, "no, not a mouthful, Rosebud, until you will assure me that you will forget the past, and once more give me the love—"

"Mr. Markham!" cried she.

"Call me Henry," said I. "Rose, if you had hated me, would you be here so kindly ministering to my wants?"

"Here?" said she. "Where should I be but in my own house? I'm sure I've nothing to forgive you, either. Since you allude to our flirtation of three years ago, and since you will talk of it, I will tell you, once for all, that I don't think we ever should have been happy together. And I always liked Hiram the best, only he was so shy. And my goodness, we were married as soon as he got his diploma."

"Married!" cried I.

"Why, yes," said Rosebud. "How else should I be here? You know this is Dr. Roper's house? Didn't you know I was his wife before? Dear old fellow, he is the best husband woman ever had, I'm sure, and, Mr. Markham, I know that I never really loved you."

I don't know whether that was true or not, but it did not matter. She did not love me then, and does not now; and I had lost her.

I live alone at Mosswood now, an old bachelor, with a limp and the dyspepsia, and she and a bouquet of little blossoms flourish over the way at Dr. Roper's.

Some time, perhaps, I may marry. Miss Flint would have me, and so would the Widow Wiggins; but whatever I may gather to wear over my heart it will not be a rosebud. I threw that away long ago, and Roper picked it up, and it makes his life fragrant.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7, 1876.

The U. S. Senatorship.

Not the least important duty of the in-coming legislature is the choice of a United States Senator to succeed Hon. AARON H. CRAGIN, who at the expiration of his present term will have served sixteen years in Congress, four years in the House and twelve in the Senate. This duty is one that cannot be discharged carelessly or with plain disregard to a common measure of justice, without danger of imperilling republican ascendancy in the State. No republican legislature ever assembled in New Hampshire which had a clearer course to pursue than this. Men condemn ingratitude in business and friendly relations, and there is no reason why it should not be condemned and not condoned in politics. It is our firm belief, from an intimate acquaintance with the sentiment of New Hampshire republicans who have no pet personal measures at stake, that could a vote of the rank and file of the party be taken on the subject, a large majority of the 40,000 voters whose ballots were cast for the republican nominees at the recent election, would indicate HON. EDWARD H. ROLLINS as their choice for U. S. Senator. It is, of course, in the power of the friends of other candidates to arouse an opposition to his election by a mutual combination of interests for the aggrandizement of each person engaged in the alliance—each member of the combination hoping that in the end he may prove to be the successful one. Men like Gen. GILMAN MARSTON, Gen. AARON F. STEVENS and Ex-Governor STEARNS have an honorable ambition for the position, and no one disputes it. Not one of them, however, has so good a claim for services rendered as has HON. EDWARD H. ROLLINS. A leadership of twenty-one years ought surely to suffice for any man's service to the party for its greatest possible recognition of the fact. Mr. ROLLINS has been the leading spirit, the very life of the republican organization from its inception to the present time. If three terms in Congress, expiring in 1883, are sufficient recognition for the value of these services, what would be the proper recognition for any public man who had spent but little time for the maintenance of republican supremacy in the State, and that time principally while a candidate for public office?

No one questions Mr. ROLLINS' ability. He is possessed of wonderful energy, is an able debater and eloquent speaker. His intimate acquaintance with the leading men of the Nation is a most valuable contingency in case of his election to the United States Senate. He has been faithful to every trust with which the republican party has honored him. As Speaker of the New Hampshire House of Representatives he was noted for the tact and ability displayed in the dispatch of business. Men possessed of this rare quality are too few to be ignored and too much needed to be excluded from the councils of the Nation. The representative men of the age are those who accomplish—who are self-reliant, vigorous, quick of perception, ready to do battle bravely, manfully, and without flinching. Mr. ROLLINS is emphatically one of this class, and has proved himself so on occasions when he had the best of reasons for retiring on the laurels already won. His claims were passed over in 1864, when Mr. CRAGIN was made U. S. Senator; in 1866, when HON. JAMES W. PATTERSON's brilliant eloquence captivated the people; again in 1870, when Mr. CRAGIN received a re-election; and for the last time in 1872, when HON. BAINBRIDGE WADLEIGH won the fruits of the anti-PATTERSON movement. In the ever-memorable conflict ending in the defeat of Senator PATTERSON, the main contest was waged by Mr. ROLLINS, to whom the republicans of the State owe the greatest meed of praise for efforts that saved them from the deep humiliation which Mr. PATTERSON's re-election would have brought, followed as it must have been by his expulsion from the United States Senate. It is not all strange that the Ex-Senator contributes something beyond earnest sympathy toward the movement for the defeat of Mr. ROLLINS, but that other candidates join in it is accounted for only by the fact that they are candidates. Not one of them has superior claims to advance over those of Mr. ROLLINS, who, though repeatedly refused the honor he sought, has unflaggingly persevered in the good work of organizing and leading to victory the best party that ever ruled New Hampshire. A man of such capacity and disposition who is thought a worthy leader for such an extended period of time, and who is thus trusted and depended on in time of need, certainly merits the highest honors for unflinching devotion to a cause requiring great sacrifices as well as great energy. Mr. ROLLINS is without doubt the choice of a majority of the uninfluenced republican members of the legislature, and we trust and firmly believe that all combinations to wrest the Senatorship from him will prove futile, depending as they do upon the most selfish of motives and the most glaring display of ingratitude.

Mr. Blaine's Vindication.

That the democrats feared Mr. Blaine would hit hard if he could get the floor of the House for an explanation, and would bring up the astounding charge he did against the democratic members of the committee, was shadowed in the Washington despatch to the Boston Post published Monday morning, in which the correspondent intimated that many persons believed the charges against Mr. Blaine were all "a put-up job" of himself and friends, and that after he had been abused about as much as he thought proper he would read all the letters and clear himself in a blaze of glory. Had that correspondent been warned by Knott's committee that they had received Caldwell's telegram, that it was possible they would not be able to keep its reception a secret, and that the democratic papers had better "hedge" as much as possible, in view of the probable exposure of the committee's reckless unfairness? It looks very like it.

The Post's dispatch of Monday night says: "Blaine, to-day, by a coup d'etat worthy of the First Napoleon, wrested the investigation from the hands of the judiciary committee, seized the floor of the House, and by the most magnificently audacious act of his life and a most brilliant display of fighting ability on the floor, has forced his party to sustain him as a man persecuted in their behalf by the Southern element in the House. * * * As each letter was read and made light of by Blaine, the republicans seemed to breathe easier and cheered repeatedly. When the last one was read and the dreadful suspicions which Blaine's inexplicable action in regard to these letters had created were dispelled, it seemed as though his party friends were beside themselves. * * * * When Blaine wheeled toward the democratic side and charged Proctor Knott with having suppressed evidence favorable to him, the House became silent in an instant. Knott denied the charge. Blaine demanded to know whether Knott knew Caldwell's address. Knott, trapped for the minute, made the evasive answer that he had been trying to get Caldwell's address for some time, but had thus far failed. Dashing down the aisle, Blaine in his most defiant tones charged that Knott last Thursday received a dispatch from Caldwell, completely exonerating him (Blaine) and offering to make an affidavit that Blaine never received any railroad bonds from him (Caldwell.) The effect was like touching a lighted match to a barrel of gunpowder."

Proctor Knott, chairman of the House judiciary committee, in attempting to break the damaging force of Mr. Blaine's charge that he had kept back Caldwell's despatch exonerating him (Blaine) from all blame, said he had shown the despatch to several of the committee and they had decided not to produce it just yet, until they were satisfied it was genuine! Even the democratic papers acknowledge that this defence is surprisingly "thin." Had the despatch been damaging to Mr. Blaine it would have been instantly made public, as has been the universal custom with the various committees when they have got hold of any statements prejudicial to republicans, no matter from what sources they came. And as to Knott's showing it to members of the committee—he showed it only to the democratic members, for not one of the republican members had heard a word of it!

The charge of unfairness made by Mr. Blaine against the sub-committee, which consists of two ex-rebel generals and one republican, is denied by the chairman, Gen. Eppa Hunton of Virginia, who claimed that he had been extra generous and superabundantly fair toward Mr. Blaine. But considering the hatred the ex-rebel leaders bear Mr. Blaine for his amnesty debate, and the innumerable instances of gross unfairness and partisan dishonesty shown by the democratic committees, we prefer to believe Mr. Blaine rather than the two ex-confederates who would so dearly love to destroy him. Concerning this committee the Tribune's Washington dispatch of Sunday (the day before Mr. Blaine made the charge) says: "There are at least a few exceptions to the rule that the latest disclosures—if such they can be called—in the Blaine case have damaged him as a candidate. Two delegates to the Cincinnati Convention, who were not supporters of Mr. Blaine, returned to their homes yesterday after a brief visit to Washington. Before leaving the city they told a friend that they should vote for Mr. Blaine on the first ballot. They had watched the investigation with great interest, and were very indignant at the unfairness with which it has been conducted."

Political.

Before Mr. Blaine made his coup d'etat in the House the New York Tribune had the following: A week ago his friends were probably claiming too much. Evidently his enemies claim too much now, when they insist that he is out of the field. Four days ago Mr. Blaine had three hundred delegates at his back. He is the most versatile, adroit, and powerful of all the candidates, full of intellectual resources, and brave to the verge of audacity. Whoever attempts to count out such a man on the strength of all that has yet been revealed to the public makes a mistake. The Boston witnesses have established absolutely nothing against him. He has not been hurt by the steady fire of scandal under which he has been held continuously for months. In the very face of it he has gathered in the delegates from State after State.

Speaker Kerr was so anxious to have a democratic majority on the committee which is examining into the charges against him, that he had Blackburn summoned to return from Louisiana, where he was serving on a sub-committee of inquiry. This action will go quite as far as anything else in convincing outsiders that Kerr hopes to be acquitted rather through the favor of his partisan friends than through any evidence he may be able to produce.

In answer to an objection raised to the admission of certain evidence before Clymer's committee, Blackburn said "the committee is not bound by the strict technical rules that govern courts." He might have added "or the rules of justice and decency, or gentlemanly honor, either," without slandering himself or his ex-rebel associates.

A man who will maliciously purloin another's private letters is just two degrees below the average Asiatic spe. A man who having purloined will threaten to publish them for either political or personal aggrandizement is meaner than a man who beats his wife. A man who will, after having purloined and threatened, testify to a damnable lie, and stick to it, is too small in soul to be called human, and too big in devilitry to be saved.—Washington Republican.

And so Mr. Barnum goes into the Senate to represent the party which advocates the purification of politics and the application of the tests of capacity, fitness and integrity in the selection of candidates. Mr. Barnum has one recommendation; he has been eight years in Congress, has never made a speech and very rarely voted. He has drawn his pay like a major, and contributed to the election fund like a lieutenant general. Verily he has his reward. And there's Governor English! Poor man! They're fooling him with talk about St. Louis and the Presidency. What a very pretty party this democracy is when it gets set up where you can go round it and take in its fair proportions.—N. Y. Tribune.

Strouse, formerly a democratic Congressman from Pennsylvania, testified in the Kerr case that Harney, the witness who swears he paid Kerr the money received from Greene, asked him (Strouse) to help get the appointment for Greene, as it would put some money in his (Harney's) pocket. Strouse further testified that on this representation he did use his influence with Kerr to get Greene appointed—in other words, that he willingly and knowingly became a party to just such a transaction as ruined Belknap. Now one Leising swears he paid Strouse himself $300 for an army appointment! The democratic "investigations" gun kicks awful, and kills more at the breech than the muzzle.

A Blaine club was formed in Baltimore Friday night, which intends to go to Cincinnati in a body.

—A serious outrage upon Chinese dignity is agitating the ignorant classes of people in several of the large cities of China. In some places it has resulted in a veritable panic. It arises from the cutting off of the pigtails of large numbers of the populace. This is evidently the work of an organized band, who, mixing into the crowds at night, find no difficulty in performing their operations. The low class of citizens, however, attribute it to a supernatural agency. The real purpose is unknown. Some believe it to have a political bearing, others that it is merely a device of ingenious speculators in human hair.

On Which Side?

There are few in this city who are not aware of the existence among us of a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. There are however a great many of our people who are not only not aware of the amount of good performed by the members of this organization, but have no comprehension of the number of obstacles encountered in carrying out its principles and its aims. There are various reasons for this ignorance which we do not propose to enumerate or discuss now, as we have another purpose to which we propose to devote this article. And it is to the discussion of this proposition. The major part of the community,* including many men of influence, either openly oppose this humane work or by sneers and words of ridicule endeavor to make it an object of contempt. The effect of this is to prejudice ignorant minds and hostility is thereby engendered against a cause that should be supported, aided and abetted by every human being. The labors of the officers of the Society are thus made more arduous than they should be and are often impeded by those from whom should be expected better things.

What is this work that sometimes provokes such an amount of ill-feeling from those who claim to be honorable and generous? It is simply the act of stepping in between the strong and the weak and preventing the abuse of the latter by the former. Surely, no one's rights are infringed upon here; because none have any rights in this direction. A few days ago the Secretary of the S. P. C. A. discovered a skeleton-like mare hitched to a post on one of our principal streets at 7 o'clock in the morning. It was ascertained that the animal had that morning drawn two women and a man a distance of twenty miles to remain here until afternoon and then to be driven home, with nothing to eat meanwhile. The owner acknowledged that the mare had eaten nothing because she was sick and couldn't eat! The Secretary was incredulous in regard to this statement (although the man was self-convicted on either horn of the dilemma,) and asked that the horse be driven to a stable and baited, which was accordingly done, the poor famished creature eating as though she had not seen food for a week. Having thus cared for the mare he reported his action to the proper officers of the Society who, after viewing the animal, fully endorsed the Secretary's prompt proceeding in the matter and ordered the stable-keeper to detain the subject of care until the following morning, in order that the mare might be sufficiently rested to return home with the load she had brought hither. A few individuals, enemies to the society, having heard of this action of the S. P. C. A. officials, busied themselves in misrepresenting the case and succeeded in causing the owner of the mare to believe that it was an unheard of usurpation of power, and a trampling upon individual rights. The man, who had hitherto supposed that he had been negligently careless of his mare's comfort and welfare, now concluded that he was the victim of arbitrary imposition, and with the aid of friends and in the absence of the Society's officials, succeeded in frightening the stable boy to such a degree that the horse was delivered up in the afternoon and the offender left for home. The officers did not think it worth while to follow him and so the case rested.

The foregoing is related merely to show how thankless and unpopular a task is that of the prevention of cruelty to animals. Three-quarters of those who were knowing to the incident referred to, regarded the driver as the victim instead of the poor, emaciated horse, and so expressed themselves. A little unbiased reflection, however, will serve to convince any intelligent person of the absurdity of this position. Here on the one hand is a poor, unfed, half-starved brute, utterly helpless in the direction of self-relief, and incapable of making known its wants, and on the other hand a community of individuals of boasted intelligence and reason, with all of God's bounties at their command, and with the care of God's creatures committed in trust to them. Is there any question in regard to their duty in such a case?

But we do not think that the officers of the S. P. C. A. deserve any material assistance. They can take care of nearly every case of cruelty. Their labors can be greatly lightened, though, if they receive the moral support of the public. They do not expect the countenance of the low and the heartless. But they doubtless do expect as they have a right to, the moral influence of those who claim to be respectable and who wield an important influence in society. Let those who rank themselves with that class who would scorn to do a mean act, reflect upon the matter which we have thus briefly discussed, and see if all are possessed of that true nobility that expresses itself by defending the weak from the assaults of the strong. C. W. G.

Music in the Air.

Editors Chronicle; There are a number of young men—at least I presume they are young, for they are indiscreet enough—who quite frequently choose the silent midnight hour (or thereabouts) to give full swing to their vocal powers. This I wouldn't care about if they exercised under cover,—but they don't; they choose the street—Islington street—my street, to sing on, and wake me up, and wake up others and keep them awake, with their vocalization. If their object is to make night hideous and the lives of unoffending citizens a burden, their efforts are brilliantly successful; if they aim to please lovers of real music, they most lamentably fail. Now, I am very fond of music, and would not complain if the youthful serenaders sang well; but they don't; they flat fearfully; and I hereby earnestly beseech them either to learn to sing on the key, or else hereafter kindly favor some one less critical than I with their midnight "harmony." CHROMATIC.

Jottings.

There will be an interesting game of base ball at the Plains this afternoon, between the Granite State nine and a picked nine from Kittery, commencing at half-past 2.

We have received from the publisher, G. D. Russell & Co., No. 126 Tremont street, Boston, the "Centennial Legion Banner Song" of the Washington Light Infantry of South Carolina, by Theodore L. Smith, a member of the corps.

The Rockingham Ten Cent Savings Bank, of this city has declared a dividend of 2 1-2 per cent. on their deposits for the past six months—which is the limit the law allows. If this new institution has not yet seen its centennial, it certainly appears to be doing well with its Ten Cents.

William J. Moles has been arrested on suspicion of being the incendiary of Mary P. Hodgdon's buildings on the Newington road, some months ago. He was before the Police Court on Tuesday; case continued until Saturday.

The Sixteenth Massachusetts Infantry Association have accepted the invitation to be the guests of Capt. Frank W. Hilton at the Rockingham House on the 20th inst.

Ship Frank Jones, Ross, has arrived at Liverpool, 115 days from San Francisco.

News and Notes.

The young lady and her mother from Boston, who recently went to Indianapolis, Indiana, in search of a young German whom they had met in Carlsrhue, Germany, two years before, and with whom the daughter fell in love, were successful in finding the wandering swain. To prevent any future separation the fond pair were married at once in Indianapolis, the Journal of that city chronicling the event. The parties were Charles A. Brandenburg, of Germany, and Miss Carrie M. Cochran, of Boston.

Steamer Oriental, Captain Doane, of the Savannah and Boston Line, was wrecked on Harding's Ledge, three miles from Boston Light, on Sunday night, in a fog. No lives were lost. The Oriental was formerly the blockade-runner Minna; she registered 741 tons, and was built in England in 1860.

Dr. J. C. Ayer has been taken to an insane asylum.

A barn in Fisherville, owned by Patrick Kelley and Lawrence Keenan, was burned Sunday morning. Loss $500; insured; incendiary.

The toll-house at Mount Washington and the Copp bridge in Gorham were washed away Saturday night by the sudden rising of the Peabody River.

Allen C. Laros, of Easton, Pa., poisoned his father and mother, their six children (including himself) and a boarder, with arsenic, that he might have their money. He took some of the poison himself, as a "blind." The father and mother and the boarder died. The murderer is 21 years old, and was a school-teacher.

A boat containing six Penobscot Indians, river drivers, swamped Monday while going over the rapids at Stewartstown, Vt., and one Indian was drowned.

The house of N. C. Adams, at Pittsfield, was struck by lightning Sunday, and a widow, Mrs. Sarah Brown, died from the effects of fright. She was eighty-seven years old.

A man named Carr, but calling himself Prescott, was arrested in Nashua, Sunday, for horse-stealing.

That fearfully irreverent paper, the Cincinnati Times, comments as follows on Commodore Vanderbilt's sickness: "A chill is a bad thing for Commodore Vanderbilt now, but there may come a time when he will remember it with pleasure."

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy

is no patent medicine humbug, got up to dupe the ignorant and credulous, nor is it represented as being "composed of rare and precious substances brought from the four corners of the earth, carried seven times across the Great Desert of Sahara on the backs of fourteen camels, and brought across the Atlantic Ocean in two ships." It is a simple, mild, soothing remedy, a perfect Specific for CATARRH and "COLD IN THE HEAD;" also for Offensive Breath, Loss or Impairment of the Sense of Smell, Taste, or Hearing, Watery or Weak Eyes, Pain or Pressure in the Head, when caused, as they all not unfrequently are, by the violence of Catarrh.

The Supply Depot of the Body.

The stomach is the grand supply depot of the body, upon which it draws for all the elements needed in the composition of bone, muscle, brain and blood. The liver is an important auxiliary of this mighty organ, and the two are most intimately connected. Nothing so certainly ensures the harmonious action of these viscera, and so completely removes the disorders which simultaneously affect both, as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the most popular American specific for all complaints to which the stomach, liver and bowels are subject, and the foremost tonic on this side of the Atlantic. Indigestion, costiveness, inactivity and congestion of the liver, poverty of the blood, debility of the bladder and kidneys, and many other ailments produced by or causing weakness, are entirely removed by its use.

Stump speakers do not always tell the truth; they would tell it exactly if they said that Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam is the best remedy in the world for hoarseness, coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Charge of the Mulligan Guard.

Bang! Boom! Slip the trap! Shoot the Roman candle! Hoop-la! Exit Blaine. Booted? Shall we say booted, O (net "oh") ye bright particular Pleiades! or are ye too particular? Let us say booted, and chance it. Blaine of Maine! Maine of the horrid pines. Croton-main. Croton-bug. Bug-powder. Powder-mill. John Stuart Mill. Mill, again. Mulligan. Drunk, alas.

We knew we could fetch it. Mulligan it is. Sing we of Mulligan. With beer in his aspect, sped on a galloping charge out of a bended bow, Mulligan of Boston. Hot weather? Well, s'posin' it was. Oh, the wild charge he made. It was his, shot out of a bended bow like a hot dart on a galloping charger, to pull rein at Washington and drop into a barber's chair. In-tox-i-ca-ted!

Where were we? Letters he bore—great bore. Sensation it was his to make. Into barber's chair it was his to drop. Shaved it was his to get. Blaine it was his to meet. Easy, sentences it is wrong-end-to to write. But yesterday he was confidential clerk to two brothers-in-law of a candidential President. But to-morrow he shall break his fast on your quivering flesh, and a dainty feast for him you'll be. If ye be beasts, stand here like fat oxen waiting for—

Soda-water for six, down in the cellar there, and be quick about it! Aha, we breathe again. Now, Maine of Blaine, beware. Letters he bears, as we were about to say. Letters? What letters? How many letters? Fourteen letters of a private man. Secredential Confidany of a private man. Right to 'em? Well, got 'em, anyhow. Stick to 'em? Bet your—gizzard! (By the way, got a gizzard? No? Bet you the beer!) Lend em? Well, perhaps—on honor. Oh, yes, lend 'em to Blaine, nice Mr. Blaine. Give 'em back, Blaine, will you? Not by a darned sight! In one word, one monosyllabic monosyllable, "theguarddiesbutneversurrenders."

Is there any more? Not much. Not much more. Once there was a Western man named William, who shot around with a rifle. See? Don't see? Whose fault is that? Put away that pen, shut down the cover of the ink-bottle. Where is our hat? No more beer, thank you. We'll all march home together.

THE NEW AMERICAN STORY

ACHSAH:

A New England Life Study.

By REV. PETER PENOT. 12 mo, cloth.....$1.50.

The manly, whole souled, and devoted young clergyman is no fancy sketch; Deacon Sterre, the sanctimonious hypocrite; the plain-talking old maid sister; the sneaking, spying aunt, are life-like and real, while the heroine, ACHSAH, is a lovely character, with whom the reader is in deep sympathy. These, with the various other characters of the story, are so combined as to produce a book full of interest, from beginning to end.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden. Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have seen many cures, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. One time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can vouchsafe no more than to say that has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please send $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and what I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did me good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England!

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

THE PROCESSION.

BY J. HARDER.

To-day the decoration of the graves takes place,
Thus drums and fifes inform the populace,
And men of every class and grade,
Assemble on the town parade.

And well-drilled bands, they number three,
Play favorite airs, with high old glee;
And bells from spires peel forth their chimes,
Hark, hark, ye men, united from all climes.

Procession's busy, forming in a neighboring street,
Where troops of soldiers, squads of sailors meet.
The clock strikes two, the gun is fired,
The columns march, all well attired.

And, listening to salutes, and to the knell,
The city marshal, on a charger, mounted well,
Proceeded foremost, leading the array,
And thus avoiding hindrance or stoppage on the way.

His body guard, the men of peace, a full platoon,
Follow the motions of their captain soon,
And on they move in full command,
In dress of blue and club in hand.

Next meets the eye three handsome steeds
On which, postmaster of the town, with adjutants proceeds.
Then comes the music of the ship "Sabine,"
And next to them a squad of our marine.

The boys of the training ship with looks so proud and smart,
Are followed by the Portsmouth city guard;
And then appears a troop of heavy artillery,
In fine array, known for its gallantry.

And high on horse an æsculap his honor plights,
For section two, assisted by two valiant knights.
A cornet band attached to this division,
Play many a piece with nice precision.

And now behold our Portsmouth Veteran Artillery,
Are they not men, born on the soil, where every one is free?
Next comes a floral car, drawn by four steeds, with flowers profusely decorated,
In honor of our soldier friends, whose doom the battle-field had fated.

Grand Army of the Republic, they march in rank and file,
And with their banner telling us that they have fought in style;
Then soldiers come and sailors too, all veterans alike,
These men in battles they have fought, and never missed a strike.

A floral barge adorned with flowers and manned by boys dressed in blue,
Well done, ye folks on Piscataqua's shore, "our navy she is true."
And Fire Department with its members all, are marching on the ground,
The "Dearborn" and the "Kearsarge" men, are always to be found.

The third division opens now, with marshal and two aids,
Three knights, well-known, they seldom miss parades.
Rye lieach, by tourists called a fairy land,
With greetings sends its splendid band.

Then three encampments are enrolled,
Drilled to perfection we are told;
Mount Sinai, Strawberry Bank,
They march in file, they march in rank.

And these encampments did obtain,
Dirige too, from Kittery, Maine.
A Drum Corps too, a warlike march they play,
Form portions of this grand display.

It's Decoration Day.

—At Xenia, Ohio, recently, while a lady was at work in her garden, her two-year-old boy was left to his amusements in the house. One of these consisted in bolting every door that was not already bolted. When the lady endeavored to enter she found herself locked out, and as every window was securely fastened down, the vexed question how to get in was to be solved. The child was too young to appreciate the difficulty of the maternal situation, and to respond to her directions to unbolt. After calling in assistance and much study, a window-pane was cut out, the spring touched, and sash raised, by which admittance was gained, the infant all the while remaining a calm and curious spectator of the operation.

—An old lady at Attica, Ind., just to show what she could do, filled a goblet with rich cream, and with a teaspoon churned butter enough for breakfast for a family of six.

— A button has been invented which requires no sewing on. This is good news for bachelors.

Daily Chronicle.

THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1876.

New Hampshire Legislature:

The Great and General Court of New Hampshire organized for the session of 1876, on Wednesday. Both parties held caucuses on Tuesday evening to nominate officers. The republican nominations were:

For President of the Senate, Hon. Chas. Holman of Nashua; Clerk, Tyler Westgate of Haverhill; Assistant Clerk, Calvin Sanders of Dover; Doorkeeper, John W. Babbitt of Keene; Temporary Chairman, Gen. Natt Head of Hooksett·

For Speaker of the House, Hon. Charles P. Sanborn of Concord; Clerk, Charles C. Danforth of Concord; Assistant Clerk, Alpheus W. Baker of Lebanon; Sergeant-at-Arms, Alonzo W. Quint of Manchester; Doorkeepers, Charles C. Cummings of Concord, John B. Cooper of Newport, Lewis Jenkins of Gilmanton.

The democratic caucus nominated the following: Speaker of the House, Frank Hiland of Manchester; Clerk, John B. Mills of Manchester; Assistant Clerk, Francis N. Hatch of Portsmouth; Sergeant-at-Arms, Dudley P. Evans of Alton; Doorkeepers, George W. Emerson of Barnstead, T. W. Evans of Great Falls, Francis N. Mobury of Pelham.

The House assembled at 10:30 A. M., Wednesday, and at 11:30 Gov. Cheney, members of the Council and the Secretary of State entered, and the representatives were sworn by the Governor. Gen. A. F. Stevens was chosen temporary chairman, and the House then balloted for Speaker, as follows:

Whole number of votes	372
Necessary for a choice	187
Frank Hiland had	168
Charles P. Sanborn	204

And Mr. Sanborn was elected. The other nominees of the republicans were chosen by the House, and the republican caucus programme was carried out by the Senate.

How It Works.

A correspondent of the Portland Advertiser writes as follows concerning the apparent working of the Maine law abolishing capital punishment:

"In your paper of Friday you call attention to the fact that within two months since the law repealing the death penalty took effect, we have had in Maine three murders. The history of our capital law is instructive. During the first seventeen years of our State history, 1820-37, our law required the execution of assassins, and we had in that time only two murders, though our population was nearly as large, toward the close of this period, as now, and liquors were freely sold and generally used. The Washingtonian movement began in 1840, and the Maine law was enacted in 1851. In 1837, the law was so changed as to permit our governors to nullify the sentence of the courts, as they generally did. Under this two-faced statute, capital offences multiplied in geometrical ratio, until we had a dozen murders a year. In 1875 an honest law was passed, and in June, Wagner and Gordon were executed. In that year, but one murder was committed in Maine, and that murderer at once took his own life. We have now repealed the death penalty, with the result you have stated. It is clear from these statistics that what is called the abolition of the death penalty is merely the substitution of innocent for guilty sufferers—the protection of murderers at the expense of their victims."

Stealing a Train.

The particulars of the escape by means of a passing locomotive of another batch of Sing Sing convicts furnish fresh evidence of their wonderful desperation. A year ago, it will be remembered, several prisoners boarded a locomotive in the prison yard and compelled the engineer to run the guard posts, and their success appears to have encouraged others to imitate their example. Then the convict quarrymen seized a locomotive attached to a train, drove the engineer and fireman off, and, detaching the engine from the cars, ran it at lightning speed down the railroad track. All station men south were frightened, as there were great fears that a terrible collision might happen. The agent at the next station received an order from the Superintendent of the road: "Turn your switch and throw engine coming on down track into the river." He turned his switch, but the engine did not reach there. The convicts ran her with both pumps till she filled with water, burst her cylinder heads and stopped; then they jumped off and ran into the woods. Some of them are still at large. The same tactics were employed this time, only the escaping convicts took the engineer and fireman with them. The convicts made a rush for the track just as a train was coming slowly down, and just before the engine reached the northern entrance the convicts Carpenter, Farrell, Quinn and Wood rushed to the locomotive and jumped on it, while Murphy and Degan ran to the coupling in the rear of the tender and pulled the pin, intending also to get on the engine, but the four first named commanded the engineer to "pull her wide open," and it ran down the track like the wind, the two last named convicts jumping on the train, which was still under motion. As the engine emerged from the south end of the arch with the desperate convicts on board, the guard at the southern post, taking in the situation at a glance, raised his carbine and fired at the fugitives. The ball passed through the cab of the engine and just missed the engineer's head. The latter, fearing he would be shot, let himself down on the step of his engine and, holding on to the hand-rail, swung his body out of the range of the guardsman's carbine. At this juncture one of the convicts on the engine drew a revolver and shot through the side of the cab at the engineer, shouting to him at the same time, "Get in here, you——." The engineer obeyed quickly, when they compelled him to run the engine a distance of two miles and a half down the track and then stop her. Then the four men stripped off their prison garb, tearing it into rags in their haste, and thrust it into the red-hot furnace. They all had complete citizens' suits underneath. Then they sprang off the locomotive and dashed up the hill, through the woods, catching at the brush and often falling flat on their faces in their hurry. As they reached the brow of the hill they turned and shouted, "Will meet you on Tenth avenue and make this all right, boss." The engineer then ran his engine back to the prison as quickly as possible, when officers got on board and were taken down to where the convicts had gotten off, when they, too, jumped down and made a chase. Three of the convicts were last seen making their way through Sleepy Hollow across the Croton Aqueduct, toward the Harlem Railroad. The fourth one has not been seen since. The two who failed to get on the engine started down the track on a run, but, being hotly pursued by the guards, soon stopped. Murphy had thrown his prison garb away, and was attired in black trowsers and vest, white undershirt, and straw hat. Guardsman Ryan drew his revolver on Murphy, when the latter threw up his hands, exclaiming, "I'll give up; I'll go back." The other convict made no resistance, and both were brought back to the prison and locked up in a dark cell. The escape can hardly be accounted for.

Political.

A strange story is told in the New York Times, of the cruel prescription of a young man named Thomas, of good family, in Selma, Ala., for no offence but turning republican and voting for Grant in 1872. For this he was turned out of doors by his mother and step-father, who are comparatively wealthy, and became an object of scorn and derision in the social circle to which he belonged. The representative of his district in Congress was Jere. Haralson, a negro, and hearing of the case he obtained a clerkship for the young man, in the Treasury Department at Washington. Lately he was taken sick and Mr. Haralson saw he had needed attention. His parents and friends took no notice of despatches informing them of his condition, and when he died they simply replied to inquiries, "Bury him in Washington." The intervention of the Masons, to which order he belonged, secured him a decent burial. Such is the spirit of Southern chivalry.

Daniel A. Caldwell, an ex-Alderman of Lynn, and brother of Joseph Caldwell, who has figured so conspicuously in the Blaine matter, says his brother is in London, and a telegram addressed to him there would reach him without any trouble whatever. He further says he thinks his brother's testimony is not desired by Mr. Blaine's opponents.

The Concord correspondent of the Boston Post says the New Hampshire democracy are determined to "do nothing that will throw discredit on the good reputation the party has so long sustained." "Good reputation" of the New Hampshire democracy! Oh, hevings!

Eight of the democratic appointees in the House of Representatives have been forced to step down and out. This is hard on democracy. Before the session is through more of the galvanized patriots will be unmasked. Even Speaker Kerr is charged with selling a cadetship in 1866. For the credit of the House and the honor of the American name we trust the charge will be disproved. As democracy commenced throwing stones it would not be surprising if all its glass windows were smashed before it gets through the campaign.—Republic.

News and Notes.

The Maine Press Association started for the Centennial, leaving Portland by the Rochester route, on the afternoon of the 5th.

Speaking of a talk by Moody, in Chicago, the Times of that city says: The hosts of Lucifer and the rules of syntax were put to flight at one and the same time.

Nashua has appropriated $1000 for the celebration of the Fourth of July, provided the citizens raise $500 additional.

Congress will adjourn on Saturday, until the Friday following, to give the republican members a chance to attend the Cincinnati convention. The same order will be observed for the St. Louis convention.

The Senate will sit as a high court of impeachment to try Belknap's case, July 6th.

On the 6th inst., in the Worcester (Mass.) court, a case was heard against Mr. Brigham Pierce of Rutland for assault and battery on his stepdaughter, Miss Cutler, or rather, Mrs. Prescott. It seems that Pierce, who is a well-to-do farmer, married about a year ago, a widow by the name of Cutler, who had a pretty daughter. About the same time the girl began to receive attentions from a young man whose name is R. C. Prescott. The attachment was mutual, and they were clandestinely engaged. This was kept secret till lately, and no objections were made to the visits of Prescott to the house of Mr. Pierce. Finally, however, the secret leaked out and reports became current through Rutland that the young people were to be married. These reports reached Mr. Pierce, who, about a month ago, made his objection to the match known and drove young Prescott out of the house. Pierce shut up his daughter, as the story goes, and began, she claims, a systematic series of abuse. But the girl wasn't to be scared in this way. She was determined to marry her lover, and, after she had been kept in the house some three weeks, communication was established between Prescott and Miss Cutler. On the evening of Memorial Day she made some excuse to go to the house of a neighbor, where the pair were married by Rev. J. W. Bigelow. The father was much enraged and a quarrel ensued, which resulted in a criminal complaint against Mr. Pierce for assault.

A popular and effectual way of "discouraging" the Chinaman in San Francisco aside from the quarterly "license," which he is obliged to pay by way of a forced contribution, is to arraign him for some petty violation of the law and give him the alternative of paying an enormous fine or going to the county jail. If he goes to jail, his pigtail is cut off, which is to every Chinaman a terrible social and moral degradation. Rather than lose his pigtail the heathen will permit himself to be robbed of his last dollar.

Capt. Hugh Blaisdell, one of the veterans of the war of 1812, died at Lake Village, on the 6th, it being his eighty-third birthday. He was a Sergeant in Capt. Lemuel B. Mason's company of New Hampshire soldiers, and enlisted at an early period of the war.

Rats on the Rampage.

The Puebla Chieftain, a Colorado paper, tells the following story, which may be true:

The number of rats inhabiting the rocky crevices and cavernous passages at the summit of Pike's Peak, have recently become formidable and dangerous. These animals are known to feed upon a saccharine gum that percolates through the pores of the rocks, apparently upheaved by some volcanic action. Since the establishment of the Government Signal Station on the summit of the Peak, at an altitude of nearly 15,000 feet, these animals have acquired a voracious appetite for raw and uncooked meat, the scent of which seems to impart to them a ferocity rivaling the fierceness of the starved Siberian wolf. The most singular trait in the character of these animals is that they are never seen in the daytime. When the moon pours down her queenly light up on the summit they may be seen in countless numbers trooping around among the rocky boulders that crown the barren waste, and during the warm summer months they may be seen swimming and sporting in the waters of the lake, a short distance below the Peak, and of a dark, cloudy night their trail in the water is marked by a sparkling light giving to the waters of the lake a bright and silvery appearance. A few days ago Mr. John T. O'Keefe, one of the Government operators at the signal station upon the Peak, returned to his post, taking with him upon a pack animal a quarter of beef. It being late in the afternoon his colleague, Mr. Hobbs, immediately left with the pack animal for the Springs. Soon after dark, while Mr. O'Keefe was engaged in the office forwarding night despatches to Denver and Washington, he was startled by a loud scream from Mrs. O'Keefe, who had retired for the night to an adjoining bedroom, and who came rushing into the office screaming, "The rats? the rats!" Mr. O'Keefe, with great presence of mind, immediately drew around his wife a scroll zinc plating, which prevented the animals from climbing upon her person, and, although his own person was almost literally covered with them, he succeeded in incasing both of his legs each in a joint of stove pipe, when he commenced a fierce and desperate struggle for the preservation of life, being armed with a heavy cane. Hundreds were destroyed on every side, while they still seemed to pour out with increasing numbers from the bedroom, the door of which had been left open. The entire quarter of beef was eaten in less than five minutes, which seemed only to sharpen their appetites for an attack upon Mr. O'Keefe, whose hands, face and neck were terribly lacerated. In the midst of the warfare, Mrs. O'Keefe managed to reach the office, from which she threw a coil of electric wire over her husband that sprang outward and spread itself over the room, then grasping the valve of the battery, she poured all its terrible power upon the wire. In an instant the room was all ablaze with electric light and hundreds were killed by the shock, when the sudden appearance of daylight, made so by the coruscation of the heavily charged wire, caused them to take refuge among the crevices and caverns of the mountain, by way of the bed-room window, through which they had forced their way. But the saddest part of the night's adventure upon the Peak is the destroying of their infant child, which Mrs. O'Keefe thought she had made secure by a heavy covering of bed clothing. But the rats had found their way to the infant (only two months old) and left nothing of it but the peeled and naked skull. Drs. Horn and Anderson have just returned to Colorado Springs from the Peak. It was thought at first that the left arm of Sergeant O'Keefe would have to be amputated, but they now believe it can be saved.

—The rule of red tape in New York city is sometimes attended with inconvenience. Last week somebody placed a dead cat in the vacant lot on Nineteenth street and Lexington avenue. By Sunday afternoon a policeman was found who consented to formally report the case to the Board of Health. The result: On Monday a citizen undertook to bury it. He dug a deep grave, and was about to lower the cat to its last home, when the funeral was interrupted by an officer, on the ground that it was violation of a city ordinance. The cat lies there awaiting the official fiat of the Board of Health for its removal. No one is allowed to approach it, but at a respectful distance he is allowed to see and smell it. The citizens consider this an example of "how not to do it," and, despairing because of the law's delay, have employed a small boy to "beat" the police, and to fraudulently abduct the cat and bear it away to green fields and pastures new. He will throw it into another vacant lot.

—A young lady from Deatsville went to Louisville one day last week to have a tooth drawn, and when the dentist asked if she would take gas she pulled out a bottle of whiskey and remarked: "This is the kind of gas we take." The tooth was "extracted without pain."—Nelson (Ky.) Record.

Graveyard Robbers.

We copy the following from a recent issue of the Portland Advertiser:

"For a long time past complaints have frequently been made that contributions of flowers deposited on the graves at Evergreen cemetery were removed as soon as left. Strict watch has been kept for these despoilers, resulting last Friday in the arrest of two women from the Mansion house in this city. This morning they were brought before Judge Knight, and after due examination, bound over to the superior court in the sum of $200 each. They were permitted to go on their own recognizance to appear as above. It is hoped this action may prove a valuable lesson to those unprincipled people who make a business of carrying away these tributes of affection, but if it fails even severer measures should be taken. The floral offerings of Decoration Day were removed in large quantities before the following noon."

If some of the petty pilferers who regularly steal flowers from the graves in the South cemetery could be brought up before the court and punished, or exposed by name in the public prints, it would be a good thing. For years it has been a practice with quite a number of persons who have friends buried there, to set out, upon and around their graves, choice flowers; and scores of bouquets are placed there every pleasant Sunday. Not a few of the cut flowers usually disappear before dark Sunday night; and those persons who from experience are aware to what an extent this most contemptible kind of thieving is carried on, are never astonished to find plants they set out one day stolen before the following sunrise. In one instance a large stone urn, filled on Thursday with growing plants of rare varieties by a lady whose husband is buried there, was found entirely empty on the following Sunday; but the urn having again been filled (with less rare plants) was afterward partially spared, only the choicest of the flowers being removed.

Jottings.

In the article headed "On Which Side," published in our issue of Wednesday, the types made our correspondent say "the S. P. C. A. managers do not deserve any material assistance." It should have read "desire."

On the first page will be found a poetical description of the formation of the Memorial Day procession, which will be read with much interest, and we do not question will be enjoyed by members of the various organizations that took part in the ceremonies of the day.

We feel very sorry to think our publication of "Reminiscences of the war" should lacerate the feelings of our neighbor, the Times, so much. We didn't print the article for that purpose at all, but merely as a matter of history. We are aware that it must make the northern democrats feel sore to have mention made of the manner in which the southern democrats tortured to death the Union prisoners, but we shouldn't think they would show their annoyance at it so plainly as they do.

The Temperance Reform Club will hold a grand rally at Rechabite Hall this evening at 7:45. Good speaking and singing, by reformed men and others. Seats free, and everybody invited.

The Heavy Artillery, Capt. Frank Williams, with the Naval Band, leave for Concord this morning to take part in the inauguration ceremonies.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 137.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

The Isles of Shoals were settled it is said as long as two centuries ago. The fishing business was extensively carried on there and the population was considerable. The Indians made depredations, carrying away captives. There are chasms in the rocks, and in one of them, Betty Moody secreted herself when the Indians came, and was safe. This is on Star Island. The place where she hid we saw when once on that Island.

A century ago the people were in great danger from the British. It was the time of the war, and their vessels were in every sea. Sometime in 1775 they came to the Islands and took two cows, belonging to a woman named Presley. They paid her, but as these cows were fed by her own hands and were pets to her, she grieved at having them thus taken.

Jan. 5, the Legislature appointed a Committee, net members, probably of Portsmouth, to go to the Shoals and inform the people that in their defenceless and exposed condition, they might be obliged to assist the enemy, and that it was absolutely necessary they remove, with their effects, to the main land, and if they did not do it within ten days after this notice, they must be brought off by authority.

This committee, Mr. Salter and Mr. Daniel, reported the 13th, that two days before they had performed their duty, and also numbered the inhabitants and found on Star Island 159, on Hog Island 49, on Smutty Nose 19. Total 227.

There is no record so far as we know, of the result of this action, but it is likely the people mostly, if not all, came off.

Dutch Manners.

A Dutch newspaper is a curious illustration of Dutch character. It is about two-thirds full of advertisements, of which the following are a few examples from a single paper: Marriages occupy a considerable space; some are simple announcements, others are a flourish on the part of the espoused—"To their friends and acquaintances—we, the undesigned, are married." Then come the advices of births, most of which tell the world that the lady has been brought to bed of "a well-shaped" child. Of these, all are signed by the husband, and they sometimes pour out a flood of affection on the lady. But the announcements of deaths are the most remarkable; some of them you shall hear. "To-day departed, after a sickness of ten days, my beloved wife. She has left me and her gray-haired mother in a state of despair. Weep with us, all who knew her—weep with my children. They have yet to learn of their loss, which they will learn too soon." Another, "My deeply-beloved wife died yesterday. She has left me a pledge of love only three weeks old. Bitter is my sorrow." Again, "In my old age sorrow has overtaken me. Yesterday evening my daughter died, aged seven-and-forty years. Those who knew her will know my grief, and those, too, who knew what she was to me. In the comforts of religion I put my trust." Again, "Our brave son is dead. He departed this life at——." Yet once more, "Our brave daughter is no more. She died last night, aged only twenty. What parents feel, who in two-and-twenty weeks have lost their only son and their only daughter, cannot be told by words. Friends of humanity! trouble us not with your consolations, but shed a tear with us in sympathy." "After a sickness of a few days, my beloved husband died to-day Deeply afflicted with my six children, I repose in the hope of his resurrection, and beg to recommend myself for the sale of coffee, tea, and such matters, to the general satisfaction."

Telegraphing Without Wires.

The Paris correspondent of the Independence Belge contains a most interesting account of the experiments of M. Bourbouze, of the Sorbonne, in telegraphing without wires. He proposes to utilize the electric currents passing through the earth, and has very completely demonstrated the feasibility of his plan. Two iron stakes were driven into the ground at a distance from each other of ten metres (eleven yards), and connected by a wire, to which was attached a galvanometer. The needle of the instrument remained motionless while the stakes were at the same depth, but as soon as one was driven farther into the soil than the other it was visibly deflected, and indicated the presence of a strong current of telluric electricity between the stakes. So strong, indeed, was the current so produced, without any battery and with the simplest of apparatus, that M. Bourbouze has for months utilized it in operating a machine that rings his bells and discharges other similar duties. A similar result has been obtained by connecting the wires of the galvanometer with a well or stream of water at one extremity, and a gas-jet, or even the earth, at the other. By way of practical experiment, M. Bourbouze, in November, 1870, during the siege of Paris, placed his galvanometer on the Bridge of Austerlitz, one wire communicating with the Seine, and the other attached to a plate of metal buried in the ground, and, at the pont Napoleon, his pile or battery, similarly connected, of 300 pairs; then each time that the circuit formed by the earth, the battery and the river was closed, the distant galvanometer accurately recorded the fact. The test was so satisfactory that the members of the National Government believed they had at last solved the great problem of holding communication with the departments outside of Paris by using the Seine as a gigantic natural cable. Some time was, however, necessary to prepare the scheme in its details, and when at last an agent was sent out of the city by balloon to carry it out, the armistice intervened and the project was dropped. Of late, however, M. Bourbouze has renewed his experiments, and it is understood that the German War Department has made the subject one of deep study, with a view to discovering and developing the best means of utilizing the great natural forces not as yet applied, or even perfectly understood.

The end sought—and seemingly attained, for with the results already reached it is only a question of time and ingenuity to secure their proper application—is the interchange of telegraphic signals without a wire, or rather without other wires than the short lengths needed to connect the galvanometer and pile, or battery, at either extremity of the lines with the earth and water.

Wau opened his mouth, sent the prisoned jet of water over the shirt in hand, squatted on a stool, and deliberately responded: "Hop Wau want be likee Melican man, eh? Then Hop Wau cut off pig tail, lettee whiskel grow on face, chew baccoo, sweal at stleet cal diliver, and lookee at pletty girl on stleet. Allee same Melican man, he? Then Hop Wau go out to saloon, spend money velly loose, get dlunk, say 'Whoop!' on stleet, gettee in police house! Tolmollow go lound allee soon, pay ten dollee and costs. Not muchee same as Melican man here; not muchee damme fool here!" and Wau Lee nearly smashed a fancy Joss and a counting-board in his excitement. And that is the reason that Cleveland's Chinese population is not represented at the Centennial.—Cleveland Leader.

—It is stated that the names of Indians always have reference to some event that was noticeable at the time of their birth. For instance, "Red Cloud's" romantic name is due to the great red cloud, ensanguined by the rays of the setting sun that hung over the western horizon on the evening when he was born. "Blackhawk" received his name from the hawk that swooped about the wigwam on his birth-night. This is all very pretty but throws little light on "Sitting Bull," "Bogus Charley," or "Young Man afraid of his Horses."

—The young prince of Servia is in a very uncomfortable predicament. He was married a few months ago, and the magnificence of the raiment provided for his bride was the talk of Paris. He dare not now venture outside his palace doors, for there is a pretender to the throne who is only too anxious to get a shot at the unfortunate young man whose father was assassinated. He must regret that his grandfather, who founded the dynasty, ever turned his attention from pigs to politics. He was a dealer in those useful animals when he made a revolution, assassinated the reigning Prince and took possession of the throne.

The True Medical Philosophy.

The remarkable cures of dyspepsia, constipation, general debility, intermittent and remittent fevers, nervousness, mental despondency, and a host of other ailments, by that popular botanic invigorant and alterative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, prove that to stalics, not deplete, the sick, is the true medical philosophy. Under the old system patients underwent a course of treatment that often had the effect of exhausting their few remaining energies Drastic purgation, and the administration of violent remedies with a weakening reaction, were frequently and most unnecessarily resorted to in cases where invigoration combined with mild regulative treatment was the sole desideratum. That this unwise mode of medication has been to a great extent abandoned is in no small degree due to the success which has attended the peerless remedy above named.

Asthma and phthisic are cured by Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam when all other remedies fail. 35 and 75 cents. Large bottles cheapest. $1000 for a case it will not cure.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

Kerguelen Island.

This island is in the South Indian Ocean, about half-way between the Cape of Good Hope and Australia, but well to the southward of both. It is rather an archipelago than an island, innumerable small peaks being grouped around and in the estuaries of a central mass of volcanic rock, about ninety miles long by fifty wide, and shaped somewhat likea spider, of which its numerous long promontories and peninsulas represent the legs. Being treel-se, barren, uninhabited, and uninhabitable, and situated in a region given over to boisterous gales and continual rain or snow, it is a country seldom visited. It was discovered about a hundred years ago, by the unfortunate Lieutenant Kerguelen, of the French marine, and about two years afterward found again by Captain Cook, who gave it the name of Desolation Island. During May, June, and July, 1840, Sir James Clark Ross remained there with the Erebus and Terror; and it is to this visit, and to the fact that Dr. Joseph D. Hooker was botanist to the expedition, that we owe our present full knowledge of the botany of the island. Had it not been long noted as a favorite breeding-place for the sea-elephant, and hence resorted to by sealers and whalers, it is doubtful whether any human being, other than the intrepid explorers already alluded to, would have cared to visit so desolate and forbidding a spot, until it came to be fixed upon as a locality whence the transit of Venus could advantageously be observed.

— If Victor Emanuel had curly hair he might readily be mistaken for a mulatto; his complexion is as dark as that of a Malay. He is fully six feet high, very broad shouldered, thick chested and muscular—quite the sort of a man one would picture for a soldier.

— Doubt is thrown upon the truth of the statement that "when a woman wills, she will; and when she won't, why there's an end on't," by a recent high-life wedding in New York. It is asserted that the bridegroom had taken "no" for an answer from the bride three times within five years, and yet she finally married him.

— There is a town in Maine where, after three days hard work, the citizens raised seventy-two cents for the widow of a man who was accidentally killed.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy

is no patent medicine humbug, got up to dupe the ignorant and credulous, nor is it represented as being "composed of rare and precious substances brought from the four corners of the earth, carried seven times across the Great Desert of Sahara on the backs of fourteen camels, and brought across the Atlantic Ocean in two ships." It is a simple, mild, soothing remedy, a perfect Specific for CATARRH and "COLD IN THE HEAD;" also for Offensive Breath, Loss or Impairment of the Sense of Smell, Taste, or Hearing, Watery or Weak Eyes, Pain or Pressure in the Head, when caused, as they all not unfrequently are, by the violence of Catarrh.

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the rapid sale of the article their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and the demand for the remedy became so great that it became necessary to open a branch office in Boston to supply the demand. Hundreds of testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life became almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay scarcely able to do anything. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefitted by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself entirely cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and they obtained very good results from them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a box, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,

Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, rendering me unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking Pills, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

PULMOCENE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxurious trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

With a Large Assortment of Display Type,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

Wouldn't Insure.

When Benjamin P. Gunn, the life insurance agent, called upon Mr. Butterwick, the following conversation ensued:

"Mr. Butterwick, you have no insurance on your life, I believe? I dropped in to see if I can't get you to go into our company. We offer unparalleled inducements, and—"

"I don't want to insure."

"The cost is just nothing worth speaking of; a mere trifle. And then we pay enormous dividends, so that you have so much security at such a little outlay that you can be perfectly comfortable and happy."

"But I don't want to be comfortable and happy. I'm trying to be miserable."

"Now look at this thing in a practical light. You've got to die some time or other. That is a dreadful certainty to which we must all look forward. It is fearful enough in any event, but how much more so when a man knows that he leaves nothing behind him! We all shrink from death, we all hate to think of it; the contemplation of it fills us with awful dread; but reflect, what must be the feelings of the man who enters the dark valley with the assurance that in a pecuniary sense his life has been an utter failure! Think how—"

"Don't scare me a bit. I want to die; been wanting to die for years. Rather die than live any time."

"I say, think how wretched will be the condition of those dear ones whom you leave behind you. Will not the tears of your heart-broken widow be made more bitter by the poverty in which she is suddenly plunged and by the reflection that she is left to the charity of a cold and heartless world? Will not—"

"I wouldn't leave her a cent if I had millions. It'll do the old woman good to skirmish around for her living. Then she'll appreciate me."

"Your poor little children, too. Fatherless, orphaned, they will have no one to fill their famished mouths with bread, no one to protect them from harm. You die uninsured and they enter a life of suffering from the keen pangs of poverty. You insure in our company and they begin life with enough to feed and clothe them, and to raise them above the reach of want."

"I don't want to raise them above the reach of want. Best thing they can do is to tucker down to work as I did."

"Oh, Mr. Butterwick! try to take a higher view of the matter. When you are an angel and you come back to revisit the scenes of earth, will it not fill you with sadness to see your dear ones exposed to the storm and the blast, to hunger and cold?"

"I'm not going to be an angel, and if I was, I wouldn't come back."

"You are a poor man now. How do you know that your family will have enough when you are gone to pay your funeral expenses and bury you decently?"

"I don't want to be buried."

"Perhaps Mrs. Butterwick will be so indignant at your neglect that she will not mourn for you, that she will not shed a tear over your bier."

"I don't want a bier, and I'd rather she wouldn't cry any."

"Well, then, s'posen' you go in on the endowment plan and take a policy for $5,000, to be paid you when you reach the age of fifty?"

"I don't want $5,000 when I'm fifty. I would not take it if you were to fling it at me and pay me to take it."

"I'm afraid then I shall have to say good-morning."

"I don't want you to say good-morning; you can go without saying it."

"I'll quit."

"Aha! now you've hit it. I do want you to quit, and as suddenly as you can."

Then Mr. Gunn left.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, JUNE 9, 1876.

"Election Day" at Concord.

Thursday was 'Lection Day at Concord, and the weather was clear and delightful. At an early hour people began pouring into the city in private conveyances. The morning trains arrived crowded to overflowing, with many extra cars, and bringing thousands of people from every section of the State. Before noon the business part of the city, the sidewalks, the public grounds, State House, and almost every available place was literally packed with men, women and children. The crowd was estimated as high as 20,000 people, and was one of the largest multitudes ever seen in Concord on inauguration day. The decorations were profuse and elaborate, and flags, streamers and mottoes were almost everywhere. At eleven o'clock the firing of a salute announced the arrival of the decorated special train from Manchester, bringing Governor Cheney and personal friends and the Amoskeag Veterans. As the Governor stepped from the train he was met by Gen. J. N. Patterson, Chief Marshal, who conducted him to the square, where his mounted staff were in waiting to receive him. The escort was pronounced the finest military pageant ever seen in New Hampshire. The Legislature assembled at 10 o'clock. The Committee appointed to count the votes for Governor reported that they had attended to their duty, and announced that Person C. Cheney of Manchester had been elected. The Senate then proceeded to the House of Representatives, where both bodies awaited the commencement of the inauguration ceremonies. At ten minutes past one the Governor and Council and guests passed up the north stairway into the Representatives' Hall. They were escorted by Sergeant-at-Arms Quint, and the Governor was attended by Hon. B. F. Prescott, the Secretary of State. The oath of office was administered to Governor Cheney in the usual form, after which he proceeded to deliver his message.

Political.

Ben Hill was not among the democratic mourners over the fate which Messrs. Knott and Hunton received at the hands of Mr. Blaine. He is reported to have said, in commenting on the debate privately, "I have been abused and vilified for not coming out of my contest with Blaine during the amnesty debate with colors flying. I fail to see that either of my two democratic friends who encountered Blaine to-day have achieved much credit or glory, or made Presidential candidates of themselves." Men cannot help entertaining a certain amount of respect for the wrong-headed, hot-tempered, reckless-talking Ben. Hill, and can easily believe him honest in his convictions, even though he was and is and boldly declares he always will be a rebel; but the miserably dishonest partizanship of Knott in suppressing Caldwell's dispatch, for no other reason than that it was favorable to Mr. Blaine, (for only an idiot could be hoodwinked by the lame excuses offered by Knott for not producing it at once, as was so promptly done with the Cheeseborough telegram which went against Schenck) shows the chairman of the judiciary committee of the democratic House of Representatives to be not only an unscrupulous trickster but a bungler as well, and that a man may be an excellent buffoon without being the least bit of a statesman or even a just and fair-minded man.

The indications now are that the inflationists in the democratic party will have things all their own way, in which case the talk about "democratic money" will refer to paper currency. The hard-money wing of the House has surrendered to the inflationists, a motion to permit the committee on banks and banking to report at any time having passed by a vote of 115 to 97, the object being to allow the early introduction of a bill to repeal the resumption act. The republicans voted solid against the motion, and sixteen democrats (including Mr. Bell of New Hampshire) and two independents voted with them.

There is absolutely nothing in the letters, taken by themselves, which inculpates Mr. Blaine in the least. They amount simply to this: that having had transactions with Mr. Fisher, involving agreements as to railroad bonds, he was exceedingly anxious to close the account. The charge made by Mr. Blaine as to the suppression of the Caldwell telegram, was in spirit true. Mr. Knott did not deny that a telegram had been received, nor that it exonerated Mr. Blaine, nor that it had been suppressed. What, and all he said, was, that he was not wholly sure that it came from Caldwell. So far as the proceedings of Monday are concerned, Mr. Blaine stands free from all injurious evidence; and Mr. Knott, and his colleagues on the committee, who knew of the receipt of the Caldwell telegram, stand in the position of men who were seeking, not the truth, and in a manly way, but who were attempting the destruction of a political opponent.—Providence Journal.

Charges of immorality and brutal treatment of the youths under his charge were preferred against Edward Ingham, superintendent of the State reform school of Connecticut, in the legislature of that State on the 6th. Mr. Ingham being a democrat, of course a motion to investigate the charges was tabled by the democratic House of Representatives.

Even those who are not satisfied with Mr. Blaine's explanation, and would probably never be satisfied in regard to him, express the opinion that Proctor Knott would have been a fortunate man to have stopped at Duluth.

News and Notes.

John McAleer, and his brother-in-law, named Doyle, of South Lee, Mass., were returning home from Lee, where they had got drunk, by way of the railroad track, when it is supposed they had a fight, and McAleer being left insensible on the track was run over by a train of cars and cut to pieces. Doyle notified McAleer's father that his son was lying on the track drunk, and the father going in search found the mangled remains scattered along the track.

The Old South Church of Boston was sold by auction on Thursday for $1440. It is to be removed in sixty days.

Mrs. Adeline Dodge, under sentence for attempting to murder a young man in Goffstown, has been pardoned by the Governor and Council.

The Mexican rebels lost 2000 men killed and wounded, and many prisoners, including three generals, in the battle of May 29. Gen. Cortina, who was a prisoner, has broken his parole, escaped, and issued a pronunciamento.

All the Fenian prisoners confined in Western Australia have escaped from there in the American whaler Catalpha.

"A beautiful female foot should be one-seventh the wearer's height." That's what the papers are saying. Suppose that foot to be well-proportioned, how long would it be?

Lightning-rod men have been operating at Shrewsbury, Mass., and swindling several farmers—one $400 worth—by getting them to sign notes. In one case the woman of the family happened to own the farm, and ordered them not to put up the rods, although they had her husband's order. They, however, put them up, and now they not only can't get their money, but, the lawyers say, they have no right to take the rods down.

The Newport (Vt.) Express reports that a Mrs. Wingate, wife of Rev. Mr. Wingate, who is now in Australia, eloped, a few days since, with George W. Day, a married man. They came to Littleton, in this State, where they represented themselves as man and wife, but were pursued by an officer and captured.

Complaints of the ravages of the Colorado beetle upon the potato vines have become general throughout New England as well as in the Middle States.

The New York Court of Appeals has decided that Stokes' term of imprisonment will not expire till next year.

Some months ago a sound of scuffling, accompanied by cries for help, was heard on Vaughn's bridge at Portland, and blood was found on the sill of a window in the bridge-covering next day; a murder was suspected, but no body could be found and no person was reported as missing. On the 7th inst. the body of a man, supposed to be Fred Brennan of Bartlett, in this State, was found beside the bridge, anchored by a large rock. Brennan was paid several months' wages just before the night the scuffling was heard on the bridge, and has not been heard of since.

Col. Fred Grant's family circle has been enlarged by the advent of a young lady boarder—weight ten pounds.

Advices from Halifax report the herring fishing at Magdalen islands as the most successful for years, over ninety vessels having secured full cargoes. The mackerel have not yet "struck in," and though the cod have, they are not abudant.

Edward Tatro, the young Frenchman in jail at St. Albans, Vt., charged with murdering Mrs. Butler, his employer's wife, has confessed killing her. He denies having attempted to forcibly outrage her, but acknowledges that he made improper advances, on which she attacked him with billets of fire-wood and finally with an axe, so that his killing her was virtually in self-defence. His story is believed only so far as the killing is concerned, as the corroborative evidence goes to show a most brutal murder of the woman for defending her honor.

The Fenian convicts whose escape from the penal colony of West Australia has been announced, were taken off by a whaler sent out on purpose to do the work. The captain was assisted by Fenian emissaries who went to Australia by steamer. Part of the plan was the breaking of the ocean telegraph cable between Australia and Java, which was done on the 27th of April.

Steamer Kate Dickson, owned by Capt. James Taylor of McKeesport, Pa., having been libeled by the deck hands at Louisville and subsequently at Cincinnati, escaped and was pursued by United States Marshal Harrington of Covington and overhauled at Maysville, Ky. The capture was resisted and Harrington shot dead by Taylor, and the latter was killed in the same way by the marshal's party.

A few weeks since it was announced that the summer residence of Edward Booth at Cos-Cob was sold by his creditors. It is now stated that he has sent $500 to the Shakespere Memorial Association at Stratford-on-Avon. People who fail now-a-days do singular things.

The opinion is general that the late Sultan of Turkey was murdered, in accordance with the time-honored custom of that country, the certificate of nineteen doctors to the contrary notwithstanding. Affairs in that quarter seem mixed—not very unlike the famous Schleswig-Holstein question, which nobody in the world could ever understand—all that is plain being Russia's desire to have the Turkish empire in Europe destroyed, and England's determination that it shall not be. Some of the "experts" predict war, and others say there is little danger of it.

A Reasoning Dog.

The Rochester (N. Y. Union tells the following story concerning "a medium-sized black-and-tan dog of unusual spirit and intelligence" owned in that city: "On a recent occasion, when out with its master, a good-sized woodchuck was discovered by the dog partially concealed under a large tree, and in such a position that it could not be dislodged by ordinary means, and could not be reached by the eager terrier, who was wild at the prospect of his prey escaping him. It occurred to one of the party that by pouring water in the burrow the ground hog would be forced to evacuate his quarters and give battle to the dog. A creek ran near by, and, finding an old tin pail, water was carried to the root of the tree and the 'chuck flooded out. His fate was soon decided by the dog, who is said to have shown more than ordinary satisfaction at the result, and from the after result must have taken a mental note of the means by which the burrowing animal was brought within his reach. This occurred several weeks ago and had almost passed from the recollection of the dog's owner, when it was recalled last week by the following strange, if true, incident: In taking his customary 'constitutional' in the woods, the gentleman not thinking of any such thing as the destruction of a woodchuck, was astonished to see his dog stop like a well trained setter on the bank of a small creek, and sniff eagerly at something on the other side. It hesitated but a moment and then dashed into the water and was soon digging with a vim at the root of an old tree and looking up anxiously toward his master as if conscious that the assistance of the latter was absolutely necessary to the success of his design on the woodchuck which he had found. His owner, not wishing to disappoint the dog, went over to see what was up. He found the situation to be similar to that of the occasion when a deluge enabled the dog to make away with his foe. But this time there was no pail at hand and it appeared as if the woodchuck would escape. In this emergency the dog suddenly disappeared, and it was not known where he had gone. He was absent five or ten minutes, and on making his appearance astonished his master by his frantic efforts to run along with an old tin preserve can, which he was carrying in his mouth, although it partially covered his eyes."

—A troop of performers, know in England as Treloar's London Imperial Clown Cricketers, are to visit America in August, and beside field performances, will give entertainment in theatres. They are said to be skillful cricketers and gymnasts, and very funny as clowns. The English press speak highly of their entertainments. There are fourteen or fifteen persons in the troupe.

—The Boston and Providence Railroad Company is trying an experiment for laying the dust on the road, which, as far as tried, is a success. Between the Canton and Sharon stations, for a short distance, oyster-shells have been strewn along the road-bed to the depth of two or three inches. This is the first effort of the kind on a New England road, and it will doubtless be appreciated.

—A seedy-looking individual was heard to remark to a friend: "My dear fellow, can't you lend me a black weskit for a time? My aunt Betsey died a few days ago, and I want to take a short mourn."

MARBLE WORK,

I would respectfully invite the people of Portsmouth and vicinity, who have lost relatives or friends, or have occasion for the use of any kind of stone work to call before purchasing elsewhere. My stock consists of Monuments, Headstones, Marble Posts, Mantel Shelves, Pier Tops, &c., the stock for which was bought and men employed to work the same, since the commencement of the present hard times. I have sufficient room in which to place more work, and do not wish to discharge any of my hands. For the above reasons, I feel confident that no one can undersell me with the same quality of good work. I take occasion to call the attention of all who are repairing or building houses, to my large stock of Mantel Shelves and Pier Tops!

I also have Three LOTS, enclosed with Granite Curbs and Posts, in Harmony Grove and Sagamore Cemeteries, which I will sell at a discount.

Jottings.

The following is a partial list of the last month's report of cases attended to by the S. P. C. A.: racing saddle horses; placing a vise on a dog's tail, causing great suffering; twenty-five horses, employed by the city, were found, many of them, in a miserable condition, suffering from galls and sores, old and otherwise disabled, and compelled to do ten hours' work in six; two horses overworked and underfed; a case of a runaway horse, caused by a lame back, which was relieved by a proper saddle; another case of a horse in a very sick, feeble condition and suffering from overwork and lack of proper care; a yoke of oxen driven from Maine, left standing in a storm from morning till late in the afternoon without food, sent to a stable and properly cared for whilst the owner slumbered in the lockup. Much other work has been done, and many cases adjusted without recourse to the law.

Foster, of the Dover Democrat, understands that the republicans propose to let Dover remain in four wards as heretofore, but that they will change the lines somewhat, so as to make three wards surely republican and the other one probably so. He concludes as follows. "Well, let them go ahead. They will probably secure some party advantages in this way, but if they try all summer they cannot succeed in making a more ridiculous political map of the city than the one now in existence."

The Woman's Temperance League have completed their arrangements for holding a Strawberry Festival on Tuesday evening at Rechabite hall, which has been fitted up very tastefully, and decorated. In addition to strawberries and cream, ice cream, cake, lemonade, etc., literary exercises will be a part of the evening's entertainment. The object is to assist in the reform movement.

The Times now tries to make "Dick" out a rival of Milton, Pope, Byron, Tennyson, Walt Whitman and the rest of 'em, by announcing him as the author of the poem on "the Procession." George, my boy, "Dick" don't write everything that appears in the CHRONICLE; how would you like it to have him accuse you of writing all the political editorials which appear in the Times?

The Portsmouth & Dover Railroad Co. are grading up around their freight depot and tracks, and making other improvements to meet the demands of their increasing freight business. A new passenger and a new freight depot are very much needed at this end of the line, and will probably be built during the present season. They have all the land needed, most conveniently located on Chestnut street, each side of Second, and we certainly hope this much needed improvement will be made.—Dover Enquirer.

The Boston Journal's report of the inauguration ceremonies at Concord says "the Portsmouth Heavy Artillery had on the finest uniforms in the columns." The company paraded fifty strong, and wore their full dress helmets for the first time on that day. They certainly made a very handsome appearance. The City Guards, Capt. Jacob Haddock, returned in the regular evening train, but the Artillery came home in a special train at a later hour. The Kearsarge Drum Corps is spoken of in the Journal's report as "a very large and excellent" one—as it is.

The Station Agent.

Mr. Thompson, the station agent at Cornville Centre, received a summons late the other evening to attend court at Dunby, the following day as a witness. In vain did he plead that he had no one to run the station in his absence, and that the summons came too late for him to send to headquarters for a substitute. So he flaxed around after some one whom be could entrust with his business, and who had sufficient acquaintance with the modus operandi of the station to afford reasonable assurance that no serious blunder would be committed.

It occurred to Thompson that Old Graby, who was in the habit of passing three-quarters of his time about the station, might have become somewhat familiar with the ordinary routine of business through long continued observation. Now Graby had always taken great interest in railroad matters, and had long felt that if he could once become connected with a railroad he should certainly distinguish himself and win rapid promotion. For some reason or other his attempts to join the service had been failures, but he saw in Thompson's offer a stepping-stone to his ambition, and in answer to a query regarding his ability to run the station, Graby gave warm assurances that he would equal the best.

In the morning Graby was at the station a full hour before train time, and received the keys from Thompson. Graby had been advised to look over the rules for station-agents, and he got the book down to while away the time while impatiently awaiting business. Finding in the rules that idle and disorderly persons were not permitted about the premises, Graby concluded to bounce Old Bolger (a dissipated codger who had arrived and taken his accustomed loafing-place), which feat was only accomplished after a squabble in which Graby's countenance suffered considerable disfigurement. He was now mad clear through, and was not much relieved at finding his shirt torn and bloody, and that it also wanted but fifteen minutes of the train time, for he remembered that he was to get the mail from the post-office, nearly a quarter of a mile distant. As he was about starting for the mail the passengers began to arrive, all avail themselves of the "ten-cent discount to such as purchase tickets before entering the cars." Whether to let the mail or the tickets go was now the question with Graby. The regulations said there must be no failure with the mail, while they as explicitly required the office to be open for the sale of tickets fifteen minutes before train time.

Before Graby had decided this matter the up freight train (which was to be passed at Cornville Centre by the passenger train, and which had been forgotten by Graby in the excitement) made known its proximity by a number of prolonged whistles. Pledging the Cole boy a quarter to fetch the mail, and ignoring the passengers, Graby ran for the switch and shifted it just as the freight engine was upon it. Hastening back to the station he found two women in an old-fashioned covered wagon in the back part of which was a trunk which must be taken out over the seat at the front. The trunk being large and long it was no fool of a job to get it out, especially as the horse was restive and by starting the wagon jammed Graby's hands between the trunk and wagon sides. Having finally succeeded in getting the trunk down upon the platform, two or three other wagons drove up, each having baggage to be checked. Hastily sucking the blood off his barked knuckles, Graby re-entered the station for the checks, when he found a score of persons around the office-window clamorous for tickets and animadverting upon his abilities.

Graby suddenly thought it best to make the sale of tickets before checking the baggage, so, throwing open the window, he faced the expectant crowd. Remembering Thompson's method of selling from left to right, he began at the side first mentioned and received a twenty dollar bill to change, which transaction drained the drawer of bills and script, and also the contents of his private purse. Having thus early exhausted his available funds, Graby could do nothing for the remainder of his customers, save where they could make their own change. This piece of financiering on Graby's part excited the ridicule of the crowd, which made not the slightest concealment of its disgust, while one of the number suggested that the least spark of common sense would have deferred the changing of the twenty dollar bill until the last, when all hands might have been ticketed. Declaring that they would not pay ten cents extra in the cars, the passengers renewed the application for checks. Just at this moment the Cole boy, who had returned with the mail, espied a cow upon the track, which information he imparted to Graby who pledged him another quarter to drive her off.

Almost at the same time Graby's attention was called to the fact that he neglected to reset the switch after the freight train had entered the siding. Dropping all ideas of checks Graby ran for the switch, reaching it only to discover that the key and all his others were shut up in the ticket-office, the door of which fastened with a spring lock. The conductor of the freight train, however, loaned him his switch key and matters were righted here, but the passenger train came right along and reached the station before Graby could get back. Comprehending the situation the conductor ordered passengers and baggage on the train, notwithstanding the lack of tickets and checks. Graby came up just as the train started away. He jumped upon the rear to ride to the switch, as he had seen Thompson do to let the freight train off the siding.

By the time the train reached the switch its speed was such that Graby dared not jump, and was carried to the next station, where as good luck had it, he found the down freight, and on it Thompson, who had received a telegram stating that the case had been postponed. True thankfulness beamed from Graby's eyes at the sight of Thompson's countenance, and Thompson feels the deepest gratitude that things were so mercifully preserved during his absence. Graby's form, however, no longer graces the station platform at Cornville-centre.

Cure for Drunkenness.

According to an article in the British Medical Journal, it has been found by Dr. Renger that the tincture of capsicum in ten drop doses is the best remedy to counteract that craving for alcohol which is the curse of all inebriates, preventing their return to rational conduct. This remedy has been tested by other physicians, and they report very favorably in regard to it. They give several instances of men of various ages who, half muddled, hung around low drinking saloons, or at home, when the liquor was shut up, would pick the lock, or when money was taken from them, would tipple on credit, whenever they had a chance. The best way to administer this remedy is to commence with five drops in a little syrup of orange peel before meals, increasing the dose of capsicum tincture to twelve drops. In one month most of them became quite other men, changing from half-idiots to men who attended to their business, and an interest in all that was going on in the world, which they before, being confirmed drunkards, did not, according to the habits of the latter class of unfortunates.

—Offenbach is to receive $30,000 a month for his Centennial performances in Philadelphia and New York,

—Colonel B—— was standing in the square, when he spied a farmer who some weeks ago had sold him a load of very "croaked" hay. The party in question is an active professor of religion, and a most zealous worker for his own pocket. The man's profession and practice being in such marked contrast, caused the Colonel to eye him with dislike. When he came up, the Colonel charged him with deception in the matter of the hay. The skinflint stoutly denied the charge. The Colonel drew himself up to full height and disdainfully observed, "I am a soldier, sir—not a liar." "So am I a soldier," whined the prometer of "crooked" hay. "You!" exclaimed the Colonel, in a tone of disgust. "What kind of a soldier are you?" "I'm a soldier of the cross," said the skinflint, with a flourish of the hand. "That may be," said the Colonel dryly; "but you've been on a furlough ever since I knew you."

—On a recent Sunday two girls, pupils of an Illinois seminary, were about leaving their room for church, when a dispute arose as to which had occupied the most time in dressing. The discussion waxing warm, a bet was made, to be decided on the spot, and three ether girls were called in as judges. The contestants removed all their clothing, and at the call of "time" sprang to the contest. For a few moments the air seemed filled with flying bits of feminine drapery—shoes, stockings, garters, etc.,—and the winner was all "hooked up" and had her bonnet on in seven minutes and thirteen seconds, the other girl coming out less than half a minute behind.

—Barnum's agent played a good joke on one of our grocers, who solicited him for an order of such groceries as the troop needed here. As an inducement, the grocer offered the agent $15 cash, which was accepted, and a written contract made. The agent pocketed the money, and sent an order for four bushels of potatoes, to be delivered Sunday morning. The grocer, finding this didn't pay, called on the agent, who told him he had filled his part of the contract by ordering everything he needed for Meriden in the grocery line. The grocer says circuses have an immoral tendency, and should not be encouraged.—Meriden Republican.

—A wag entered a smoking car on the Vermont Central a few days ago, while the train was in motion, and in an earnest and sympathetic tone said: "A lady in the next coach has fainted away. Has any gentleman here any liquor to give her?" Twenty-eight men in that car immediately rose to their feet, each with a flask in his hand. A more eloquent expression of sympathy could not be conceived.

—It was Prentice who declined to discuss the question of woman suffrage in his paper, because he had considered women, from the creation, as a side issue.

— It is related of a popular Philadelphia clergyman that he received two barrels of slippers from the ladies one Christmas.

The True Medical Philosophy.

The remarkable cures of dyspepsia, constipation, general debility, intermittent and remittent fevers, nervousness, mental despondency, and a host of other ailments, by that popular botanic invigorant and alterative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, prove that to vitalize, not deplete, the sick, is the true medical philosophy. Under the old system patients underwent a course of treatment that often had the effect of exhausting their few remaining energies. Drastic purgatives, and the administration of violent remedies with a weakening reaction, were frequently and most unnecessarily resorted to in cases where invigoration combined with mild regulative treatment was the sole desideratum. That this unwise mode of medication has been to a great extent abandoned is in no small degree due to the success which has attended the peerless remedy above named.

Asthma and phthisic are cured by Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam when all other remedies fail. 35 and 75 cents. Large bottles cheapest. $1000 for a case it will not cure.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Saw Snakes.

The stream known as Pine Creek has long borne the reputation of one of the most prolific of trout streams. During the latter part of last week our townsmen, Henry Morse and William Kimball, having received favorable reports of the May fishing, started for their favorite summer quarters. About half a day's fishing, they filled their baskets, and in capital spirits set out for their lunching place. The spot chosen was a ledge of perilous bank of rocks, shaded by a giant hemlock tree about thirty feet above the stream, and bounded on all sides, saving the one facing the water and a rather narrow passageway, by an unbroken rocky wall ten or twelve feet in height. A sufficient number of trout were soon dressed, the lunch basket was taken from its place of security and a blazing fire was kindled to cook the fish. But as the heat began to increase a colony of rattlesnakes grew uneasy and determined to investigate the cause of their disturbance.

Kimball at this time had descended from his elevated position in quest of some Bordeaux, while Morse was busy cooking fish. The snakes, several in number, had crawled meanwhile from their hiding places and were sounding the ominous rattle, familiar to man and beast alike, as the certain precursor of danger ahead. But the crackling of the twigs in the fire deadened the sound. It was not until Kimball was climbing upward that he took in the situation and apprised his brother sportsman of his danger. The snakes stood coiled, and prepared for attack. Morse sought hastily for a way of escape, but the reptiles stood in his path, and, save the deep pool far below him, he was hemmed in on every side by a precipitous wall of rock. His face blanched with fear, but his resolve was soon taken, and, leaving rods, luncheon basket, and well-filled creels, he sprang with a bound into the pool thirty feet below.

Fortunately, his descent was attended with no more serious results than a thorough drenching, for the water was deep, and being an expert swimmer, he found no difficulty in regaining a foothold on the opposite shore, on less dangerous ground. Both Morse and Kimball by this time concluded they had had sufficient experience for one day, and, without rods or fish baskets, with the bottle of claret as their only consolation, they lost no time in taking the nearest route for their hotel.—Rochester (N. Y.) Express.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy

It is a simple, mild, soothing remedy, a perfect Specific for CATARRH and "COLD IN THE HEAD;" also for Offensive Breath, Loss or Impairment of the Sense of Smell, Taste, or Hearing, Watery or Weak Eyes, Pain or Pressure in the Head, when caused, as they all not unfrequently are, by the violence of Catarrh.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, and the success that attended their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and in the Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay seven weeks. Just at this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained orders for them. I purchased one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything and received no benefit. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth "ten dollars in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this phase find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,

Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal of money, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammation of the Bowels, and Consumption, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Reidsdale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Riding After Sturgeon.

The inhabitants of Sturgeon city will be interested in the following account of a new use to which these monsters of the deep have been put. Sturgeons can be made available for other purposes than "Albany beef." They can be harnessed to boats and made to pull passengers at a speed which would shame a North river liner. Mr. Robert L. Pell, residing near West Park on the Hudson, has made an experiment in utilizing a sturgeon, from which he extracted much entertainment for himself and visitors. Having caught a fine fish of the kind, nine feet long, it occurred to him that it was sufficiently powerful to draw a boat with at least one man. The fish was therefore secured until a leather and rope harness could be attached to his body in a way which prevented its slipping back of the fins. The fish was placed in an artificial lake, about a quarter of a mile long, on the grounds of Mr. Pell. In order to obtain the services of the sturgeon when needed, a pair of rope reins, eighteen feet long, were attached to the harness, and these were fastened to a large cork float, which swam upon the water. A boat five and a half feet long and two and a half wide was then constructed. It could contain but one man, and in that Mr. Pell took his seat, and attached the chain at the bow to the floating cork. The sturgeon soon began to move, and the moment he realized that a further impediment existed to his movements, he shot frantically ahead. The boat swayed to and fro, and the spray, dashing furiously from the prow, flew in every direction. Frequently the gunwale was an inch or two below the water's edge, but such was the rapidity of motion that the water had not time to overflow it. The lake being but seventeen feet deep, and reins eighteen feet long, there was no danger of being pulled under the water by the diving of the fish, and the career of the boat was uninterrupted. The sturgeon kept near the sides of the lake, and swam four times around without slacking his pace. He then rose to the surface, rolled on his back, and exposed his white stomach to the sunshine, as it to say, "I have swam long enough, and am not going any further." Mr. Pell, satisfied with his experience, then detached the boat from the float, and landed. The fish soon again disappeared. At each subsequent sail, whether by Mr. Pell or any one else, the fish would rush regularly four times around the lake, and no more. He would then, as at first, regularly roll over on his back and rest. A neighbor of Mr. Pell caught a large sturgeon, and imitated his experiment in the river. Matters worked well for a few moments, but it suddenly occurred to the sturgeon to dive. This, the river being deep, he could easily do. To the dismay of his owner, under went the cork float, and a violent jerk at the prow of the boat was a warning to jump into the stream. The boat went down, and was lost to sight for several minutes. That was the beginning and end of harnessing sturgeon as a river pastime. Albany (N. Y.) Times.

— "Speaking of specie resumption," said one man to another, "do you know that there are 586,195 silver dimes in a barrel?" "Is that so?" exclaimed the other in a whisper—"sh—keep still!" And then, cautiously dragging his friend into a more secluded spot, he gasped in his ear: "Where's the barrel? I want to resume!"

— The official records of marriage licenses in Chicago, during the past two years, show that only about one in twenty of the wedded couples are native-born Americans.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1876.

The Governor's Message.

The address opens with an appropriate allusion to the fact that this is the Centennial year of our National history, Gov. Cheney remarking that while we are prone to conclude that we have fallen upon degenerate times, the virtues of our fathers ceasing to control our actions, he is disposed to pass a more charitable judgment upon the present and to take a more hopeful view of the future.

In placing before the legislature an abstract from the report of the State Treasurer, Gov. Cheney remarked that the credit of the State is undoubted, the State bonds commanding a high premium in the market, and in order that the State should maintain its high reputation in this respect he recommended the raising by taxation of the same amount as last year, namely, $400,000, which sum, by limiting of the Constitutional Convention and not materially increasing the usual appropriations, will suffice to meet all demands upon the State and leave a reasonable amount for the reduction of its indebtedness.

The report of the Bank Commissioners shows that the number of savings banks is sixty-eight. In regard to the recommendation of the Commission that the tax upon these banks be reduced, the Governor suggests that a reduction be made only on loans upon real estate, the locality of which shall be confined to the State. The whole amount of deposits is $31,198,064.16, an increase of $989,578.45. The number of depositors is 100,191, an increase of 3253. Investments in city, town and county bonds have increased $882,612 15, while investments in railroad bonds have decreased $137,442.47. There is but one bank of discount, the Salmon Falls Bank of Rollinsford, doing business under a State charter, its capital being $50,000. It circulates no bills of its own. It is prosperous and pays a dividend of 10 per cent.

Special attention is called to the report of the Warden of the State Prison, and the Warden's request that better provision be made for the care and safe keeping of the prisoners is emphasized. The erection of a new prison would be an advantage to the State.

The Reform School is spoken of as in good condition, and the usual appropriation of $6000 to defray current expenses is recommended.

The movement for the holding of a Constitutional Convention is reviewed, and the Governor suggests as the most important changes to be made in the Constitution: First, the abolition of the religious test; second, a change in the mode of making future amendments; third, a reduction of the number of Representatives and an increase in the number of Senators; fourth, a change from annual to biennial elections and sessions of the legislature. The last-named change he deems of paramount importance, inasmuch as it would very largely diminish the cost of the State Government and afford no small relief from the burdens of taxation, while it would meet all the real necessities of the people.

The question of education is discussed, and the benefits flowing out of the common school system pointed out. In a population of 318,300, the number of persons over ten years old who cannot read is only 7618, or only about 2 1-2 per cent. of the entire population. Still the system may be susceptible of improvement. Special attention is invited to the report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

In speaking of the militia, Gov. Cheney said that the abolition of the system of equipments, parade and drill of the entire enrolled militia of the State, effected a quarter of a century ago, was a step beyond the bounds of prudence, crippling the military power of the State. A wise economy in State expenditure is at all times to be commended; but it would seem to be the part of true wisdom to foster, even at some expense, within reasonable bounds, the military spirit among the people. This can only be done by extending such encouragement to the volunteer military organizations already existing as shall lead them to feel that their services are appreciated, and by encouraging the formation of other companies to the extent contemplated by the existing statutes. These statutes limit the number of the militia to two thousand, and provide for their enlistment from the several counties in proportion to their population. There are in the State at the present time seven companies of infantry, five companies of artillery and one company of cavalry, numbering in all eleven hundred and ninety men. The Governor hopes that by 1879, to which time the statute requiring the annual encampment of the volunteer militia is suspended, the other expenses of the State will be so reduced that the cost of these encampments and parades can be borne without seeming burdensome to the people.

Gov. Cheney then speaks of the great demand of the hour for retrenchment and reform. It is for the legislature to say when and how the State can curtail its expenditures. The Government fortunately has always been administered simply and with marked economy as compared with some other States. Money appropriated has been honestly applied, a fact which should be a matter of just pride, and undoubtedly to be attributed in part to that interest in public and political affairs which is a marked characteristic of the people, and which always brings out a heavy vote in our elections. The characteristic has sometimes mistakenly been cited as an evidence of a low state of political morals. Gov. Cheney thinks, on the contrary, it is every way creditable, and what might be expected of a people numbering fewer persons in proportion who cannot read and write than any other State in the Union—a people among whom scarcely a family can be found without its newspaper. Such a people naturally exercise a watchful care over their public servants, and are quick to detect want of capacity for and fidelity to the public trusts.

In conclusion the Governor said it will be well to remember that the eyes of such a people are upon us. Bespeaking prudence, moderation and a high sense of individual responsibility on the part of all, he pledged his heartiest co-operation in endeavoring to promote the interests of the State, and especially the exercise of his most careful and impartial judgment in considering measures submitted for his approval.

Bristow and "Grantism."

The New York Tribune, which has been (and is) in favor of Mr. Blaine, says:

Mr. Bristow's managers stand greatly in need now of such support from Mr. Blaine as they have of late seemed anxious to throw away. If, instead of fighting each other, these two elements of opposition to Grantism had during the past two months contented themselves with fighting their common enemy, there might have been a chance for combination.

We have never fully understood what was meant by the term "Grantism"—and don't now, for that matter—but have always supposed it was a fling at the President's style of running his administration to suit himself, and appointing his Cabinet and other officials from the men he personally knew, instead of taking the disinterested advice of the democratic papers and politicians and such "independent" sheets as the New York Sun and Boston Herald. Why the "independent" and democratic press should so fiercely vilify James G. Blaine it is easy to see; they fear his nomination more than that of any other man in the republican party; and their loud praises of Mr. Bristow, as the only simon-pure reformer (except Tilden) in the country, a failure to nominate whom will be certain ruin to the party, has the same aim—to weaken Mr. Blaine. Did they think Mr. Bristow had any chance for a nomination they would hurl mud at him as persistently as they have at the Maine statesman.

But how any paper, republican, democratic or mongrel, can make Mr. Bristow out as an opponent of "Grantism"—whatever that may be—we can not see. On the contrary, we cannot but regard him as a perfect exemplar of that mysterious and hence fearful thing. He was selected by Grant, not by the politicians, just as Belknap was selected by Grant; from the same class of men as Belknap—Grant's personal, army friends; and for the same reasons, viz.: that he was personally known to Grant as a brave soldier and believed by him to be an honest man. Both Bristow and Belknap, like many others of President Grant's appointees, were wholly unknown to the country at large until his nomination of them to office made them known; both were noted men in their own States,—Bristow as a republican, Belknap as a democrat, each as a brave warrior in defence of the Union; but the question, "Who is B. H. Bristow?" was asked on all sides, when he was nominated, just as the same was asked concerning Belknap, Borie and many another whose name has since become familiar. The Cincinnati Commercial, a bitter denouncer of "Grantism" and at present a red-hot advocate of Mr. Bristow's nomination, at the time he was appointed ridiculed and vilified Grant for making the appointment, and said: "Now we think of it, why couldn't Babcock or Boss Shepherd have been appointed Secretary of the Treasury?"

That Belknap was not able to withstand the temptation to make money improperly out of his official position, does not destroy the parallel; for if "Grantism" is to be blamed for the misdeeds of one official of Grant's selection, then "Grantism" must in common fairness receive the credit for the good deeds of another official, also of Grant's selection. Gen. Belknap, believed by Grant to be an honest and fearless man, was by him made Secretary of War, and betrayed his trust. Gen. Bristow, believed by Grant to be an honest and fearless man, was by him made Secretary of the Treasury, and has honestly and fearlessly performed the duty he was appointed by the President to do. For the two years he has been known to the nation he has done his duty well; but what particular claim that gives him over men who have been before the public many more years and performed their duties equally as well as he, we cannot perceive,—nor in what particular he represents the "opposition to Grantism" we have heard so much about.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10, of the Revised Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in our city to aid them in the execution of their duty:

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city.

SEC. 15. The Health Officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein: and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said Health Officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel, or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue, or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove, or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substance.

The Temperance Reform Work.

Messrs. Editors: There is a large number of our good towns-people whom we cannot reach upon this subject of Temperance save by the pen; so we seek the medium of your columns for the purpose of appealing to the heads and the hearts of this class to whom we allude, in behalf of a work that intimately concerns every man, woman and child in our city. It is a hackneyed topic, to be sure, but none the less important, because of that. It is trite solely on account of its alarming ever-presence. Intemperance has not gone down at our bidding. We are making good headway now, however, and, humbly imitating the example of the most fearless champion of Christianity that ever lived, who told his old Corinthian friends that whatever they might expect from him to the contrary, he was determined to know nothing else but Jesus Christ and Him crucified, we propose to know nothing save the cause of temperance and a study of the best means for promoting a thorough reform in this city. This may seem a little fanatical, but if the work be invested with the importance that we claim for it, it is worthy of the best gifts that any one can bring to it.

Its claims are numerous and weighty. We do not propose to enumerate them, as they are too well known to the intelligent reader to need it. We take it for granted that none will undertake a defence of the liquor traffic. We also take it for granted that the class is very small who will soberly and conscientiously claim that liquor drinking is harmless or at all justifiable.

With these premises, we claim that the work which a certain few have in hand is worthy not only of the attention of our men and women of influence and wealth, but it demands their hearty co-operation and support,—for just two important reasons.

1st. The abolition of rum-selling (and in using this term we include all alcoholic liquors) will greatly lessen the cost of governing the city, besides greatly abating the county tax, now made frightfully large from the presence of so many criminals at our Houses of Reform. We won't mention the State tax, which must, of necessity, be affected more or less by the number of prisoners at County and State charge. Two advantages are gained, as a rule, by reforming a man: he ceases to be a pauper and becomes a producer. In other words, instead of being a burden upon society he is made a help towards bearing its burdens.

2d. It is a moral duty incumbent upon every man, and laid down by an undisputed authority, to help his weaker fellow-man to the same extent that he himself would like to be aided were he similarly circumstanced. Now, no one will or can gainsay the assertion that there are scores of poor unfortunate men in our city who are abject slaves to their appetites for rum, and who would gladly leave off their habits had they the power so to do. Some of the worst of these have left off and stand as firm as a rock today;—which proves that, with similar assistance, others can do the same. We venture the statement that there does not live in the city of Portsmouth one drunkard who would not leave off drinking if approached by the right influences. To put it in another form—every person has some other person or persons in whom he has confidence and by whose influence he is led, to a great degree. Especially is this true of those who drink liquor. Their very passion makes them the pliable subjects of moral control. So it comes to this; that it is only those who drink moderately, or lightly, or temperately,—as you please,—who really want to drink. And we are constrained to remark that it is utter selfishness that prompts them to a willingness to sacrifice their fellows for the sake of reserving to themselves the privilege of taking a glass of liquor when they wish it.

You say, moderate drinker, there is nothing new in the above arguments; that they are utterly devoid of originality. We are fully aware of it; but that is only an argument in our favor. It is a stinging rebuke to you that you have so long withstood the mute appeals of your unfortunate brothers. Day after day and week after week have passed, and while the very air we breathe has been pregnant with a spirit of temperance reform, you have stood listlessly by, hesitating to lift your voice or your hand in favor of your struggling fellow-men. It is not our purpose to censure or scold. We have the charity to believe that our fellow-citizens who stand aloof from us and who ought to help us in this crisis are blind to the true condition of the case. They do not see it in the light that a good total abstinence lamp will give to it!

But we have trespassed upon your limits, Messrs. Editors, and must close, appealing to our good friends who are reputable and respectable, and simply asking their attention to this matter. Sit down a few minutes and think. Think what claims this cause has upon you, and the advantages God has given you. Then, after you decide, act according to your best convictions of duty, and we will abide the result.

C. W. G.

Jottings.

The Improved Order of Red Men has a Lodge, or Wigwam, or Tribe—we forget exactly what they call it—in this city, which numbers many of our reputable citizens among its members. It is a secret society, so curiosity concerning its aims and ceremonies is quite proper; and we therefore fancy the following expose of the secrets of the order will be appreciated by outsiders—and members, too: "A gentleman of color, lately arrived in Nevada, who had been scanning with evident curiosity a Digger squaw and her pappoose, the latter being a bright little half-breed with unmistakable indications of negro blood, exclaimed, 'Clar to goodness, if da ain't one of dem! Heard o'em all my life, but never seed one till dis minute, and it's only a little one—one of dem Improved Red Men! Never knew what dey ment befoe.'"

At a republican caucus held in Eliot, on Tuesday evening, June 6, Burleigh delegates were chosen to attend the Congressional convention at Portland, June 29th, by a vote of 81 to 64.

On Thursday (inauguration day) evening the Portsmouth Heavy Artillery, with the Marine Band, serenaded Gov. Cheney, Hon. E. H. Rollins and Ex-Gov. Stearns, at Concord. Gen. Aaron F. Stevens acknowledged the compliment, on behalf of the Governor, by a speech, and the company were invited in to partake of a collation. The Globe reporter says: "The company made a splendid appearance, and their fine marching was the admiration of assembled thousands."

Wong Chin Foo, the eloquent Chinese lecturer who spoke here about a year ago, will deliver his new lecture on "Budhism contrasted with Christianity," at the Temple on Sunday evening.

An anti-Burleigh man writing from Eliot to the Portland Press, states that the Burleigh men voted double, ran democrats through to vote for Burleigh delegates, and otherwise didn't do the square thing at the republican caucus; and that their opponents, finding they could get no fair show, withdrew and organized another caucus, and elected a full set of delegates to the various conventions.

St. Paul Commandery, Knights Templar, of Dover, have accepted an invitation from St. Alban Commandery of Portland, to visit that city on the 23d and 24th inst., to join in the celebration of St. John's day. The Portland Commandery have also invited the Worcester Commandery to be present upon the same occasion.

The beautiful and costly soda-fountain at H. W. Briant's drug store attracts much attention. Soda-water weather seems to have arrived, too.

The steamer Appledore towed the Appledore House landing stage to the Shoals on Thursday.

The CHRONICLE's man says he didn't write that "pome."—Times.

You're another. We didn't say anything of the kind.

We see it stated that "the republican caucus of Kittery, Me., has chosen nine delegates to the district convention favorable to the renomination of Hon. John H. Burleigh for Congress." Guess not. The successful ticket received 191 out of 232 votes, and the list of delegates is headed with the name of M. F. Wentworth. Now it may be that our friend Gen. Wentworth has parted with his good sense and proposes to support Burleigh, but we don't believe it—and won't till he tells us of it.

There will be religious services on Market Square, on Sunday, at 6 o'clock P. M.

Murray's "Railroad Circus" is coming, and will be here on Wednesday, June 21.

The Committee of the Woman's Temperance League, having in charge the Strawberry Festival to be held next Tuesday evening, invite donations of fruit and cake from friends of the cause. Persons willing to contribute in that line, can send their donations to Rechabite Hall any time during Tuesday.

The Service of Praise at the Bow Mission on Sunday will be the last service there for the season, the approach of hot weather rendering it advisable to close the services until September. A collection will be taken at the close of the meeting.

Book Notices.

The Portsmouth Guide Book, published and for sale by J. H. Foster, is a neat volume of 150 pages, bound in flexible covers and of a handy size to carry in the pocket. The author's preface is signed with the initials of a lady of culture, taste, talent and marked ability as a writer, and the book shows much research and careful and judicious collation of facts and traditions. To the transient visitor this little work will be invaluable, and every page has something of interest to citizens; there are but few, even of the oldest residents, but can learn much of the local history of this ancient city from its pages. We quote from the preface of the book, as follows:

"The claims of Portsmouth to the notice of antiquarians are scarcely inferior to those of any city in our Union, and its Revolutionary record stands so high, that it well deserves more thorough research than is possible in so small a volume as the present. The plan is taken from some European guide-books; the city being divided into convenient walks, in the course of which mention is made of all the places of interest; and at the close of the walk a concise history of each is given. Attention has been mainly directed to the old houses yet standing, and to some of those now demolished, whose site is still known; and a brief history of such has been presented, as far as the writer has been able to ascertain it. The chief sources from which historical information has been drawn, are the collection of Provincial papers of New Hampshire, the Annals of Portsmouth by Nathaniel Adams, now entirely out of print, and the two volumes of Rambles about Portsmouth, by Chas. W. Brewster, a work too well known to need praise here, and in which the reader will find more extensive information on these subjects than this volume can contain."

We have received from the well-known publishing house of Roberts Brothers, Boston, a new book by Miss Louisa M. Alcott, entitled Silver Pitchers,—a charming little volume of short stories, part of which have appeared before in another form; but this does not detract from their interest, as who has not read and re-read her Little Women, and taken fresh delight at each perusal? but it is unnecessary for us to more than allude to the publication of a new book by Miss Alcott to induce her numerous readers to procure a copy. For sale by J. H. Foster; price $1.25.

We have also received from the same firm, For Summer Afternoons, a collection of short stories by Susan Coolidge, author of What Katy Did and other works. This is a handsome little volume, bound in flexible cloth, gilt lettered, with red edges. For sale by J. H. Foster; price $1.25.

Aldermanic.

The application of George Thompson for leave to remove a tree in front of building No. 57 State street, and the petition of C. E. Walker & Co. and others for the repairing of Water street, between State street and Liberty Bridge, were referred to the committee on streets.

The committee on fire department, to whom was referred the subject of constructing a reservoir at Puddle Dock, reported recommending that a drain be laid in the middle of the Dock to the foot of Atkinson street, with connection to several tanks to be placed on each side of the Dock. The report of the committee was accepted, and the recommendation adopted.

The monthly pay rolls for May were approved and ordered to be paid.

Adjourned for two weeks.

Political.

A colored man, from Kentucky, referring to Bristow, says: "The man who stood up in the Senate of Kentucky, twelve years ago, and advocated a general system of taxation for the education of negro children, must be pretty sound."

Apparently the inflationists have carried the day against the judgment of the more "solid" men. And so they will carry the day, more or less openly, at St. Louis. We do not complain; we state a fact. That which is desirable is that the real purposes of the democrats shall be so unmistakably exhibited as that the people shall know precisely what they intend. If, then, this nation shall put them in power, it will exercise an indisputable right to its own great if not irrevocable injury.—Providence Journal.

—Father Homan, a Catholic priest of Cincinnati, has been missing for a fortnight past, and various rumors have been afloat as to the cause of his absence. Archbishop Purcell, in a published card, explains that no one will lose anything pecuniarily by the departure of the priest, and denies that he had intention of joining a religious order. But the mystery is partially cleared up by the statement that the Misses Collins, who formerly did business in the city, disappeared about the same time as the priest. He was their spiritual adviser and confessor. The priest is about 27 years of age and handsome, the ladies 29 and 30, and plain.

—M. D. Conway is the authority for the following anecdote connected with the late Lady Stanley: Last year Lady Augusta Stanley's parrot escaped, and the Dean and a number of the clergy, including the Archbishop, who were with him at the time, went out into the garden to find the bird. The search was in vain for a time, but presently a voice came from the trees above, saying, "Let us pray." It was a familiar voice, and Lady Stanley laughed; then the Dean laughed, and finally the whole ecclesiastical group roared, as the parrot cry came again with unction, "Let us pray!"

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

JOHN PEARSON, Jr.,
Newburyport, Mass.

In justice to myself, and that those who prefer

PEARSON'S FAMILY PILOT BREAD

may obtain what is desired, I shall occasionally publish the names of those who keep it for sale in Portsmouth, as follows:

Daily Chronicle.

—One of the most peculiar criminal cases of late years was recently concluded at London. The facts are these: A woman named Helen Smee advertised in the morning journals asking for the services of some medical man thoroughly versed in chemistry, and promising ample compensation for his trouble. She, of course, received numerous answers, and among them one from a young physician named William Knighton Vance, to whom she replied. During the correspondence Mrs. Smee informed Vance that she wanted a drug to take away the life of one whose death would be of the utmost benefit to a dearly-loved friend. Her purpose to commit suicide became clearly apparent, and Vance, who appears to have been an excellent toxicologist, fully described the operation of hydrate of chloral in large doses, strychnia and other vegetable and mineral poisons. The question of his remuneration then arose. The lady sent some money, but Vance said that his reasonable fee would be $350, and as he had been in practice but a short time he would be unable to file so large a claim against her estate after decease. He suggested, therefore, that Mrs. Smee should send him a note or letter acknowledging her indebtedness for that sum for money lent, and to provide in her will for its payment. By one of those strange chances which so often discover crime, one of the most compromising letters was misdirected and opened by the proper Post Office official for return to the writer. The man was sharp-witted, perceived the contemplated crime, the police were communicated with, the parties arrested, tried and condemned; Vance to eighteen months' imprisonment, and Mrs. Smee to six months.

—For some months a New Yorker has had an idea of offsetting the annual "Fat Men's Convention" at Put-in-Bay by a Fat Women's Convention at Saratoga or Long Branch. Several persons to whom he mentioned the subject encouraged him to go on, and recently while crossing the river to Brooklyn, he had a chance to practically demonstrate the failure or success of such a scheme. There was a fat woman aboard, and she seemed so good natured that the citizen hitched along up and began: "Excuse me, madam, but I have an idea in my head. I have been thinking for some time past that a convention of fat women at some central point, say along in July, would not only be a novel thing, but that a heap of greenbacks could be made out of it." She smiled, and he thought he had a fat thing. She rose up, and he thought she was going to offer herself as the foundation of the proposed convention. But she didn't. She knocked his hat off, seized his hair, banged his head against the boat and twisted his neck in many different directions; and it wasn't a minute before he was convinced that he had been barboring a delusive theory. When she sat down again, hardly breathing the faster for her exercise, he shot for the bow of the boat, and she observed: "Folks ought to know how much other folks weigh before sassin' 'em."

is no patent medicine humbug, got up to dupe the ignorant and credulous, nor is it represented as being "composed of rare and precious substances brought from the four corners of the earth, carried seven times across the Great Desert of Sahara on the backs of fourteen camels, and brought across the Atlantic Ocean in two ships." It is a simple, mild, soothing remedy, a perfect Specific for CATARRH and "COLD IN THE HEAD;" also for Offensive Breath, Loss or Impairment of the Sense of Smell, Taste, or Hearing, Watery or Weak Eyes, Pain or Pressure in the Head, when caused, as they all not unfrequently are, by the violence of Catarrh.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and for all I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About three weeks ago I saw Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefitted by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained the agency for them. I enclose one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.36 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD, Care Watson & Gannett.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Trouble for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they are a blessing to thousands as those who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully, MRS. B. T. LANE.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I sent two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefitted. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

— AND —

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above prescribed.

SEC. 6. LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

A STRANGE ADVENTURE.

Orrville was one of those sober little American towns which a certain class of novelists so delight to select as the scene of their romances, and which frequently lie asleep for so long a period of time that it is a positive blessing when something out of the ordinary course of events happens, to awake them out of their state of lethargy.

Orrville had been asleep for almost twelve years, when an event occurred which, together with the attendant incidents, completely aroused the whole town.

Orrville was situated on Lake Wanona, one of the most charming little sheets of water in our inland States. In a secluded valley, shut out, as it were, from all the rest of the world by the surrounding hills, with a solitary majestic mountain keeping silent vigil over the slumbering scene, lay the beautiful lake, and, on its margin, the miniature town. The spot was all that a poet might fancy, or a romantic lover sigh for; and when there was advertised: "A new summer resort, the Orrville House at Orville," with every accommodation, etc., it is not surprising that many persons, who had been struck by the surpassing beauty of the place, as they caught a flying glance of it in the whizzing train, should respond immediately to the opportunity, and engage to spend the summer or autumn months at so charming a resort.

Among the earlier guests at the Orrville House, were Charles Lacy, a talented young barrister of limited means, Col. Harris and his niece, Mattie Harris, and a Mr. Van Haven, a handsome young merchant of New York.

Charles Lacy and Mattie Harris had been playmates in their childhood; but the former had removed from his native place in his fifteenth year, and had never met the sweetheart of his boyish days until time had transformed him into the full statue of a man. Both were now so completely changed, that they met at Orrville as entire strangers, and were only recognizable to one another by the mention of their names and places of residence. The acquaintance, thus renewed, ripened into ardent love, and Charles Lacy considered himself the luckiest fellow on earth.

"Did you hear the news, Mattie?" asked Lacy, one morning, as his betrothed settled herself at the breakfast table by his side.

"No; what is it?"

"Johnson & Co., bankers in this town, have been robbed of over one hundred thousand dollars?"

"You don't say so! When did it occur?"

"Some time during the earlier part of the morning. Thief, whoever he is, made a pretty fair haul of it—left the firm with a very small sum for its own pocket-book. It was a private banking-house, and involves many of the leading persons of the town."

"And they haven't secured the guilty parties?"

"No; and are not likely to do so, either. Men who take such goodly sums as this, generally secure a safe avenue of escape. But I can tell you this," he added, lowering his voice, and inclining his head toward hers; "suspicion falls on the Orrville House, but no one individually, as far as I am aware of."

Just then a waiter placed a letter by his side saying: "Something for Mr. Lacy."

It read thus:—"Come to Dalton at once. Your presence is needed immediately at Mr. Greenup's. Do not delay. A. H.

"What is this? Come to Dalton at once! A. H. Who can that possibly be? But I'll go."

"I'm called away for a little while, Mattie," said he, in explanation, replacing the note in the envelope, "but expect to be back soon. I must go forthwith;" and pressing her hand, he left the breakfast-room, hurriedly packed a few necessary articles in his valise, and was at the station just in time to catch the morning train.

* * * * * *

It was evening. The calm round moon smiled upon the placid little lake in all her pensive glory. Nature breathed her soft musical murmurings, and everything seemed to whisper "Peace, peace!"

But the heart of Mattie Harris knew anything but peace as she left the gay crowd of thoughtless dancers in the brilliantly-lighted hotel, for an atmosphere more in harmony with her saddened spirit. She wandered listlessly down to the water's edge. A little boat lay moored there. She seated herself in it, where she felt she could be undisturbed in her lonely meditations. Her thoughts soon found utterance:

"What a change!" she murmured—"what a change from our happy condition of a week ago! I can hardly realize it! A bank robbed, and Charles arrested as the perpetrator of the robbery and thrown into prison! How could they ever suspect him? Yet the circumstances are very mysterious, and a hasty investigation points to him. It is evident to me, though, that he only left Orrville temporarily—that he was really called away. Strange that he should have destroyed the letter, and that it turns out there is no such person as Greenup in Dalton! It is not at all strange that he should have become excited when a couple of men laid their hands on him as he was getting out of the train, and told him he was a thief, and was wanted immediately at Orrville. Who wouldn't get excited under such circumstances? What nonsense they allege! They say he might have written the note himself, and passed it through the post. But I know he has not the least link of connection with the affair; and the authorities have no right to commit him to prison, when he can obtain bail from half a dozen different persons. But the people here are so excited that they will listen to nothing." A tear trickled down her pale cheeks. "Pshaw! I'll not be such a baby; all will be right yet."

She sat in the boat until the lights in the different departments of the hotel gradually disappeared, and was just about to rise and return to the house, when a figure, coming down the path toward her, induced her to retain her seat. The figure proved to be that of the young merchant, Mr. Van Haven. Mattie had always been attracted by the handsome face and winning manners of the gay New Yorker, and rather enjoyed his society than otherwise. So she remained seated until he took his place by her side.

"Let's row out upon the lake," said Van Haven, without an unnecessary "Good evening," as he raised the oars and pulled gently from the shore. "It is a very quiet night, and we shall not be disturbed. Most of the folks have retired. We must move cautiously."

"Why?" questioned Mattie, rather surprised at this remark.

"Why? Do you want to betray yourself?"

"Betray myself! Why, what are you talking about, Mr. Van Haven?"

Just then the moon, which had been shining on his back, fell full upon his face, and revealed a countenance with an unusually strange expression, and to the great astonishment of Mattie, the fact that her companion was asleep! Van Haven had been known to walk in his sleep, and perform a great many marvellous feats while in that condition; and Mattie Harris herself had happened to meet him once while enjoying a somnambulistic ramble. So she was not at all frightened by the circumstances under which she suddenly found herself placed, but somewhat astonished; and, being a young lady of a good deal of mischief, and possessed of the usual amount of curiosity, of course she determined to let her companion continue on his nocturnal excursion.

"What are you talking about?" repeated Mattie, her saddened features giving place to an amused smile.

"You know well enough what I am talking about, Jim. We must secure it to-night. It may be found where we have hidden it, and that would be the last of us. That letter was a sharp thing of ours, wasn't it? I tremble lest Lacy may be cleared though; then suspicion would seek some other party. So we'd better find other quarters as soon as we can possibly do so without causing any comment upon it; and, of course, we will not let the money remain where it is now."

At the mention of Lacy's name, and "money," Mattie's mind, which for the past week had been invariably coupling those words together, caught eagerly at the suspicion thus aroused; and her very frame shook as the light of a great disclosure suddenly flashed upon her. She had found one of the guilty parties, concerned in the bank robbery, and could liberate her lover!

The discovery was almost too much for her. A dim mist suffused her eyes. She clutched eagerly the side of the boat. But she soon recovered the first shock, yet did not permit herself to speak, she trembled so violently.

"We must leave to-morrow; don't you think so?"

"Yes," ventured Mattie. "Now let's be very quiet, for fear we should be heard."

"All right."

They moved slowly and noiselessly across the rippling waters of the lake, until they reached the opposite shore. The woods hung darkly over the tranquil depths, and all was quiet. Van Haven tied the boat to a sapling, and stepped ashore, following silently by Mattie. He led the way to a dense thicket of underbrush, pausing a moment to assure himself that they were alone. Having satisfied himself of this point, he took a few steps forward and cautiously raised a large stone. Under it lay a casket. He picked it up and replaced the stone.

"I'll carry it," said Mattie, with avidious eagerness, feeling confident that if she once got possession of the stolen money all would be well with her.

"Very well," said the somnambulist, and consigned the casket to her keeping. "Now let us get to the boat again, and we will finish the arrangement of our plans as we cross over for Orrville."

Mattie considered it a matter of prudence to agree, and followed her sleeping companion to the lake. He took his seat in the boat and loosened the chain from the sapling, enjoining his associate to maintain perfect silence until they should be out on the lake. He seemed to think that all was well, and shoved off from the shore.

Mattie stood in the moonlight, and watched the boat and its solitary oarsman until both were concealed within the dark shadow of the mountain, behind which the moon was fast hiding herself.

"I'm safe now!" she said, with a joyful bound. "But what shall I do?" I'm half a mile from any house, and have no means of crossing the lake. There is a road here somewhere, though, which leads round to the town. I'll walk to the hotel, if it takes till morning! There is no time to be lost."

So saying, she began her search for the road, which was soon found; and after four hours of rapid walking, for which the excitement of the occasion lent the requisite amount of strength, she reached Orrville.

She lost no time in informing the authorities of the town of her singular adventure, producing the casket for their examination in proof of her statement.

Early in the morning before most of the guests had arisen, the Orrville House was surrounded by half a dozen men, evidently intent upon the capture of some one within. Presently Van Haven made his appearance on the ground floor verandah, apparently unconscious that anything was wrong. The sight of the police quickly undeceived him. He was handcuffed at once, without any ceremonious notification of the reason why he was thus rudely dealt with. Mattie came down just then, after a short sleep, and was requested to follow, when the officers started down the street, with their prisoner in custody, attended by a large crowd of excited spectators, which had soon congregated.

A preliminary examination convinced all parties of the guilt of Van Haven, but did not exonerate Lacy from complicity in the affair. The subsequent investigation, however, fastened the guilt upon two parties—Van Haven and a James Thompson, an Orrville man, with whom the former had been on terms of suspicious intimacy.

Of course, all redress was made to Mr. Lacy for the hasty opinions of the people concerning him, and was accepted by him as satisfactory. But a more material expression of the thanks of the bankers was made, when Mr. Johnson himself, the senior partner of the firm, rose in the police-court, and said, "That in consideration of the great injustice done to Mr. Lacy in so hastily arresting him, and in consideration of the surprising good sense and bravery of Miss Harris in securing the guilty parties in this robbery, it became his pleasant duty to present in the name of the firm, to the former, the sum of ten thousand dollars; and to the latter the sum of fifteen thousand, and that he could accept no refusal."

We need not attempt to describe the applause and good feeling elicited by these remarks—that is left to the imagination of the reader.

No clamorous demonstrations of gratitude were made by either of the recipients of these princely gifts; but both expressed their thanks in a single sentence, and retired from the court together, amid the uproarious acclamation of the crowd.

Three weeks afterwards, Orrville was going wild over a gay wedding, and had actually awakened out of its long Rip Van Winkle sleep; and the happiest couple in that town were—Charles Lacy and Mattie Harris.

News and Notes.

The hulk of the rebel ram Merrimack has been raised at Norfolk and towed into the Navy Yard dock.

Rev. Dr. Storrs is to be the orator of the 4th of July celebration in New York city.

It is common for the opponents of capital punishment to contend that imprisonment for life has terrors for the criminal just as formidable as the death penalty. The experience of every country, however, constantly contradicts this pretension, for murderers saved from the gallows usually receive the news with transport. When Andreas Fuchs was informed that the Governor of New York had commuted his sentence to imprisonment for life, the local chronicler says he buried his face in his handkerchief and burst into tears. Then he brightened up and exclaimed, "Well, dat's good. I guess we have some beer." After it was furnished he drained the pitcher, and then reiterated, "Dat's good, dat's good," doubtless referring as well to the beverage as to the news. Another crying spell followed, after which he smoked his pipe for a long time.

The aspect of Eastern affairs grows more warlike. The new Sultan has assented to the proposed armistice with the insurgents, but they do not seem to appreciate this leniency. The Servian army, 125,000 men, with a reserve of 100,000 militia are making active preparations, and one despatch says they have already crossed the Turkish border. The leader of the Servian liberals in Hungary declares that a Servian war against the Turks "is more absolutely certain than anything else in the world." Austria has decided not to interfere against Russia and the latter is massing a heavy force on the border, apparently in aid of Servia. The "suicide" of the eldest son of the late Sultan is reported.

Congressman "Impromptu" Tarbox, of Massachusetts, undertook to floor James G. Blaine on Thursday, and was flattened out like a bed-bug. Infants shouldn't try to whip strong men.

A thief made off with a tin box containing $4317, from the office of the city treasurer of Fall River, Mass., on Saturday. Barnum's procession was passing through the streets at the time the theft was committed.

Four tramps of villanous appearance were sent to jail in default of $1500 each, Saturday, on the charge of felonious assault on a girl named Margaret Connors, living on a back road in Attleboro', Mass. The outrage is alleged to have been committed on Thursday, the girl having been dragged from her home before the eyes of her mother and taken into the woods. She was badly hurt. The men arrested gave the names of McManus, Dempsey, Johnson and Kelley.

Speaker Kerr is very sick. A unanimous report from the investigating committee, exonerating Mr. Kerr in the Harney-Greene matter, is expected.

At River Bend, Colorado, Albert Jessup, son of a New York banker, and M. O. Davis, became engaged in hot words, and agreed to go out on the prairie and fight it out. They had no seconds. Davis carried a Winchester rifle, while Jessup had a Colt's revolver. They walked close together and appeared to be engaged in a confidential conversation, neither one gesticulating or exhibiting signs of anger or excitement. When about five hundred yards from the station, on the open prairie, Jessup and Davis shook hands, took positions fifty paces apart, and before the spectators could reach the dueling ground firing commenced. Jessup, who now showed some excitement, glancing around among the cactus plants, fired his three shots wild, neither ball touching his adversary. Davis, taking steady aim each time, fired two shots from his rifle, the second one piercing Jessup through the heart. Davis, aided by the spectators, carried the body to the railroad station on the Kansas Pacific road. The corpse arrived at Denver, and was placed in the hands of an undertaker for shipment to New York. After seeing the body placed on the train at River Bend station, Davis mounted his horse and rode off, since which time he has not been seen.

At Clinton, Mass., June 9, a sailboat containing three men and a boy was capsized. Two of the men and the boy were drowned, though they were good swimmers and the accident occurred close to the shore of the river.

There seems no probability of Winslow's extradition. England stubbornly maintains that an act of Parliament is superior to a pre-existing treaty, and Secretary Fish, very properly, as stubbornly maintains the contrary. If Winslow is discharged by the British government ours will have nothing to do but to abrogate the extradition clause of the Ashburton treaty, and to decline to make another on any terms, for another could not be made or even considered without the United States throwing aside all self-respect.

John Beatty, a New York policeman, was fatally shot by a man named Fullam, clerk of Judge Delmar's court, on Friday morning. The murder was entirely unprovoked. The murderer, besides being clerk of a court, is a noted rough and bully. Nice place, New York.

A Congressional Squabble.

One of the most amusing of the Congressional squabbles was between two gentlemen who were never excited by strong drink—Jefferson Davis and Henry S. Foote. They were sitting in a room together at Willard's, in 1848, and got into a discussion over a letter written by General Taylor, then a candidate for the Presidency. One word brought on another, and soon the two "grave and reverend" Senators were striking from the shoulder at each other. The noise of the encounter brought neighboring inmates of the hotel into the room, and the combatants were separated, and, after some entreaty, shook hands and made friends.

"Really," said Mr. Foote, "I should not have thought of such a thing as striking Mr. Davis if he had not passed the first blow."

"Are you not mistaken about that?" urged Mr. Davis apologetically.

"Indeed, I am not!" retorted the impetuous Mr. Foote.

"It is my impression that you struck first," pleaded Mr. Davis.

"O, no! It was you!"

"No, it was you."

"But, Mr. Davis, I'll swear it was you."

"And I, Mr. Foote, would swear it was not."

"You did strike first."

"I did not strike first!"

"You did!"

"I didn't!"

"You did, I say!"

"I say I didn't!"

"Well," exclaimed Mr. Foote, "there shan't be any dispute as to who struck first this time," and as he spoke he dealt Mr. Davis a stinging blow on the cheek. The astonished friends sprang between the two gentlemen and prevented further hostilities. Pledges were exacted from all present to deny that there had been any "unpleasantness;" but I have the above from good Southern authority, as the beginning of a feud not yet settled.—Washington Chronicle.

Jottings.

The General Committee on 4th of July celebration will meet at the Common Council Room on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is earnestly requested.

Hon. John H. Burleigh's supporters in Eliot deny the charges of unfair dealing at their recent caucus, and say they clearly outvoted their opponents, who had one of their own number in the chair and another at the secretary's desk. "Children, you should never let your angry passions rise."

The Concord Monitor says, relative to Portsmouth's part at the inauguration: "The playing of the Marine Band, in the line of military music, was very fine. Their precision and perfectness of tune were remarkable, and showed the effect of careful and persevering practice. The selection from Verdi's Macbeth, performed at the Eagle, and the Grand Potpourri from Faust, played in the dining hall, were exquisitely rendered. This company [the Heavy Artillery, Capt. Williams,] and band bore off the palm, as far as appearance and playing go, and Portsmouth ought to be proud of two such organizations." The Manchester Mirror says the Heavy Artillery won the admiration and applause of thousands of people by their wonderful proficiency in drill, which was exhibited upon Main street in Concord on inauguration day.

Notice of bills to amend the charters of the Portsmouth Trust and Guarantee Company and the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, has been given in the State legislature.

Mr. Harry Kent, son of Col. J. Horace Kent, has been appointed conductor of a Pullman car running between Boston and Bangor.

On Friday Judge Page assessed Mary Collins, John Berry and John Roach $9.90 each, for getting drunk. This trio went to Brentwood on Saturday; and on the same day Lizzie Murphy and Olive Austin were sent to the House of Correction for two months, for drunkenness, costs being taxed at $9.04 each, which they will also probably have to work out.

Hon. John H. Burleigh, Congressman from the 1st Dist. of Maine, is warmly endorsed by the democratic papers as an incorruptible legislator and straight-out republican, on account of his attacks upon the management of the Kittery navy yard,—attacks which Sam. Randall brought up in Congress as abundant justification for attempting to abolish the yard altogether, or at least for not having any more work done upon it. Not a single republican paper in Mr. Burleigh's district entertains the same opinion as to his square republicanism that the democratic sheets profess to hold; and to those persons who are knowing to the persistent attempts of Mr. Burleigh to run the navy yard in his own interest, and that his horror of "the monstrous iniquities" of the navy yard management was not publicly developed until he found that other and abler men than himself had more influence than he with the Navy Department, the talk about his wonderful incorruptibility sounds very much like twaddle. He has had published letters from prominent republicans in Washington, to the effect that they have never seen nor heard any reason for doubting his fidelity to the party; but the impression is very strong in the minds of very many republicans in the western portion of his district that the people and party would have been better off to-day had they been represented by a democratic Congressman for the last four years than by Mr. Burleigh. When he was first nominated (by an accident—or worse, a blunder) two prominent democrats of Kittery openly boasted that he would help the democrats twice where he would the republicans once; the republicans are now inclined to consider them true prophets, and it will take several democratic endorsements of his faithfulness as a republican to alter their opinion.

Rogues Caught.

Some four weeks ago national bank bills of the denomination of $5, with a portion of the bill torn out and the remaining parts pasted together, made their appearance in the vicinity of Sebago Lake. Shortly afterwards similar bills were passed in Gorham, Me., and then made their appearance in this city. Several of them were received at our banks, and it being evident that some party or parties were engaged in the old dodge of making an extra bill by tearing out portions of several bills of the same denominations, Deputy United States Marshal H. D. Marble was notified, and he immediately began the search for the operators.

Nothing more was heard of the parties until last Tuesday, when similar bills were presented at a Boston bank, the officers of which notified Col. J. Horace Kent, chief of the New England dept. of the secret service bureau, who then also began a hunt for the fellows. Indications pointed to Maine as the principal scene of operations, and yesterday Col. Kent started for this city. Just after setting himself in the cars he opened a late edition of a Boston paper and saw a despatch from Saco announcing the arrest of two young men in that city by City Marshal Sands for passing counterfeit money. Believing that the men he was after were caught he got off the cars when he reached that city, and there found Mr. Marble on the same errand.

An interview was immediately had with the arrested parties, who proved to be two young men, aged about 19 years, belonging to North Gorham, by the name of Charles Martin Libby and Charles Morse Wescott, who have hitherto borne irreproachable characters and whose fathers are well-to-do farmers, highly respected wherever known. Libby confessed that he was guilty of the offence. He said that he conceived the idea himself and began by practicing with ten cent currency. Finding this successful, he went still further, and induced Westcott to engage in the enterprise with him. Although in disposing of the false money he was up to all the dodges of old operators, he denied that he had had any instructions from any source or that he had any connection with a third party. He also acknowledged that they went to Boston Monday night on the boat and the following morning got rid of considerable of the mutilated money. They then retraced their steps toward Maine, and operated until they were brought up with a round turn at Saco. It is supposed that they have disposed of about $1000 worth of these bills.

They were taken before Judge Derby of the Saco Municipal Court, who handed them over to the United States officers. They were brought to this city yesterday afternoon and taken before Commissioner Rand, who bound them over in the sum of $2500 each, for appearance before the United States court, their fathers giving bail. It has been discovered that they registered their names at the City Hotel, Boston, Tuesday morning as Fred Sawyer and Sam Benson. Some twenty of these bills were passed in this city.

There has been quite a revival of this sort of business of late, but the indefatigable Messrs. Kent and Marble have made it particularly warm for the parties engaged. It happened fortunately these fellows were captured in Saco, but they could not have otherwise remained long at large, for the toils were gradually involving them. It only hastened their fate.—Portland Sunday Times, 11th.

Political.

Tilden stock seems to be going down rapidly. Sorry for it; he would be the easiest candidate for the republicans to beat that has yet been named in connection with the democratic nomination. Hancock's chances are apparently improving; and while we do not think he would stand any chance of an election if nominated, unless the republicans should put up a terribly weak man—weaker than any candidate yet named—we believe he would make a much better run than the great "reformer."

It is probable that next week the question of the United States Senatorship will be decided in the republican caucus at Concord. In the decision of this important question we trust our representatives will fully weigh the value of the efficient and long-continued services of Hon. Edward H. Rollins to the republican party ever since its organization. If an unimpeachable public record, an exemplary private life, unshaken fidelity to principle, rare executive and business qualifications, a clear appreciation of the popular wants, and an earnest and practical sympathy with whatever is progressive and beneficial to the public interests, have their due weight with the legislature, we feel sure that they will best show their appreciation of Mr. Rollins in his election to the responsible position to which he aspires, for which he has so many qualifications, and in which no other can make himself more useful. If earnestness and fidelity do not deserve these high trusts, especially when seconded by rare ability, then we fail to see on what principle they should be bestowed.—Dover Enquirer, 8th.

Democratic conventions are commencing the famous Greeley campaign dodge of "remitting to the Congressional districts" all questions on which the party is divided. The West Virginia convention "remits to the Congressional districts" the financial issues, and wants the party to attend only to "great moral and Constitutional questions." Seems as if we'd heard something very like that before.

The democrats have regalvanized that dead Kentucky mule into life once more, in hope he will kick Mr. Bristow's brains out. They'll fool around that mule until they get hold of him by the wrong end, yet, and he'll kick out the place where their own brains ought to be.

Ups and Downs.

The difference between English and American customs and ideas is in no point more strongly exemplified than in the sudden disappearance from American public life of the names of men once famous in politics or war. In England a great statesman or general usually receives a title and "founds a family," which is thenceforth looked upon as being of bluer blood than the common herd and exercises an influence often greatly disproportioned to the merit and ability of its members. In this country the abilities and services which win honor and position for the father are not much considered in favor of the son, unless the latter is equally as able as his progenitor. The "upper class" of one generation is near the bottom of the ladder the next. There are exceptions to this rule, but only just enough of them to confirm it. Wealth still runs in the Astor family; and the Adams family furnished two Presidents for the United States, and another member has been nominated (by the Springfield Republican) for the position more than a thousand times; but such cases are rare. The son of "Billy Grey," the wealthy Boston ship-owner, died in a poor-house; Gen. Dick Taylor, son of President Taylor and during the rebellion a Major-General in the Confederate service, some years after the war was said to be hanging about Washington, a poor, drunken creature, dependant on the charity of a faithful old negress, a former slave of the family, for shelter and food; the granddaughter of Thomas Jefferson has a clerkship in Washington; the daughter of Andrew Donelson (the adopted son of Andrew Jackson,) born in the White House and educated in Berlin, is a clerk in the Postoffice Department; the daughter of Chief Justice Taney is or not long ago was a clerk in some government bureau, and so was the daughter of Robert J. Walker, former Secretary of the Treasury.

—Old Uncle Billy Newcomb was one of the keenest Yankees that ever lived in the Old Gum Tree State, and if any one ever got the start of him he had to get up before daylight. It happened one time that he had a young minister domiciled with him, said minister being somewhat extravagant and withal rather delinquent in settling his just debts. And it came to pass in due season that Uncle Billy found himself his creditor to the amount of $93 for rations furnished and a very slim prospect of seeing the amount liquidated, the parish owing the parson not a cent. Was the good old man discouraged and did he tear around swearing like pizen! Not much. He very quietly went around among the pastor's friends in the parish and proposed that some sort of a benefit be given in the hall for the aforesaid parson. On the appointed night Uncle Billy, who had pulled the wires satisfactorily, was to be seen at the door taking in the quarters and halves, while smiles quietly chased each other across his beaming countenance. The receipts amounted to just $95, two of which he turned over to the minister, and stowing the balance in his capacious pocket, at the same time advised him to be looking for quarters elsewhere. Thus may our young men learn wisdom and patience from their elders.

—A wag in "what he knows about farming," gives a very good plan to remove widows' weeds. He says a good-looking man has only to say, "Wilt thou?" and they wilt.

The True Medical Philosophy.

The remarkable cures of dyspepsia, constipation, general debility, intermittent and remittent fevers, nervousness, mental despondency, and a host of other ailments, by that popular botanic invigorant and alterative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, prove that to vitalize, not deplete, the sick, is the true medical philosophy. Under the old system patients underwent a course of treatment that often had the effect of exhausting their few remaining energies. Drastic purgation, and the administration of violent remedies with a weakening reaction, were frequently and most unnecessarily resorted to in cases where invigoration combined with mild regulative treatment was the sole desideratum. That this unwise mode of medication has been to a great extent abandoned is in no small degree due to the success which has attended the peerless remedy above named.

Asthma and phthisic are cured by Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam when all other remedies fail. 35 and 75 cents. Large bottles cheapest. $1600 for a case it will not cure.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Daily Chronicle.

—We heard a reminiscence of an army surgeon, the other day, worth repeating. In the camp of one of our Maine regiments, during the rebellion, the tent of the chaplain was near the regimental post-office, and the good man was frequently disturbed by soldiers thrusting their heads in and inquiring if the mail had arrived. To rid himself of this annoyance, he one day put up a placard bearing the legend—"The chaplain doesn't know whether the mail has arrived or not." On glancing at the announcement the next morning imagine the chaplain's surprise on reading this addition to it, evidently made by some disappointed seeker after letters from home—"and doesn't care a damn!" He took down the placard.—Portland Transcript.

—Little Willie was saying his usual prayer at his mother's knee, and having got as far as "If I should die before I wake," hesitated. "Well, what next?" asked his mother. "Why, mamma, I suppose about the next thing would be to have a funeral."

—"Ann," observed a Danbury housekeeper to the hired girl, "as we have entered upon the dawn of another century of our nation's history, I gue that you had better get a toothbrush of your own."

MAGIC
CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Billiousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and this Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged and really took my last dollar, I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended to several my case, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.
SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth twenty dollars in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this phrase find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and loins. I was unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which do no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to those who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking the pills and already much benefited. I send $4.00 for two packages.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lungs trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

INCREASES THE QUANTITY, IMPROVES THE QUALITY
ARMSTRONG'S
LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

How Ladies Fish.

There are generally about six of them in the bunch, with light dresses on, and they have three poles, with as many hooks and lines among them.

As soon as they get to the river they look for a good place to get down on the rafts, and the most venturesome one sticks her boot heels in the bank and makes two careful step-downs; then she suddenly finds herself at the bottom with both hands in the water and a feeling that everybody in this world is looking at her, and she never tells anybody how she got there. The other girls, profiting by her example, turn around and go down the bank on their hands and toes, backwards.

Then they scamper over the rafts until they can see the fish and shout:

"Oh! I see one."

"Where?"

"Oh! my, so he is."

"Let's catch him."

"Who's got them baits?"

"You lazy thing, (you're sitting on my pole."

"Show me the wretch that stole my worm."

All these exclamations are gotten off in a tone that awakens every echo within a mile round, and sends every fish within three acres square into galloping hysterics. Then the girls by superhuman exertions manage to get a worm on the hook, and "throw in" with a splash like the launching of a washtub and await the result. When a silverfin comes along and nibbles the bait they pull up with a jerk, that had an unfortunate fish weighing less than fifteen pounds been on the hook, would have landed it in the neighborhood of three or four miles out in the country. After a while a feeble-minded sunfish contrives to get fastened on the hook of a timid woman, and she gives vent to her tongue:

"Oh! something's got my hook!"

"Pull up, you little idiot!" shout five excited voices as poles and hooks are dropped and they rush to the rescue. The girl with the bite gives a spasmodic jerk, which sends the unfortunate sunny into the air the full length of forty feet of line, and he comes down on the nearest curly head with a damp flop, that sets the girl to clawing as though there were bumblebees in her hair.

"Ooh! Murder! take it away. Ugh! the nasty thing!"

Then they hold up their skirts and gather about that fish as it skips over the logs, one all the time holding the line in both hands with her foot on the pole as though she had an evil disposed goat at the other end. They talk over it.

"How ever will he get off?"

"Ain't it pretty?"

"Wonder if it ain't dry?"

"Poor little thing; let's put it back."

"How will we get the hook from it?"

"Pick it up," says a girl who backs rapidly out of the circle.

"Good gracious, I'm afraid of it. There, its opening its mouth at me."

Just then the sunny wriggles off the hook and disappears between two logs into the water, and the girls try for another bite.

But the sun comes down and fries the back of their necks, and they get three headaches in the party, and they all get cross and scold at the fish like so many magpies. If an unwary chub dares show himself in the water they poke at him with poles, much to his disgust. Finally they get mad all over and throw their poles away, hunt up the lunch basket, climb up into the woods, where they sit round on the grass and caterpillars, and eat enough of dried beef and rusk and hard boiled eggs to give a woodhorse the nightmare; after which they compare notes about their beaux until sundown, when they go home and plant envy in the hearts of all their muslin delaine friends by telling what "just a splendid time" they had.

Gold Hunting.

The latest expedition to the wreck of the Golden Gate, for the purpose of recovering the lost treasure which went down with the steamer, has returned to this city without resurrecting any of the boxes of gold. The expedition went to the remains of the wreck off the coast of Mexico, in February last. It was practically commanded by Sidney Cook, the diver who in 1864 recovered $775,000 from the wreck. Owing to the circumlocution of the Mexican officers, the expedition was detained a week at Manzanillo, while one of the party went overland to Colima to obtain the necessary permission to wreck on the coast. This detention was almost fatal to the expedition, as the breakers at this time of the year cover the wreck with the shifting sands. When the expedition reached the wreck that portion of the hull in which the treasure was located was covered with eighteen feet of sand. The diver, notwithstanding the drawback, went to work and made in all thirty dives. On the 3rd of April, Cook struck the hull and burrowed into the sand. After four hours' of herculean labor he discovered a small box of treasure, such as he had found on other occasions, but it was thoroughly wedged in between a mass of conglomerate, consisting of melted iron machinery, charred timbers and quicksands. He was forced reluctantly to relinquish the prize, partly on account of the sand filling in upon him. The box in size and shape resembled the $20,000 boxes which in years before he had taken up. That night a storm arose and drove the schooner off, and dissensions arising among the party they sailed back to this city. It is estimated there are $400,000 yet buried beneath the waves.—San Francisco Post, May 27.

TUESDAY, JUNE 13, 1876.

Mr. Blaine Prostrated.

Washington was terribly startled on Sunday by a report that Mr. Blaine had at last yielded to the tremendous strain upon his physical and mental powers, had fallen senseless in his tracks and was lying at the point of death. Inquiry soon developed the truth, which was not quite so bad as the first reports, but bad enough. The Ex-Speaker, after walking, in spite of the fierce heat of the day, from his home to Dr. Rankin's church to attend morning service as usual, fell suddenly on the very steps of the church, was borne to his home, and for five hours lay in a state of complete unconsciousness. Great numbers of prominent men, of both parties, beset the house all day to hear of his welfare; and toward evening the crowd of inquirers became so great that it was deemed advisable to issue frequent bulletins announcing that he was sleeping quietly, that the doctors had decided that it was only a case of sunstroke superinduced by nervous exhaustion, and that a speedy recovery was anticipated. This is the opinion of Dr. Pope, given out over his own signature; but Drs. Cox and Bliss disagree, and say positively that the attack was apoplectic in its nature.

In the only intelligible remark he made during the afternoon, after he regained partial consciousness, his thought went to his wife, whom he calls "Mama." As they were ascending the steps of the church just before he lost consciousness, Mr. Blaine drew his handkerchief from his pocket, wiped his face, put his hand to the back of his head, and said: "Mama, my head pains me. I am afraid I am sunstruck. Let me sit down on the step a minute. Call a carriage. Take me home and send for Dr. Pope." She sat down beside him just in time to catch him as his head fell upon her lap. On recovering consciousness she asked him if he knew her. "Yes," he said; "it's Mama. What is it?" Then he fell off into a doze. At midnight he was reported by Mr. Sherman, his private secretary, as still comfortable and improving.

It will be recollected that Mr. Blaine was ill with a slow type of malarial fever some time ago, and appeared before the investigating committee before he had fully recovered; since then he has been almost incessantly at work, and of course under great nervous excitement; all which combined rendered him peculiarly liable to injury from the excessive heat of the day.

Mr. Blaine's condition had not materially improved up to Monday evening.

Editorial Pencilings.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.

Messrs. Alonzo Nute, Daniel Hall, B. F. Whidden, Nathaniel White, Charles H. Burns, Thomas C. Rand, John Pender and yours truly compose the delegation from New Hampshire which arrived here this morning en route to Cincinnati. Messrs. Nute and Whidden are accompanied by their wives. Messrs. E. A. Straw, Ira Colby, Jr., Jesse Gault and Gilman Scripture are to join the delegation at Cincinnati. In company with Senator Cragin the party this morning visited the White House and paid their respects to President Grant; they also visited Secretary Bristow, Assistant Secretary Conant, Fifth Auditor Ela, Postmaster General Jewell, and afterwards were presented in the Senate Chamber to Senators Morton and Conkling. Ex-Speaker Blaine received the party in his committee room, where a half hour was most pleasantly passed.

There being but seven of the ten delegates present no vote has been taken to ascertain the Presidential preferences, and no organization will be perfected before reaching Cincinnati. From the best information now at hand, should no unforseen circumstance prevent, Mr. Blaine seems likely to receive nine if not all of New Hampshire's ten votes on the first ballot—but it is possible that three of the ten votes will not go to him until the second ballot. There is a growing feeling here that the contest at Cincinnati may be narrowed down before Wednesday to Blaine and Conkling as the principle candidates, in which case Mr. Blaine may receive the solid vote of New England, which of itself would insure his nomination, should he hold the three hundred delegates now claimed for him. Mr. Bristow may be placed in the list of compromise candidates; Mr. Morton seems to have lost some strength at the South, and both his and Bristow's votes are likely to run under one hundred each, as long as the leading candidates command between them five hundred votes.

We find the situation here about as expected; republicans and democrats admit the great power and magnificent abilities of the Ex-Speaker. The republicans are filled with admiration for his indomitable courage, fertility, and splendid genius. Prominent New Yorkers declare that he is a stronger candidate in the Empire State than any man who can be named, and predict that he will receive the thirty-five electoral votes of New York if nominated. A minority of the New York and Pennsylvania delegations, amounting to nearly half in each case, though pledged to Conkling and Hartranft are more than likely to desert the "favorite sons" of New York and Pennsylvania on the second ballot; and should these votes be sufficient to nominate on the first, they will be changed before the announcement of the vote. The Great Unknown seems afar off, it being generally conceded on all hands that one of the leading candidates will be chosen. Mr. Blaine's friends are claiming over three hundred delegates, and it will require three hundred and seventy-seven to nominate. Mr. Conkling's friends claim two hundred and fifty, and hope to secure nine-tenths of the Morton votes from the South, many of the delegates from that region being likely to regard self-interest as paramount to all other considerations; if this proves to be the case, Mr. Conkling will very nearly reach Mr. Blaine's figures when the Morton columns break; the South may thus dictate the nomination, though it can furnish to the nominee but seven of the one hundred and eighty-four electoral votes necessary to the choice of a President. It is no secret that the administration prefers the nomination of Senator Conkling, and, at the South particularly, patronage of the general government is and has been used toward this end, but this by no means indicates any feeling against Mr. Blaine on the part of the President. Their personal relations are of the most friendly nature. It is said, however, that Senator Morton is not well pleased at the marked preference shown the New York Senator by the President, and is likely to transfer that portion of his support under his immediate control to Mr. Blaine when it has become apparent that the nomination cannot go to Indiana. In view of these complications there will be busy canvassing at Cincinnati, and if Mr. Blaine finally succeeds it will be because his friends know no such word as surrender.

It is easy to see that the leaders of the Confederate House are actually afraid of Mr. Blaine. One blast from his trumpet sends dismay to their very hearts. This is peculiarly enjoyable by Ben Hill of Georgia, who since his castigation by Mr. Blaine in the amnesty debate has become warmly attached by personal ties to Mr. Blaine. The witty spouse of a New Hampshire Congressman suggests that the ticket nominated at Cincinnati be Blaine and Hill, as the latter could no doubt endure the association and nothing could beat the combination. Mr. Hill is about the most honest of the Southern rebels, and wastes no tears on the discomfiture of Proctor Knott and Tarbox.

The New Hampshire delegation leave here for Cincinnati to-morrow, and expect to reach there early Monday morning.

News and Notes.

Speaker Kerr, who had been slowly recovering from the severe and it was feared fatal illness which prostrated him last week, on Sunday suffered a relapse, and was very low in the afternoon. He was a little better in the evening, and it is hoped he will be able to get away from Washington to some quiet retreat, as his physicians peremptorily order him to do.

A Washington dispatch of Monday evening says Speaker Kerr cannot recover.

The Sixteenth Annual Meeting of the National Educational Association will be held in the Academy of Music, Baltimore, Md., on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, the 10th, 11th, and 12th days of July.

Thomas W Henley, in prison at Santa Rosa, Cal., on a charge of murder, was taken from jail and hanged by a mob on Friday.

Donald McLean, aged 21, was drowned in Carroll on Saturday, while getting a log into a saw-mill.

The body of Charles T. Cofran, who escaped from the Insane Asylum a week or more ago, was found in the river at Concord on Sunday.

The Meriden (Conn.,) Recorder says the charges recently made against Superintendent Ingham, of the Connecticut Reform School, were trumped up and baseless.

William M. Kendall, of the Lebanon News, has bought the Laconia Democrat.

A burglar stole about $1000 worth of silver from the house of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher on Saturday morning. He was engaged in attempting to open a safe when he was discovered by a servant girl, but escaped.

Associate Justice John Nesmith, of the Dover police-court, died Friday evening.

Bill Coombs and George Fenton escaped from Exeter Jail on Sunday morning about 2 o'clock. Coombs had a sentence of four months to serve, with indictments hanging over him for the October Court. Fenton was charged with larceny or pocket-picking. Outside parties assisted them with false keys.

It was with a considerable flourish of trumpets that Rev. George H. Hepworth struck out in New York to build up an independent church, and those who entered into the project with him were very sanguine of success, but the venture has not proved a success financially. A building was erected at a cost of $175,000 on land that cost $125,000, and recently the "Church of the Disciples" was sold under the auctioneer's hammer for $4000 above a first mortgage of $100,000. It was bought in the interest of the holders of a second mortgage for $50,000, and it is understood that they are friendly to the society and will permit it to go on using the church as heretofore.

A man may drink moderately but steadily all his life, with no apparent harm to himself, but his daughters become nervous wrecks, his sons epileptics, libertines or drunkards, the hereditary tendency to crime having its pathology and unvaried laws, precisely as scrofula, consumption, or any other purely physical disease. These are stale truths to medical men, but the majority of parents, even those of average intelligence, are either ignorant or wickedly regardless of them.

Political.

The Boston Herald thinks even a sworn statement from Josiah Caldwell would not be entitled to any weight, if it were in Mr. Blaine's favor, as he and Mr. Blaine worked in some kind of a partnership, and are friends. We do not remember that that honest and "independent" paper had any fault to find with the democratic investigating committee when they proposed to admit what it was said somebody would say he once heard Mr. Caldwell say against Mr. Blaine, as evidence against that gentleman.

The Cincinnati Commercial says: "There is a rumor from Washington that the President will appoint a new Secretary of the Treasury soon after the adjournment of the Cincinnati convention. Mr. Babcock would be a good man." The Cincinnati Commercial suggested that Babcock or "Boss" Shepard might as well have been appointed, after Mr. Bristow's appointment was made. Then, it thought him a rascal; now, it maintains he is the only honest man to be found anywhere. Mistaken, both times.

Mr. Blaine's proposed amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the appropriation of public money for sectarian schools, is hung up in the democratic committee to which it was referred. The average democrat don't like that kind of legislation.

In the light of Mr. Blaine's letters now given to the world, how ridiculous, how malicious, how contemptible appear the statements of Mulligan before the committee that Mr. Blaine besought him, for the sake of his wife and children, not to expose those letters, and that Mr. Blaine contemplated suicide.

Tarbox's "effort" is criticised severely by his democratic associates. As he resumed his seat (says a correspondent) in an aureole of virtuous indignation over the rapacity of Mr. Blaine in the matter of the Mulligan letters, the question of Mr. Blaine regarding the currency speech business put him utterly hors du combat. He lacked the repartee to check the laugh which rose against him, and Mr. Blaine taking the floor at this juncture, followed up his triumph so mercilessly that the gentleman from Massachusetts was, metaphorically speaking, "taken out on a shutter."

The Cincinnati Enquirer's eagerness to make a point against the republican party, led it into a trap. It headed its telegraphic account of the arrest of Beaumont, at Mayfield, for the robbing of the mails, "A Republican Editor Arrested for Robbing the Mails." The shoe is on the other foot. Beaumont was as far from being a republican editor as he could be, as he is the democratic editor of the Mayfield Democrat. He is the second Kentucky democratic newspaper man who has got into the clutches of the law for felonious appropriation of other people's money in the last few months. Enquirer should note, too, that they were both soft-money men, and it was their zeal for more money that got them into it.—Louisville Commercial.

"Mishter Bla-ane," says Mulligan, "it's not the thrick of a gintleman to shtale those letters from a reshpectable mon."—Cincin. Times.

—Of course they don't, but then the Brooklyn Argus says: "Since the late dynamite disturbance at Bergen Hill, the young men of that neighborhood have become so nervous that the girls frequently have to sit upon them to keep them down."

—"Oh, why does the white man follow my path?" asked the Indian. That's not much of a conundrum, viewed by the light of recent events. He follows for the purpose of establishing post traderships, and selling you poor whiskey at three dollars a pint, oh, deluded heathen!

—An exchange speaks of "a man near Bangor who is too conscientious to play cards or checkers, but who exacts twenty per cent. interest as often as he can." Such men are not so scarce that one is obliged to go as far as Bangor for a specimen.

Jottings.

The General Committee on 4th of July celebration will meet at the Common Council Room this (Tuesday) evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is earnestly requested.

Col. Wm. H. Sise having declined to serve as chief marshal on the 4th of July, the general committee at their meeting this evening will probably select some other gentleman for the position.

The Strawberry Festival of the Woman's Temperance League commences this (Tuesday) evening, at Rechabite Hall. Persons willing to help on the cause are invited to send donations of cake and fruit to the hall at any time during the day. The Festival will continue to-morrow evening. Admission ten cents. Doors open at 6.

The Appledore House will open for the season on Thursday, the 15.

The Robeson Investigation.

On Saturday Chief Engineer W. W. Wood, chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering of the Navy Department, was examined by the House Committee on Naval Affairs, Secretary Robeson being present. In response to the general question propounded by Mr. Robeson, whether he as Secretary had ever interfered with the purchase of supplies in his (Wood's) bureau, or ever dictated, or ordered, or directed, or suggested, or hinted, orally or in writing, at any favoritism to anybody, or the name of any man or firm, or the price to be paid for any article, Mr. Wood replied emphatically that he never had. On being further asked by Mr. Robeson whether he (the Secretary) had ever recommended C. G. Cattell or any of his friends to the favor of the bureau, he also replied with positiveness that he never had; that he himself knew Mr. Cattell but slightly; and had seldom seen him around the department. He accepted the complete responsibility for his acts, as the expert at the head of the bureau, to discharge the duties thereof.

Rear Admiral James Alden, for a couple of years chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, under Robeson, also testified clearly as to the entire absence of any interference on the part of the Secretary during his administration of the bureau, with any matter whatsoever, which properly belonged to him as its responsible head.

Com. Shufeldt, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, at a previous sitting of the committee gave exactly similar testimony; and so has every head of a bureau or department yet called, and the under officers also.

Hard Times.

The dullness in business which has prevailed in this country, but which appears to be giving place to a steady revival of many important interests which will set all the wheels of commerce in motion ere many months, is felt more seriously abroad. England is particularly affected. There has been there, as here, an over-production of commodities in all manufacturing centres, and the prices range so low that manufacturers are obliged to close their mills. Reports from the Kidderminister carpet trade state that nothing is doing. The iron trade is very depressed. In the first four months of 1873 the quantity of railroad iron of all descriptions shipped to foreign countries from England was 237,505 tons, which was valued at £3,137,792, while in the corresponding period this year the total was only 94,424 tons, equal to a value of £858,768. The salt trade is also languishing; nearly fifty per cent. of the works in England are for sale, and Mr. Corbett, M. P., has 30,000 tons of the manufactured article on his hands and no takers. In London, even among the class which is most removed from the fluctuations of business, times are decidedly hard. A house agent in the "West end" lately reported two houses let, against sixty-four to the same date last year. Dealers in second-hand carriages cannot find room for their stock, and a beautiful Victoria, lately, was disposed of for £6.

The iron and steel manufacturing of Germany has been at a stand-still for many months, and government has been building railroads to furnish the skilled laborers with work enough to keep them from starving.

Yet neither England nor Germany is ruled by the republican party.

—A Columbus correspondent says irreverently that "Old Bill" Allen has a nose "like the nose of an anvil that points out straight at you without turn or equivocation. It is a nose on which Napoleon would have conferred promotion, for it suggests a determination to conquer or die."—Chicago Tribune.

—A Milwaukee man went to a meeting in London one evening, and when the cockneys said, "'ear, 'ear," he took it for a personal allusion, and got out.

A Good Paper--Barring Politics.

In another column will be found a brief advertisement giving the campaign rates of the Boston Post. Now the Post, though an ultra democratic paper and never pretending to be anything else, is not nearly so bigoted in politics as many of the self-styled "independent" papers; and if the reader of this must have a democratic paper the Post is a good one for him to take—a first-rate newspaper, ably edited, and streaked with a genial humor which to a considerable extent "takes the cuss off" its objectionable political faith. It has just put on a new dress, having recently changed hands as the following card will show:

"Negotiations with reference to the Boston Post establishment, which have been pending for some weeks past, have resulted in its purchase by the undersigned, in behalf of themselves and those associated with them in the conduct of the paper. Its future management will be in the hands of a corporation whose organization will be duly announced as soon as necessary legal formalities are concluded.

Among the subscribers to stock in the new company are Hon. William Gaston, Hon. J. G. Abbott, Hon. Edward Avery, Hon. Charles Levi Woodbury, Hon. F. O. Prince, Hon. P. A. Collins, Leopold Morse, Esq., Dr. T. L. Jenks, D. D. Kelly, Esq., and other prominent democrats of this State. The enterprise also has the endorsement of Hon. Bion Bradbury and Hon. A. W. H. Clapp of Maine, and other leading representatives of democracy throughout New England.

No further assurance will be needed of the political and financial stability of the Boston Post, which will be conducted now, as in the past, in the interest of the Republic, under the guidance and inspiration of democratic principles.

Bleeding Calves.

A butcher, to whom we had written in regard to bleeding calves before slaughtering, says, in reply: "I am not aware that I am using any unnecessary cruelty in my business of butchering calves. In fact, I am using the same method which all butchers pursue, and have used for the last fifty years. The demands of the trade require that all calves should be bled before butchering."

That's it; because housekeepers will buy white veal, therefore the poor calves must be bled till they are sick and faint and exhausted. Their sufferings are of no account compared with the "demands of trade!" We have notified this butcher that we shall prosecute him if we can detect him in the practice. He practises it because others do, and because it has always been done; and, probably, until we wrote him, it had not occurred to him that the animals suffered almost the pangs of death for days before they were killed.

The faintness occasioned by repeated bleedings, is hard to bear, and injures the meat. A distinguished physiologist says: "An exhaustive bleeding must render the meat less valuable, by removing a portion of its nutritive substances; and if the only object of the butcher is to give the veal a little additional whiteness, the practice cannot be too strongly condemned." A well-known physician writes us: "The practice seems to me a wanton and worse than useless piece of cruelty. Even if there be no acute pain, the poor creatures are put into a state of feebleness and exhaustion, which it would seem, is not only a needless infliction, but deteriorates the nourishing qualities of the meat. Why should not the vendors of meats extract by some process, all the blood they possibly can from all other meats? The revolting practice is kept up merely to gratify the public demand for white, blanched veal, the meat of an anæmic, exhausted animal! A most mistaken view and a most perverted taste."

When will housekeepers learn to demand red veal for their tables? If the people would do this, "the demands of the trade" would stop all calf-bleeding and prevent a vast amount of suffering, a part of which each purchaser of white veal is indirectly responsible for.—Our Dumb Animals.

One Honest Tramp.

He was such a lovely looking old man. His forehead was like a monumental tablet, inscribed only with graces. There was, there could be, no guile in that heart. The smile was peculiarly mournful and poetic. He said he wasn't a tramp—not an ordinary tramp at least. He had been a merchant, but he was ruined and poor, and reduced to this mournful necessity. He was cold, — he was hungry — he was a little of everything. His voice was subdued, his manner pitiful. Bridget brought some bread and meat to the door. I looked at his shivering form and wondered if he was somebody's grandfather. I gazed at his noble countenance and took counsel of that "true inwardness" that ought never to fail. I seated him at the breakfast table, and placed what remained of that meal before him.

"Spoons!" whispered Judgment.

"Fudge!" echoed Charity, and turned her back in proud confidence. The next morning Bridget reported six silver teaspoons missing.

"Sure, I've counted 'em back'ards and farrards, mum, and I can't make 'em right, mum. And I b'leve that ould beggar sinner took 'em—that does I, mum."

"Teaspoons—six!" said I, blankly.

"And one o' them taypots, mum, and a silver jug, mum," she added, plaintively.

"Teapot! jug!" I reiterated.

"And the plated knives do be missed, ah-r-r-r, and thim tramps is villins alive, mum."

"But where could he have put them, Bridget?"

"Lord knows, mum—but thim such has pockets to the soles of the fut."

I put on my thinking cap. Bridget was going to be married in a week—Bridget was going to keep house! What if—happy thought! I locked myself inside her room and outside her huge "kist" as she called it. Carefully applying key after key I found at last the one that fitted. Eureka! there were the spoons, teapot, the cream-jug, knives and forks, packages of sugar, tea, and coffee, and a few neatly folded bundles of linen with my name on them. I did not send for a detective, because Bridget's prayers —howls, rather—prevailed, and I am happy to inform the community at large that I have seen at least one honest tramp.—Graphic.

—A correspondent of the Paris Register gives what purports to be the true story of James Buchanan's unsuccessful love. He was affianced to a lady of Lancaster. Arriving in town late one evening, he donned dressing gown and slippers, and tempted by the cool breeze out of doors, strolled up and down the sidewalk in front of his lodgings. A lady acquaintance across the street called to him and he went over and exchanged a few commonplace remarks with her. A chance caller at the lady's house, on her way home, stopped at the residence of Mr. Buchanan's chosen love and told her that he was in town, and though tired and dusty, had found time to pay a visit to another lady. Next morning the recipient of this information was found dead in her bed, having committed suicide with laudanum. Mr. Buchanan never recovered from the shock which her death gave him.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

—This is what the artist of Harper's Weekly heard in the Chinese Pavillion at the Centennial; First Celestial (delightedly) —"Ah wang choppecumlilliysin chunk-wunky!" Second Celestial (critically)—"Jimwinkwunk?" Third Celestial (with decision)—"Kinsimsimtochilly billliallailoo chop?"

—The wonder is that Daniel Drew didn't fail years ago instead of ever making a fortune in Wall street. He testified in the bankruptcy proceedings that he never kept any books, but trusted his business entirely to his brokers, never looking over their statements or even keeping a check book. He adhered to the style of doing business which he first adopted as a drover. He and his partner used to put their money together in a "wad" to buy cattle. The one that acted as buyer carried the "wad." Each put in it what he received and took from it what he spent, and after several years they divided the "wad" equally. Uncle Daniel carried this system of double entry into Wall street and the "wad" disappeared in the end.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy

is no patent medicine humbug, got up to dupe the ignorant and credulous, nor is it represented as being "compounded of rare and precious substances brought from the four corners of the earth, carried seven times across the Great Desert of Sahara on the backs of fourteen camels, and brought across the Atlantic Ocean in two ships." It is a simple, mild, soothing remedy, a perfect Specific for CATARRH and "COLD IN THE HEAD;" also for Offensive Breath, Loss or Impairment of the Sense of Smell, Taste, or Hearing, Watery or Weak Eyes, Pain or Pressure in the Head, when caused, as they all not unfrequently are, by the violence of Catarrh.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. DR. QUAIN'S

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me another package, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.

Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 9th, and wrote you February 23d of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.

Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of aches and pains caused from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.

JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to try one some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yea, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may say I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.

Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, '75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for near twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head, so severe I do not know how many physicians, and could only get partly relieved. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or ten winters, and have been travelling and visiting medical springs, and still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the worst and most stubborn that they had ever anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and thought that was the only chance for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The improvement here seems to be that if your pills will cure me, they will cure anybody. I have the applications to try for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, TEXAS.

Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those Pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of those Pills.

MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lungs trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

— USE —

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.

Armenian Brides.

Our family party consists of three dozen persons, the representatives of four generations. The young married women come in and out from directing the preparations of the supper. Nothing is to be seen of their faces except their lustrous eyes (Armenian eyes are famous for their brilliancy) a tightly fitting veil enclosing the rest of their features. Without this covering they do not by any chance appear, even in the house; it is said they wear it also at night. One of them is a bride; her dress is rich and striking—a close fitting bodice, fastened at the neck with silver clasps, full trousers of rose-colored silk, gathered in at the ankles by a fillet of silver, the feet bare, a silver girdle of curious workmanship loosely encircling the waist, and a long, padded garment, open down the front, which hangs from the shoulders. Poor little bride. She has not uttered a single word, save when alone with her husband, since she pronounced the marriage vow. She may not hope to do so till after the birth of her first-born child; then she will talk to her nursling, after a while to her mother-in-law, some time later she may converse with her own mother, and by-and-by, in a subdued whisper, with the young girls of the house. During the first year of her married life she may not go out of the house except twice to church. Her disciplinary education will not be complete for six years, after which she will enjoy comparative liberty, but never in her life must she open her lips to a person of the stronger sex not related to her. Turn from the silent little bride to that bevy of young girls merry and playful as the kittens they are fondling—silky-haired snowballs, of a brood peculiar to the neighborhood of Van, their tails dyed pink with henna, like the tail of the Shah's steed. The girls are laughing and chatting together without restraint—most probably about their love affairs, for they are free to dispose of their hands as they choose. And they may walk about unveiled, and show off their pretty faces and long raven plaits to the fullest advantage.—Fraser's Magazine.

A Night Ride In The Caboose.

The car is a short caboose, fashioned like a small, ill-shaped back kitchen, and has no more wheels than a one-horse wagon, which gives it an uneasy and suggestive way on the track. A brakeman sits with head swung out at a window. The conductor sits with his watch in his hand. Nobody has any business there at all. The engineer is doing his best to make a distant station, and get upon the side track before the express wants the road. You find this out by degrees. It makes you feel light, but not airy. The kitchen rocks like a cradle for a dozen rods, and then jounces the light out and the water barrel over and your hat off, and the stove rattles like a smithy in a driving time. Then it gathers itself up like a salient goat, and bounces against the bumper of the next car, and something snaps. No matter. The train swings around a curve, and you feel as you did years ago when you were the last boy on the string in the game of "snap-the-whip." You steady your lower jaw a little, and ask the conductor if he is going to stop before he stops for good, to wit, meets the express, and he says, "Genesee!" It occurs to you that he has mentioned the very place you are bound for, though you never heard of it before. The conductor informs you it is safe to bet we are "just dusting," and you believe him—the only safe thing about the train. It is thirty miles an hour. Another head is hung out of a window, and you think you'll try to count fence posts. It doesn't happen to be a fence but a stockade; and as for telegraph poles, you have seldom observed them thicker to the mile. You look forward and see lights down the track. Drawing in like a turtle you tell the conductor. "What is it, Joe?" and the brakeman replies, "Nothin'." The conductor puts his watch to his ear. Has it stopped? With rattle and roar the engineer keeps launching the train into the midnight. A shrill shriek of the locomotive whistles you up, and you are on your feet like a cat. The brakeman runs up his little iron ladder, the speed slackens, the train comes to a dead halt. It is Genesee, and one grateful passenger leaves that frantic caboose to set foot in it, like Poe's raven, "nevermore."—B. F. Taylor.

—Not long since a billiard player in London, in lighting his cigar, accidentally let his match fall upon a billiard ball, which at once burst into a flame. Efforts were made to extinguish it, unavailingly, and it had to be left until it was finally consumed, which process took a quarter of an hour. The explanation of this strange phenomenon was sought, this being the first time a billiard ball was known to act in such a marvelous manner, the curiosity of the spectators being naturally excited. A chemist explained the secret of the unexpected combustion. The substance with which the new ivory is made is called celluloid, and is a mixture of gun cotton and camphor, compressed and dyed. It forms a hard, elastic material, which, when polished, has an absolute resemblance to ivory.

—There was some excitement in a Pennsylvania Sunday School when a little boy, whose teacher had sent him home for her class cards which she had forgotten, returned in breathless triumph brandishing a euchre deck, with the joker on top.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14, 1876.

Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.

Very little progress has been made with the legislation before Congress since the appearance here of the "Mulligan Guards." Mr. Blaine has been the centre of attraction, around which has revolved a wild and enthusiastic crowd of admirers, including members of Congress, Cabinet, Court, and other officials, and a large majority of our permanent population, all with their hats off ready to cheer this "man with a head on his shoulders" as he charges down upon the Confederate front, and the reserve democratic force from the North and West in the rear of the line. Thus far he has stampeded the white ex-rebel force in every assault. Tarboxes of Massachusetts is the latest victim. He attempted to set himself right yesterday through a personal explanation, and almost before he knew it Messrs. Blaine and Frye had him revolving on a spit before a hot fire, where he was kept till done to a turn. His prevarications and evasions were pitilessly held up to the members and Senators present, and to the derisive merriment of the crowded galleries. I believe the excitement has been increasing every day for the past week. Proctor Knott is permanently disabled. He has been convicted of suppressing Caldwell's dispatch, exonerating Mr. Blaine from any participation in the purchase and sale of Arkansas railroad bonds as was alleged against him, and of a deliberate misstatement relative to the date of appointing the sub-committee. Hunton, its chairman, is about as badly shattered in character, by Mr. Blaine's exposure of the conspiracy against him. It is said that Ben Hill greatly enjoyed the discomfiture of these two ex-Confederates, who have often taunted him with his defeat by the ex-Speaker in the amnesty debate.

Mr. Kerr is still under the fire of investigation, and is seriously ill. The witness Harney has been brow-beaten and insulted without mercy by the democrats of the committee. While the perjurers, dead beats, blacklegs, blackmailers and criminals generally who have been brought here to testify against republicans, have been treated with distinguished consideration by these members, they even volunteering to aid in securing their fees, this one who appeard on their summons has been met in the spirit approaching the ruffianism often witnessed in a police court. Although there is a very general doubt expressed as to Mr. Kerr's receiving a bribe for his influence, I believe that he has succeeded in lowering himself in the estimation of his own party by his heterodox action in appointing a republican to a position in the army. A Bourbon can abide treason; the torture of unarmed prisoners of war; the wholesale butchery of negroes or white political dissenters; the burning of cities and the dissemination of a deadly contagion through infected clothing by rebel emissaries; or even the sale of a member of Congress for twenty dollars; but he cannot look with the least degree of allowance upon such heresy as Mr. Kerr was guilty of when he recommended Green for a commission in the army.

A new conference committee has been appointed upon the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill, and the Senate is still busy with the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, which they have so altered and amended since receiving it from the House that it is not recognizable as the same. About all interest in Congressional proceedings centres about the appropriations, and a more accommodating spirit is observable in the House; so that all the necessary bills may be passed before the expiration of the fiscal year—June 30. The Senate decided to go on with the impeachment trial of Belknap, which will defer the date of adjournment for some weeks and give the Senators a warm job with the determined counsel of the accused. Although only a few reports have yet, been reached by the investigating committees, the interest in them is quite dead. Some pretence of work is still kept up by a few of them, but the hot weather and the worn out condition of the investigators, the investigatees and the witnesses, renders progress very slow.

Secretary Robeson has effectually silenced the swarms of liars and detractors who have been encouraged to do their best against him in the line of their vocation. After demanding a hearing with open doors, repeatedly, it was unwillingly and sulkily granted him. When that was accomplished it took him but a few moments to dispose of the veracious witnesses of the committee.

MAXWELL.

PHILADELPHIA, PENN., June 10.

THE CHINA MANIA.

Of all the fashionable manias, which are accounted as quite the thing, that for old China ware is the most universal and absorbing at the Exposition. From the twelfth century to the present day every era has been distinctly marked by rare and beautiful specimens in this and kindred kinds of ware, from the brown biscuit relics of the Aztecs to the latest wonders of Sevres. Interesting to all, but quite bewildering to the collector and to the one who attempts a description by word of mouth or pen. We quite despair of conveying an adequate idea of the number, beauty and cost of those on exhibition. The Chinese claim that ceramic ware was in its highest state of perfection about one thousand years prior to the beginning of the Christian era. A piece of lacquered ware carefully shown visitors yesterday at the Japanese department, is held at the modest sum of five thousand dollars—a good Western farm for a frail piece of porcelain!

JAPANESE WARE.

When all the fine ware contributed by Japan has been mastered by careful study, the education relative to such niceties may be considered complete, for here is the Alpha and Omega of the art. One day's study in this departure makes the quaint, refined, soft-speaking people more than ever a conundrum. We have been so accustomed to make merry over the clumsy artistic efforts upon Japanese fans and screens, that it is with a sense of rebuke that we contemplate the many evidences before us of their skill and cunning. Their bronze work is of two kinds—the cheaper sort cast, the other cut or chiseled, with a patient touch marvelously delicate. Attention was called to one vase in the collection, valued at $2000, which represents the labor of one artist for 2500 days, according to the official in charge. The chief ground color of Japanese bronze is dark steel, contrasted with fine tracery of gold and silver; but on very rare pieces are observed figures in high relief and most grotesquely natural in form. Here the artist's humor finds expression in a thousand different ways. Poetic and historical allusions abound and their teachings are plain enough. I am convinced that the American people could sit at the feet of this Eastern nation for a generation and learn much that would be profitable, both in arts and manners, meantime instilling into their minds a sublime contempt for their high form of etiquette which demands the ceremony of Harikari. Official and domestic life are mercilessly caricatured in some of these figures. Every detail is given with infinite zest and great spirit. The Japanese appear to do with pottery what a more Western civilization does with marble and canvas, making it a teacher of great political and social truths. The largest specimen of bronze is ten feet high; its cost, $2500. It is covered by representations of animals, their distinguishing characteristics being given with a precision, almost rivaling the great master Germon in his "Reynard the Fox." Japanese perspective, which so excites our ridicule, is really intended for burlesque. Mighty dragons are contorted into handles for this vase. Just across the way is another vase whose handles are made of flocks of birds, and for a moment you almost believe them in motion, so perfect is the illusion. The obliging gentleman in charge—a manufacturer—will explain to the curious visitors a group of draped porcelain figures which caricature various classes in Japanese life. This gentleman will also convince you of the superiority of the Japanese in works of this kind over the balance of the world. He will acknowledge the great merits of the French plates on which, in tints as delicate as enamel, are painted, after Palissy, the beauties of the Luxemborg in the reign of the "grande Monarch;" he will acknowledge the rare beauty and exquisite taste displayed in the Berlin vases; also of the achievements in the Vienna ware. But none of them, he will convincingly show you, can compare with the beauties of the collections under his charge. The Kaga ware, that from Tokio and that from Yokohama are as distinct in character as silk, linen and woolen fabrics.

The lacqured ware is so cheap as to be in very general use in Japan; and we doubt not that very many specimens will be left behind when this gentleman returns to his own country. One vase, worth $500, will be presented to Philadelphia to remain in "Memorial Hall." The collections of screens are numerous and novel. Embroidery is combined with painting on them, with very delicate and harmonious results. Screens are their nearest approach to our pictures; and it is said that a gallery filled with them convey, a very correct impression of Japanese life.

News and Notes.

Mr. Blaine was so much better, Monday evening, that Dr. Verdi telegraphed Hon. Eugene Hale, at Cincinnati, as follows: "Mr. Blaine's condition has steadily improved all day. Another night's rest, it is expected, will restore so much of his nervous powers as to have his exhaustion entirely disappear. It is now only a question of time for a restoration of his usual strength."

Augustus Stowell, at one time candidate for Mayor of Newburyport, was arrested Sunday charged with extreme cruelty to his wife. He had brutally beaten her about the head on Wednesday, and kept her locked in a room since. When liberated erysipelas had supervened in her wounds, and her case is quite critical.

St. Mary's Temperance Society, at Nashua, contributed $100 towards the Centennial Catholic Temperance Fountain at Philadelphia on Sunday.

The cemeteries in Nashua, for some time past have, been visited by wretches in the form of men, who break and disfigure headstones, steal plants, flowers, etc. The police and citizens are on the watch for them.

Nathan F. Tilton of Loudon, a soldier of the war of 1812, died recently at the age of about 80 years.

Miss Huldah Hoag, one of the most esteemed members of the Sandwich society of Quakers, died recently, aged nearly seventy years.

Thomas Vessey, aged 94 years, and the oldest person in Deerfield, died recently. He was a wealthy farmer and a generous and public spirited ettizen.

Rev. Nathan P. Foster, D. D., who recently died in Connecticut, was born in Fitzwilliam, in this State, Feb. 10, 1814. He graduated at Dartmouth Medical College in 1834. Soon after he commenced the practice of medicine in Unity, where he remained several years. Subsequently he abandoned that profession, and preparing himself for the ministry was ordained pastor of the Baptist church at Cornish in 1843.

John H. Hoitt, a veteran anti-slavery man, one of the old Free Soil Guard and a consistent Christian for nearly half a century, died recently at Deerfield, at the age of 79 years. He was a drummer boy for a company of minute men in 1812, and had been married 58 years to the wife who survives him. Two of his sons fought in the war of the Rebellion, of whom one filled a martyr's grave at Andersonville and the other lives a life sufferer from his many wounds.

Speaker Kerr was on Tuesday reported to be better, and hopes of his recovery are entertained.

The Troy (N. Y.) Times tells of a lady, living half a mile distant, who saw the Fort Edward bridge, on the Rensselaer and Saratoga Railroad, burning, and, seizing a baby's dress, she rushed to the track and waved it to warn the mail train, which was approaching. It is probable that an appalling disaster would have occurred were it not for this timely signal.

A gang of desperadoes stopped a butcher in Lindsey, R. I., on Friday, and attempted to rob him. One of them brandished a long knife, and he would undoubtedly have used it effectively had he not been prevented by Officer Henry C. Pollard of Lonsdale, who fortunately happened along just in time to take a hand in the affair. The officer knocked down the owner of the knife, and two other assailants made their appearance. By the aid of his revolver Mr. Pollard succeeded in capturing one of the party, James Collins, and drove the others off.

The issue of subsidiary silver coin seems to be so far regarded as successful in its working as to encourage the House of Representatives to pass a bill authorizing the issue of $10,000,000 in exchange for legal tender notes, which are to be held until a corresponding amount of fractional currency has been received in payment of Government dues and destroyed. A bill has also passed authorizing the purchase of bullion and issue of coin to the amount of $20,000,000, to be paid out from the Treasury aside from the redemption of fractional currency. These measures ought to give plenty of silver change.

"Cry Aloud! Spare Not!"

I see by Monday's papers that one more effort is being made to save the Old South in Boston from destruction. Some energetic young men—Heaven bless them!—have obtained permission to hold it through this week, while they make a last struggle to raise the sum required to redeem it from the hands of the mammon-worshippers. Only one week in which to save Boston from shame and unavailing regret! Cannot we do something to help Boston in this her utmost need? Portsmouth boys have saved the Old South once. Proud and happy were we here at home, when we heard that, by the exertions of our brave firemen, the flames had been driven back, and that edifice, so dear to all patriots, had come forth from the fire unscathed.

Since then we have stood by and watched in indignation and sorrow the slow and sure victory of greed over patriotism, of money over all sacred associations. But now, when we thought all was over, one last struggle is to be made. Portsmouth boys, can you do nothing now? Must we go to Boston, year after year, and turn away our eyes in grief and shame from the old familiar site? We rejoice to believe that such an outrage would be impossible here. We love our old landmarks and historic sites too well to sacrifice them thus. But "Shall we, whose souls are lighted

With wisdom from on high,
Shall we, to men benighted
The lamp of life deny?"

Can we not at least raise our voices loud enough to reach dulled Boston ears, and cry, "Stop! stop! ere it be too late. Think what you are doing, before it cannot be undone. Come forward, while the day of grace lasts, and help these young men to save you from your own disgrace."

SPIRIT OF '76.

A Pleasant Neighborhood.

The North End of Market street for a long while has borne a hard reputation, and deservedly so; and not a few complaints have been made against the police for not bringing to trial the roughs and bullies who infest that locality. But in all cases of disturbance in which the police have been notified, they claim that they have endeavored to have justice served out to the wrongdoers; but it is extremely difficult to get testimony to convict the guilty parties, some witnesses fearing to testify for fear of receiving bodily harm, (in some instances being threatened before the trials come off, as to what would be done to them if they dared to tell the whole truth,) and more being in entire sympathy with the roughs and rowdies. Within a month three or four brutal fights or assaults have occurred in that district. In the case of Buchanan, the sailor who was so badly beaten some three weeks ago, the assailants would almost certainly have got clear had it not been for the testimony of Capt. Brady, a stranger,—although a large number of the denizens of the district witnessed the whole affair. On Sunday, the 3d inst., a good-sized row was organized there, and but for the prompt notification of the police would probably have resulted in a genuine free fight. On Saturday night, shortly before midnight, there was some shouting of murder heard, and people who looked out of their windows saw three heroes pummeling one man, who on getting away from them made off at the top of his speed, but has not as yet made any complaint to the authorities. On Sunday last another cowardly affair—and as brutal as cowardly—took place in the same vicinity, this time on the Concord Railroad wharf. The victim, a man named Mullen, was taken to the police station and found to be shockingly mangled about the head, his wounds being dressed by Dr. Jones. One John Cowick (or Couhig, or some similar-sounding name) was arraigned on Monday, charged with the assault, and held in $200 bonds until Friday, Mullen being sent to the hospital for treatment. For the past ten days the police have been keeping an extra lookout in the direction of the Railroad wharf, for fear of an attack by the striking coal-heavers upon the men set at work in their places, but none has occurred. Water street used to be the worst part of the city, so far as fights and brutal assaults are concerned; but since a goodly proportion of the worst of the Water streets roughs went away in government ships, and many of the rest were put under bonds to keep the peace, the North End of Market street bids fair to win the distinction of having the most unsavory reputation of any district in the city.

Jottings.

The Schooner Como, Lewis, from Haverhill, towed by steam-tug Thurlow Weed, ran into the railroad bridge at Newburyport at 6:15 P. M., Monday, and knocked the bridge six inches out of place, stopping all trains. The schooner was slightly damaged. The up train from this city at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning had to back from Newburyport to this city again, not being able to cross the bridge.

By an advertisement in another column the opening for the season of the famous Appledore House, at the Shoals, is announced to take place on the 15th. The island, the hotel, the steamer, and the genial, hearty, attentive and deservedly popular proprietors and managers, the "Laighton Boys," are too well and widely known to need—however much they deserve—the "puffs" of a newspaper; and Capt. Robinson, who this season will run the Appledore steamer, is just the kind of a man the Laightons would be expected to secure for the position—a thoroughly capable commander, and a gentleman. The number of rooms engaged for early occupancy at the Appledore House is much larger than for any previous season, and on Tuesday the steamer took out the first arrivals—a party of ladies from New York and Philadelphia.

The Strawberry Festival of the Woman's Temperance League, at Rechabite Hall, continues this evening. Doors open at 6 o'clock; admission 10 cents.

William Moles, arrested on suspicion of having set fire to Mary Hodgdon's buildings on the Newington road some time ago, was on Monday discharged by Judge Page, the evidence not being sufficient to hold him.

The Boston Agency for furnishing "Swedish Help" has since 1871 been the means of satisfactorily settling the "servant-gal question" in a number of families in this city. We have never heard anything but commendation of the servants procured through this agency, they being neat and capable, and—more important than all else—willing to give entire satisfaction to their employers. The advertisement of the agency in another column tells how to get to work to secure one of these really good servants.

A store in Rye, on the corner of the road leading to the site of the destroyed Ocean House, was burned Monday night, with its contents. It was occupied by Mr. Wesley Jenness, who had an insurance of $2000 on his stock, the building being insured for a similar amount.

Dr. Curtis, while riding up Islington street, Tuesday afternoon, noticed something wrong about the harness and got out to arrange it, when the horse suddenly turned and ran, soon leaving one wheel of the carriage near a post opposite Dr. Ryder's residence, and finishing the smashing-up of the vehicle against the barber's pole and trellis-work in front of the entrance to Urch's rattan-ware manufactory. Here the horse fell, with the barber's pole and trellis on top of him, and was captured apparently unhurt. The carriage was a total wreck.

The Circus.

John H. Murray's great Railroad Circus, which claims to be the only legitimate circus in America, in support of this claim presents the following list of "rare attractions: 1st, Charles W. Fish, the acknowledged champion bare-back rider of the world, who performs the most marvellous feats of equestrianism ever attempted. 2d, The laughable Ballet Pantomime of 'Love in a Tub,' rendered in gorgeous style, by a complete troupe of pantomimists. 3d, The great historical Shakspercan Tragedy of Richard III., with truthful representations of the terrific battle on Bosworth field; the killing of King Richard and death of White Surrey, with a powerful array of soldiers. 4th, Miss Minnie Marks, the best lady bare-back rider in the world. 5th, The Congress of famous clowns, numbering Tom Barry, the Hiberenian vocalist and jester; Whimsical Walker, the drollest of the droll; Hiram Marks, the gentlemanly exponent of refined comedy; and Charles H. Adams, the eccentric grotesque,—making more clowns than were ever before engaged in one circus. 6th, Professor Parker's school of dog actors, the most remarkable canine performers in the world. 7th, Mlle. Eva, the dashing and sensational artiste on the high wire, together with Mr. Murray's well known attractions which have gained for him a world-wide renown. The name of John H. Murray is as familiar in Europe as America, and wherever his name is pronounced, the accompanying declaration is 'Murray's Circus is the best in America,' and well he deserves the proud distinction. It has been gained by years of honest toil and incessant labor, a close application to his business, a sensitive regard for the tastes of his patrons and a liberality in furnishing the public a moral and refined exhibition." Murray's circus will be here on Wednesday, June 21.

Electricity Against Gas.

The Great Northern Railway Company of France has undertaken a series of experiments which seem to indicate the approach of a great revolution in the mode of lighting public buildings and thoroughfares. To judge from the reports recently published, electricity seems destined to eclipse gas altogether. A few weeks ago a three-horse power Gamme machine was employed to light the luggage department of the Paris Great Northern Railway station. The room or hall measures 20,000 cubic feet, and is generally illuminated by twenty-five gas burners. The new electric light was placed at a distance of ten metres from the ground, and gave a light of a peculiarly soft character, which rendered the use of the dull globe employed to check the irritating glare of gas quite unnecessary—a fact of some importance, as it tends to augment the economy realized by the new system. The light continued to burn the whole evening with great regularity, excepting, of course, when it was purposely lowered. The success attained was so conclusive, if we believe accounts, that the company intend illuminating the vast structure, containing 300,000 cubic metres of space, where the trains arrive, by the same process. For this purpose electric lanterns, if we may so call them, of exceptional power, will be placed at the four summits of a rectangle, so there will be no shade or dark corner in the whole edifice. The goods station at La Chapelle will also be lighted in a similar manner.

M. Tresca, an energetic advocate of the electric system, has been able at last to estimate the amount of power required to produce a given quantity of light by the magneto electric machines. In this respect former experiments had been eminently unsatisfactory, and M. Tresca gives an exhaustive description of all the difficulties that had to be surmounted, in a report which is inserted in the minutes of the Academy of Science. The results have been obtained chiefly from two machines—the first giving a light equivalent to 1,850 carcel burners, that consume forty grammes of oil per hour, and the second equal 302 similar burners. With the former it is easy to read at a distance of 21.50 m., and with the latter at 7.70 m. The reflection, also, from the walls is so strong that persons can read at these distances even when holding the book with its back to the light. From a lamp equal to a hundred burners the same result can be obtained at a distance of five metres. Four electric lamps of this power have been in use during the last year in the factory of Messers. Heilmann, Ducommon & Steinlen, of Mulhouse, and give satisfactory light over an area of 1,850 square metres. The most important and crowning fact, however, is the assertion that the electric light is a hundred times less expensive than oil, and fifty times cheaper than gas. Should a prolonged and practical application of the new system prove this startling comparison to be correct, we may look forward to a great change, which will ultimately compel the gas makers to, at any rate, make a great alteration in their scale of charges, if it should not interfere even more seriously with their interests.—Builder.

A Model Fire Department.

The chief engineer of the Wilmington fire department came over to our town the other day, upon a visit to the chief of our department, whose name is Jacobs; and it struck Jacobs that it would be a first-rate idea to show the visitor how efficient our fire department is. So Jacobs got an old tar barrel and set it upon the roof of his stable, and touched it off with a match. When it began to burn pretty freely he gave the signal for the alarm, remarking at the same time to the Wilmington man:

"You'll see that fire put out in about four seconds by the boys."

They waited four seconds for the boys, but they didn't come. They waited fifteen minutes, and still nobody came. Jacobs was furious, and as the barrel was burning very near to the roof, he sent a boy around to the nearest engine house to ascertain what was the matter. When the boy came back he said the firemen were all out at a picnic excepting the members of the Washy Hose, who had gone over to Pancader to fight a couple of roosters. By this time the roof of the barn was on fire, and Jacobs was pretty near crazy. The visitor wanted to telegraph over to Wilmington for his department, but Jacobs alleged that he'd let the eternal earth burn to charcoal before he'd consent to such a thing. Then he sent a man on a fast horse to bring the boys in from that picnic, and by the time they reached the engine house the stable was in ashes, and Peter's stable, next door, had begun to burn. So when the engines arrived, Jacobs directed them to play upon that, and then they got to work; but after pumping for a while without getting any water, Jacobs was just about losing his senses, when Mr. McAllister came up and mentioned that the supervisors had let all the water out of the reservoir so as to clean it. Then Jacobs sat down to fan himself, and to try to decide whether to commit suicide or to leave the country. And the Wilmington man went home with the idea that he hadn't much to learn from Jacobs about extinguishing fires.—Max Adeler.

The True Medical Philosophy.

The remarkable cures of dyspepsia, constipation, general debility, intermittent and remittent fevers, nervousness, mental despondency, and a host of other ailments, by that popular tonic, stomachic and alterative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, prove that to vitalize, not deplete, the sick, is the true medical philosophy. Under the old system patients underwent a course of treatment that often had the effect of exhausting their few remaining energies. Drastic purgation, and the administration of violent remedies with a weakening reaction, were frequently and most unnecessarily resorted to in cases where invigoration combined with mild regulative treatment was the sole desideratum. That this unwise mode of medication has been to a great extent abandoned is in no small degree due to the success which has attended the peerless remedy above named.

Asthma and phthisic are cured by Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam when all other remedies fail. 25 and 75 cents. Large bottles cheapest. $1000 for a case it will not cure.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

The girls are to be dressed in frocks representing the three national colors, and will be so grouped on a large platform as to present the appearance of an immense national flag.

—"What kind of a clock do you call that, landlord?" asked a visitor, comparing his watch with the mantel time-keeper in a country hotel. "That?—oh! that's one of them eight-day fellers," replied the landlord; "every eight days you have to take it around to get it fixed, you know."—New York Commercial.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy

is no patent medicine humbug, got up to dupe the ignorant and credulous, nor is it represented as being "composed of rare and precious substances brought from the four corners of the earth, carried seven times across the Great Desert of Sahara on the backs of fourteen camels, and brought across the Atlantic Ocean in two ships." It is a simple, mild, soothing remedy, a perfect Specific for CATARRH and "COLD IN THE HEAD;" also for Offensive Breath, Loss or Impairment of the Sense of Smell, Taste, or Hearing, Watery or Weak Eyes, Pain or Pressure in the Head, when caused, as they all not unfrequently are, by the violence of Catarrh.

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the root of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1876.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.

Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 9th, and wrote you February 22d of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years; When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.

Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking Dr. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of aches and pains caused from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.

JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 18, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I knew the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been as free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are as you say, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.

Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, '75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for near twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I tried I do not know how many physicians, and could only partly relieved. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or ten winters, sometimes travelling and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the obstinate and most stubborn that they had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and thought that was the only chance for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The impression here seems to be that if your pills will cure me, they will cure anybody. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Shercell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.

Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those Pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of those Pills. MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS are put up only by the AMERICAN MEDICINE CO., Manchester, N. H., THOMAS W. LANE, Agent.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lungs trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.

Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.

BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.

Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.

In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

THE GRAY'S ON DECK AGAIN.

Why, bless my heart! say, look hyar, Jim,
When did you get to town?
Dog'on if I ain't glad, old boy,
To see you. Come, sit down,
And we'll have a talk of the ole, ole time,
And of the battles not fought in vain,
For the tide has turned, the Yanks are ruined,
And the Gray's on deck again.

It's many a day since we last met
In the trench near the old mud fort,
Where we oftimes piled the Yanks up high
In the morn, after a good night's sport.
Yes, they scooped us in at the end, I know,
Though it went against our grain;
But the tide has turned, the Yanks are ruined,
And the Gray's on deck again.

Who do you think that I seed this morn,
As I walked down the Avenue,
But old Ben Sims?—you know him well—
He war captain of gun number two;
And he said as how we were fixed. By jing!
You oughter heard him proclaim
How he got the posish of a one-armed Yank,
For the Gray's on deck again.

Yes, Congress is bound for to fix them now,
And to teach them a lesson or two.
We're gwine to get back the niggers they stole
With their army of boys in blue.
Then we'll shout hurrah! for the Southern star,
And the land of the cotton and cane,
For our yar of jubilo has come,
And the Gray's on deck again.

The Eastern Question.

An English publication illustrates the Eastern trouble by the following hit-off:

"Save the man with the red hair!" was the agonized exclamation of an old gentleman, as he saw a canoe overwhelmed in its passage down the Sault St. Marie, the island-beset channel between lakes Superior and Huron; "a hundred dollars for the man with red hair!" An Indian for every dollar jumped into the surging waters, and the "man with the red hair" was soon deposited on the grass at the old man's feet. "Pray, sir," he asked, on recovering himself, "to what am I indebted for the interest you, a stranger to me, have taken to save my life. I do not even know you." "Perhaps not," replied the stranger, "but I am one of the firm of Screw, Nail & Driver, of New York, and you are on our books for $5,000, every cent of which we should have lost had you been sucked in.' The moral of this story is, that when people have an interest to lose by you, they will lend a hand to keep you up, and that is why England and other powers are unwilling to do anything to precipitate a catastrophe in Turkey just now; she owes us all so much that we can't afford her being decentralised or disintegrated. Nor would any of us be pleased to receive Bosnia as a representative or alternative debtor. "Waiter?" exclaimed Robert Macaire, after a splendid dinner at the Cafe Royal, "I don't happen to have brought my portemonnaie, but my friend will deposit with you 15,000 Siberia bonds, bearing interest at 12 per cent., with unadjusted coupons attached, for the last twelve years. Which will you have, the bonds or my hat?" "Thank you, sir," replied the waiter, "if there is to be an option, I should prefer the hat, even such a hat as it is!"

—The following paragraph appears in the London World: "The Hon. Hugh Courtenay has made the tour du monde as an imposter. He is well known and very much wanted at Calcutta. He had a merry little knack of losing money at cards in that city, and paying (say) £20 by giving a £50 check, pocketing the difference: sequel, check dishonored. He even fooled Lord Northbrook, dining at Government House, and escorting the Hon. Miss Baring, on a voyage to England some two years ago, as far as Galle. There he got a hint that his true character had leaked out and he cleverly shaped his course to Australia. The money with which he paid his passage from Calcutta he borrowed, I think, of Mr. Baden Powell, a guileless gentleman of the Woods and Forests Department. He was profuse in his thanks to Mr. Powell, and promised him, by gad, a day's ratting on his estates in England as soon as he caught him there."

—They were talking about emergencies, and somebody asked a mild looking stranger what he would do if suddenly placed in great peril. He said he hardly knew, but thought he should follow his usual practice and crawl under the bed. The ladies in the party thought he must be afraid of thunder storms, but the men knew he was married. —Norwich Bulletin.

—"It's all very well," said John Henry, "for her to insist that I should pull up every tack, but it's too much tax on one's patience, and I'll be—eh! I was just saying, Mrs. Henry, that the fellow who did this work before left lots of tacks in the floor." And then he sighed, and commenced clawing away like a mad catamount.—Cincinnati Times.

—William and Mary Howitt are living quietly at Rome. Mr. Howitt is growing quite old, and his memory is falling fast. Mrs. Howitt is a gentle, cheery lady, as full of pleasant talk as she could have been thirty years ago. Both are ardent spiritualists, and occasional seances are held at their rooms, with the usual success and non-success to believers and unbelievers.

—"James, my love, perhaps—what do you think?—perhaps, maybe you know, dear—it just occurred to me it might be cheaper to get a couple more silk dresses this summer—because, you see the mulberry has blighted the silk in the south of France and the crop will be short and dress goods awful high next year."

THURSDAY, JUNE 15, 1876.

New Hampshire Legislature.

A Convention of the two branches was held on the 13th, to fill vacancies in Councillor Districts Nos. 3 and 5, where there was no choice at the last election. John W. Parker was elected in No. 3 and Evarts W. Farr No. 5.—both republicans.

The republican caucus for nominating a U. S. Senator meets at Concord this evening, with all reporters and newspaper men excluded except O. C. Moore, Esq., of the Nashua Telegraph, who is a member of the House.

News and Notes.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Blaine was so far recovered as to be able to write with his own hand a telegram to Hon. Eugene Hale, at Cincinnati, as follows: "I am entirely convalescent, suffering only from physical weakness. Impress upon my friends the great depth of gratitude I feel for the unparalleled steadfastness with which they have adhered to me in my hour of trial." His physicians are jubilant, as well they may be. Drs. Verdi and Pope are homeopaths, which accounts for the allopathic doctors disputing the correctness of this diagnosis,—though it seems the little-pill gentleman was right.

The republican National Convention met at Cincinnati on Wednesday, and was called to order by Ex-Gov. Morgan, chairman of the National Committee. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Mullen, after which Hon. Theodore M. Pomeroy of New York was chosen temporary chairman. It is hardly probable a vote was reached on Wednesday.

On Sunday night Mrs. Carrie Hart and Mr. Peck, while walking in the suburbs of Bridgeport, Conn., were set upon by several roughs and Mrs. Hart ravished by the entire party. Five of them have been arrested.

George Smart of Fremont, 35 years old, was killed at Epping on Monday evening by a Nashua and Rochester train. He leaves a family. He was drunk and laid down on the track.

United States Senator Henry B. Anthony was re-elected on the 13th by the Rhode Island legislature, by a vote of 96 to 4. This will make the Senator's fourth term.

Irish Liquor Merchants.

We like to have our countrymen prosper, unless they take to the whiskey trade. We do not wish them to thrive in that business, for their prosperity means misery to hundreds of Irishmen around them.

One whisky-selling Irishman is not as much to us as 100 toiling Irishmen. We would rather see twenty Irish mechanics snug and comfortable, than to see them poor, that one man might be pampered and gorged upon their ruin. Twenty cottages owned by as many of our thrifty countrymen, and worth $1000 apiece, is a pleasanter sight to us than "a brick row" worth $200,000, built by one Irishman on whisky money, drawn from the sweat of the laborers' brows.

It is said, "If Irishmen don't sell it others will." Well, let them. We do not grudge them the glory. The mischief won't be so much to us. An Irish liquor store "draws" our people worse than any other. The "patriots" in this city drape their stores in green on Patrick's Day. Green letters form their signs. The harp is painted on them. An "O" or "Mac" is put to the name; whether it ever had one or not. The man, individually, moves among us. He has access to our people; he shouts for Ireland; he pays to the church; he mounts his steed in the procession; his personal popularity becomes capital; he can pay a good bonus for it; his advertisement shines in the favorite "religious" paper; his name "by hook or crook" is pressed before our people's eyes as "one of ourselves"—one of their great men. Has he not more power than another to lure our people into his drinking place? Will his influence not reach scores of Irishmen, untouched by other dealers, and untempted by appetite?

It would be better for our people if no Irishman in America owned a liquor store. It would be better for our race and religion if those of them now in it left it. Their success in that trade is always bad news to their countrymen. In another walk the sun of prosperity might shine on them, and every heart would be glad. Many of them are good and true at heart. We wish to heaven they would break in their barrel ends! It would be "the sign of luck" for them and a matter of joy to all identified with them in relations of family, faith or race.—Catholic Total Abstinence Union.

A Baby Smoker.

There's a little shaver of our acquaintance, three years of age, of most respectable parents, who has been an inveterate tobacco smoker for several months. He is never so happy as when he is indulging in his regular puff at a cigar or pipe, and strange to say the indulgence of the pernicious habit does not seem to harm him in the least. It is amusing to watch him as he loads his pipe, with what eagerness he stows away the charge, strikes the match and pulls away. If you give him money he will treat himself to a cigar and take the most keen enjoyment while smoking it. His father is quite a smoker, and it has been argued by some that the boy directly inherited the habit, and it is hoped that it will soon leave him. At any rate there is no help for it at present, the boy will smoke, and efforts to deprive him of his tobacco have a decidedly ill effect upon the little fellow. It is a singular case, and he seems to thrive on tobacco smoking, which if indulged in by other children of his age, would be likely to produce serious if not fatal results.—Cape Ann (Mass.) Advertiser.

Queer Patents.

The Washington Chronicle says that a man obtained a patent for a combined plow and cannon. The beam of the plow was made of iron, and bored out so as to form a cannon. Whenever the farmer, while at work in the field, saw savages or tramps approaching, he was to unhitch his team, so as to get them from before the muzzle, apply his match and say his prayers, for the farmer was a good deal more likely to be killed by the recoil than the savages by the shot. In case the cannon went off while in use as a plow, it was unfortunate for both the team and the farmer. A patent was granted to another person for tying a brick to a cow's tail, so as to prevent her switching her tail in his eyes while milking. Another received a patent for placing a house on rollers, so that in case of an earthquake the house would not be shaken to pieces. Still another received a patent for a combined trunk and a house. The trunk is made with triple walls, so that by taking the articles out of the trunk and extending the two extra walls the house is formed.

First Appearance of the Gypsies.

One day, four hundred and fifty years ago, or thereabouts, there knocked at the gates of the city of Luneburg, on the Elbe, as strange a rabble rout as had ever been seen by German burgher. There were three hundred of them, men and women, accompanied by an extraordinary number of children. They were dusky of skin, with jet-black hair and eyes; they wore strange garments; they were unwashed and dirty even beyond the liberal limits tolerated by the cold-water fearing citizens of Luneburg; they had with with them horses, donkeys and carts; they were led by two men whom they described as duke and count. These two alone were dressed in some kind of splendor, and rode richly caparisoned horses; they were most courteous in manner; they seemed careful to conciliate; they talked among themselves a strange language, and they understood the language of the country. All they asked was permission to camp for a few days outside the gates. All the Lunebergers turned out to gaze open-mouthed at these pilgrims, while the duke and the count told the authorities their tale, which was wild and romantic, even had they invented a story to suit their own objects, no other could so well have enlisted the sympathies of a credulous, kindly, uncritical and soft-hearted folk. Many years before, they explained, while the tears of penitence stood in the eyes of all but the youngest children, they had been a Christian community, living in orthodoxy, and therefore happiness, in a far-off country as Egypt. The Lunebergers had heard of Egypt. Crusades had not been out of fashion more than two hundred years, and people still told of dreadful things done in Egypt as well as in the Holy land. Egypt, indeed, was about as well known to mediæval Europe as it was to the Israelites under the judges. The strangers came from Egypt. It was the land of the Phœnix. It was not far from the dominions of Prester John. It was the country of the Saracen and the infidel. They were then a happy Christian flock. To their valley came the Saracens, an execrable race, worshipping Mahound. Yielding, in an evil hour, to the threats and persecutions of their conquerors, they—here they turned their faces and wept aloud—they abjured Christ. But thereafter they had no rest or peace, and a remorse so deep fell upon their souls that they were fain to arise, leave their homes, and journey to Rome in hope of getting reconciliation with the church. They were graciously received by the Pope who promised to admit them back into the fold after seven years of penitential wandering. They had letters of credit from King Sigismund—would the Lunebergers kindly look at them?—granting safe conduct, and recommending them to the protection of all honest people. The Luneberg folk were touched at the recital of so much suffering in a cause so good; they granted the request of the strangers. They allowed them to encamp; they watched in curiosity while the black tents were pitched, the naked babies rolled out on the grass, the donkeys tethered, and the brass kettle slung over the newly kindled fire; then they went home. The next day the strangers visited the town. In the evening a good many things were missed, especially those unconsidered trifles which a house-wife may leave about her doorway. Poultry became suddenly scarce; eggs doubled in price; it was rumored that purses had been lost while their owners gazed at the strangers; cherished cups of silver were not to be found. Could it be that these Christian penitents, these remorseful backsliders, these seekers after holiness, these interesting pilgrims, so gentle of speech, so courteous and humble, were cut-purses and thieves? The next day there remained no longer any doubt about the matter at all, because the gentle strangers were taken in the act, red-handed. While the Luneburgers took counsel, in their leisurely way, how to meet a case so uncommon, the pilgrims suddenly decamped, leaving nothing behind them but the ashes of their fires and the picked bones of their purloined poultry. Then Dogberry called to him his brother Verges, and they fell to thanking God that they were rid of knaves. This was the first historical appearance of gypsies. It was a curious place to appear in. The mouth of the Elbe is a long way from Egypt, even if you travel by sea, which does not appear to have been the case; and a journey on land not only would have been infinitely more fatiguing, but would, one would think, have led to some notice on the road before reaching Luneburg. There, however, the gypsies are first heard of, and henceforth history has plenty to say about their doings.—Temple Bar.

Movement of Storm Centres.

In Meteorology, the most interesting paper that has recently appeared is that by W. C. Ley, published in the Journal of the Scottish Meteorological Society. Mr. Ley presents an attempt at a philosophical explanation of the movements of storm centres; but it is his statistical researches that are of especial value, since, like those of Loomis, they pave the way for the correct understanding of the subject. He states that he himself belongs to those who believe that a cyclonic system is not to be treated as an eddy in the prevailing currents, and that its westward or eastward motion is not wholly due to the force of those currents. He finds from his extensive studies that the mean track of storm centres show a general coincidence with prevailing winds, and individual depressions show a tendency to travel around temporary local areas of high barometer, keeping the latter on the right hand in the European storms. A suggestion of Mr. Robert Tennent seems to have led him during the past year to examine whether there is any connection between the movement of the storm centre and the position of its steepest barometic gradients. He finds that of 800 storms passing near Great Britain during nine years, the large majority had a tendency to move in directions parallel to the trend of the steepest gradients; thus when the isobars are closest on the southeast side, the tangents trend toward the northeast, and fifty-five per cent. of these storms move in the same direction. He finds also evidences of a less important disturbing force tending to make the depressions move toward the northeast by east. It would be interesting to compare Ley's rules with the behavior of American storms. We can see no reason why they should obtain for the storms occurring between the Rocky Mountains and the Atlantic coast.—Scientific Record, in Harper's, for July.

NOTICE.

MARBLE WORK,
I would respectfully invite the people of Portsmouth and vicinity, who have lost relatives or friends, or have occasion for the use of any kind of stone work to call before purchasing elsewhere. My stock consists of Monuments, Headstones, Marble Posts, Mantel Shelves, Pier Tops, &c., the stock for which was bought and men employed to work the same, since the commencement of the present hard times. I have not sufficient room in which to place more work, and do not wish to discharge any of my hands. For the above reasons, I feel confident that no one can undersell me with the same quality of stock and work. I take occasion to tell the attention of all who are repairing or building houses, to my large stock of Mantel Shelves and Pier Tops!
I also have Three LOTS, enclosed with Granite Curbs and Posts, in Harmony Grove and Sagamore Cemeteries, which I will sell at a discount.

Ladies' Seamen's Friend Society.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Seaman's Friend Society was opened by Rev. Charles A. Holbrook. The report of the Secretary was then read, and from it we select a few items of special interest. The Society dates from 1832, and has in past times maintained a Seaman's Home for eighteen years. In response to appeals from many directions, the present Seaman's Home, No. 8 State street, was opened Nov. 1, 1875, the expense of outfit, etc., to the Society, being $378.01. In aid of the enterprise the Society received the following contributions:

Annual memberships	$74.00
Life memberships	72.00
Woman's Temperance League, including a donation of $10 from Rev. Mr. Goss' parish,	37.50
From Navy Yard and Training Ship, including $5.50 from crew of the "Sabine" and $1.43 from children of Navy Yard Sunday School,	$87.43
Total	$270.93

A list (too long for insertion here) of contributors was then read, and the cordial thanks of the Society given to these liberal friends.

The aid given by the Woman's League enabled the Society to extend the benefits of the restaurant of the Home to the local public, so that it has been an efficient aid to the reform work in our city. From Dec. 4, 1875, to June 2, 1876, over six thousand customers have been served at the restaurant, which is conducted on the Holly Tree Inn principle. The present superintendent, Mr. McIver, is thoroughly skilled in the business. The Home has a free Reading Room, and can accommodate twenty lodgers. All interested in this growing and useful work are invited to call at the Home and see for themselves.

Jottings.

A bald-headed eagle, measuring six feet from tip to tip of its wings, was shot at Dover Point on Saturday by a party of gunners, and afterward sent to Boston to be mounted.

The two reform clubs at Newburyport have accepted an invitation from the reform club here, and will visit this city on Thursday evening, the 22d inst., at which time a rousing temperance meeting is to be holden in the Temple.

The devotion to principle of the democratic papers, all of which want Hon. John H. Burleigh of Maine to be sent to Congress again by the republicans, as a reward for his inestimable services in the past, is touching in the extreme. They all advocate his claims as a true reformer, and scorn the insinuation that he is not and has not been true to his party. They may get him nominated again; but as not a single republican paper in his district supports him his democratic backers have got a hard job.

Charles E. Locke of Kittery, a boy on board the schooner Loella, of this port, Capt. T. R. Amy, fell from the main topmast to the deck at Bangor, on the afternoon of the 13th, breaking his right leg below the knee, fracturing the thigh and breaking his right arm above the elbow. He is in a very low condition and his recovery is doubtful. He fell a distance of about 80 feet.

Col. J. C. Butler has been chosen chief marshal for the 4th of July.

Morse & Ilsley will sell by auction, at their office on Congress street, on Saturday next, twenty shares of stock in the Portsmouth Trust & Guarantee Company.

The Atlantic and Olympic base ball clubs of this city played a match game at the Plains, the Atlantics winning by a score of 18 to 17. Scorer, Daniel Sughrue; umpire, Frank P. Hill.

Shall the Fourth of July be passed over this Centennial year without a local celebration, because of a lack of patriotism among us? Meeting of the general committee at the Common Council room this evening at 8 o'clock,—the last meeting, unless more interest is manifested than has been the case for the past two weeks.

A Misconception.

For some time past it has been one of the duties of the police officers of the Highlands to go to the various houses in their respective beats, and ascertain the size, etc., of the hose used in sprinkling the yards and streets. Out on Dudley Street, one of the sturdy peelers had watched a long time at the back yard of an aristocratic mansion to try and obtain the necessary information from the servant girl. But she didn't appear, and finally, in a fit of desperation, the officer walked around to the front door and rang. A moment later the lady of the house herself opened the door. This rather staggered the officer, and without a word of preliminary explanation he touched his hat and led off with "Good morning, madam! I called to inquire what kind of hose you use?"

"Sir?" said the astonished lady, growing about a gaiter heel taller.

"Yes'm. Very disagreeable to trouble you, but we have to make these inquiries, mum. Duty, you know."

"Duty, indeed, sir. You miscreant—"

"Beg pardon, madam. Perhaps you don't use any hose. I'm very sorry, but I don't know."

"Not use any hose! Oh, you old villain!"

"Well, perhaps it's rubber hose, madam."

"Rubber hose!" she screamed. "You abominate wretch. What do you mean?"

"I mean what kind of hose—"

"Well of all the impudence!"

"I ask a thousand pardons, madam. I see you don't know—"

"I don't know!"

"But here comes the kitchen maid. She can tell me what I want to know!"

"Susan, if you say one word to this miserable brute I'll discharge you. She can tell you, indeed, can she? I should like to see her."

And so the officer had to retreat finally without accomplishing his purpose. The lady told her husband, the husband flew in a rage to the sergeant, the sergeant explained the matter, and they both agreed that it was a great outrage that ought to be kept very quiet.—Boston Sunday Times.

Lady Reformers.

The "Reform Club" is the title of a new society in the West End, organized by young ladies for the purpose of discouraging the use of "slang phrases" in conversation. At a recent meeting, while a member was addressing the society, she inadvertently made use of the expression, "awful nice," and was called to order by a sister member for transgressing the rules.

"In what way have I transgressed?" asked the speaker, blushing deeply.

"You said it would be 'awful' nice to admit young gentlemen to our deliberations," replied the other.

"Well, wouldn't it be?" returned the first; "you know you said yourself no longer ago than yesterday that—"

"Yes, I know; but you said 'awful nice.'" That's slang."

"Well," said the speaker tartly, "if you're going to be so awful nice about it, perhaps it is; but I wouldn't say anything if I were you. Didn't you tell Sallie Spriggins this morning to pull down her basque?"

"No, I didn't," retorted the other, her face growing crimson, "and Sallie Spriggins will say I didn't. She won't go back on me."

"This is a nice racket you are giving us," cried the President, after rapping both speakers to order. "Let us ask, what is the object of this society."

"To discourage slang," cried a dozen voices.

"R-rect, say the President, "go on with the funeral."

A member rose to explain that she had been fined at the last meeting for saying "awful nice" herself, but she hadn't the "stamps" to pay it now—would settle, however, "in the sweet by and by."

"That'll be all right," said the President; "pay when you have the ducats."

Another member asked if a young lady could say "old splendid" without subjecting herself to a fine.

"You bet she can't," said the President, who was the original founder of the society, and therefore appealed to when any nice question was to be decided.

"Then," said the speaker, "I move that Miranda Pew come down with the dust, for I heard her say that her beau was 'just old splendid.'"

Miranda's face was in a blaze as she cried:

"Well, if my beau were such an old hair-pin as your feller is I wouldn't say it!"

"Shoot the chinniap," cried the President, "will you never tumble?"

But the confusion was too great to be allayed. Miranda's blood was up; some sided with her and others sided against her, and amid the babel that followed could be heard such exclamations as, "Dry up," "nice blackberry, you are," wipe off your chin," "hire a hall," etc., when a motion to adjourn was carried "by a large majority." Cincinnati Saturday Night.

—Dickens, in his description of the Veneering family, stated that their character assimilated with that of their furniture—"they smelt too much of the workshop, and their surface was a trifle sticky." This might apply to much of the modern furniture. It appears thin, "shammy," and new, and, like the Veneerings themselves, is adapted to a new society of the mushroom order. It is pitiable to see those very honest men, who are respected and revered in their business circles, made to play the part of buffoon by their wives and daughters, who, like Mrs. Potiphar, believes that, because they have become rich, they are entitled to move in "our best society." The height of their ambition appears to be a span-new house in a fashionable quarter of the towy, to make all the display which money can afford, and see that they are not outdone in the elegance of their entertainments nor the richness of their appointments. They dash into an element for which they are entirely unfitted, and show themselves to the worst possible advantage. After procuring the most showy house they can find—one of those built by the yard by some enterprising speculator, who, like the parties we have just described, fancies he knows what is exactly the thing—then the furnishing becomes the all-absorbing question; and the poor man who has labored the best years of his life, to obtain for himself only discomfort, and his old age is forced to enter a field in which he has had no experience, is dragged here and there, from upholsters' to china shops, in order to prepare for his first lesson in being fashionable. Harper's Mag. for July.

—Another conscientious man is opposed to opening the Centennial Exhibition on Sunday. He says Sunday is the only day he gets to go fishing.

—"What is heaven's best gift to man?" asked a young lady on Sunday night, smiling sweetly on a pleasant-looking clerk. "A hoss," replied the young man, with great prudence.

Encouraging Symptoms.

The cheering glow diffused throughout the system by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the elasticity of mind and body which they impart, and the disappearance which they cause of those vague, uneasy feelings so difficult to describe, are most encouraging symptoms to the desponding invalid. The sensation of returning health is a most delightful one, and to enjoy it, those afflicted with dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, intermittent or remittent fevers, lack of vitality, sleeplessness, rheumatic, nervous and urinary troubles, should avail themselves without delay of this invaluable tonic and corrective. Besides being specifically adapted to the eradication of these maladies, it is wondrously effective in all diseases involving a diminution of vital power on account of its properties as a general invigorant.

Eminent physicians endorse Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam as the safest and most effectual cough remedy ever used.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.
This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

—A Winsted couple went to Justice Hitchcock of Colebrook, Conn., some time since, to be married, and found him in the field, where he performed the ceremony, but they have since discovered, to their mortification, that the marriage took place just over the line in Massachusetts, where Mr. Hitchcock is not a justice, and therefore was not valid, so they have had to get the job done over again.

Indisputable Evidence.

St. Elmo, Ill., July 8, 1874.

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:—I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative properties of your Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery. I have taken great interest in this medicine since I first used it. I was badly afflicted with dyspepsia, liver deranged and an almost perfect prostration of the nervous system. So rapid and complete did the Discovery effect a perfect cure that it seemed more like magic and a perfect wonder to myself, and since that time we have never been without a bottle of the Discovery and Purgative Pellets in the house. They are a solid, sound family physician in the house and ready at all times to fly to the relief of sickness—without charge. We have never had a doctor in the house since we first began the use of your Pellets and Discovery. I have recommended the use of these medicines in several severe and complicated cases arising from, as I thought, an impure state of the blood, and in no one case have they failed to more than accomplish all they claimed to do. I will only mention one as remarkable, (though I could give you a dozen.) Henry Koster, furniture dealer, of this place, who was one of the most pitiful objects ever seen, his face swollen out of shape, scales and eruptions without end, extending to his body, which was completely covered with blotches and scales. Nothing that he took seemed to effect it a particle. I finally induced him to try a few bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery, with daily use of the Pellets, assuring him that it would surely cure him. He commenced its use some six weeks since, taking two Pellets each night for a week, then one each night, and the Discovery as directed. The result is, to-day his skin is perfectly smooth, and the scaly eruptions gone. He has taken some seven or eight bottles in all, and considers himself cured. This case had baffled the skill of our best physicians. Messrs. Dunsford & Co., druggists, of this place, are selling largely of your medicines and the demand steadily increases, and they give perfect satisfaction in every case.

Respectfully, W. H. CHAMPLIN,

MAGIC
CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.
Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 9th, and wrote you February 22d of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.
Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to your Pills, again for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure their aches and pains caused from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.
JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 16, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been as free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yes, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story, I am. But remember I am not giving them the praise they ought to have.
Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, '75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for near twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I tried I do not know how many physicians, and could get no permanent relief. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all my time for eight or ten winters, and not to been traveling and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the worst and most stubborn that they had had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and thought that was the only chance for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The impression here is that if your pills will cure me, they will cure anybody. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.
Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have tal en considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever used. I shall recommend those Pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of those Pills.
MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.

MAGIC

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lungs trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

— USE —

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or fly them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

SEC. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any state meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind, about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for such refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city.

SEC. 15. The Health Officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein: and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said Health Officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel, or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

MR. DENNIS SHEA, Sir: The Water Cement Pipe you laid for us over three years ago has proved perfectly satisfactory to us in every respect, and although a part of it froze up last winter, we can't see any injury done. The Pipe was laid by you in a thorough manner, and we believe it to be the Best Water Pipe known, and if we lay any more shall surely lay the same, and you are to do the job if alive and well. Yours, D. CUMMINGS & CO.

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

Sponge Fishing.

The Ocala Banner, a Florida paper, gives the following details relating to the sponge business in Florida and elsewhere:

The principal grounds are Rock Island, a scope of land thirty miles long by seven miles broad, lying off Taylor county and sixty miles northwest from Cedar Keys; then from the mouth of the Withlacoochee, past Martin's Reef to near Tampa Bay, a distance of perhaps three hundred miles.

The number of vessels is between seventy-five and a hundred, with an average of from five to fifteen men to each, and an average of three "dinceys" to each vessel. A dincey is the small boat used to gather the sponge, and is usually managed by two men. There are about six hundred men daily engaged in gathering, when the weather is fair. Quiet weather and calm sea are always taken advantage of. These "dinceys," when likely to be called into service, are towed Indian file at the stern of the larger vessel. Each sponger is provided with a "sponge-hook," made of iron with three prongs, a socket fitting on a pole one and a half inches thick and from eighteen to thirty-five feet long; also a "water glass," a bucket with a pane of glass fitted in the bottom. This adds to the power of vision by excluding the light from behind, enabling the sponger to penetrate with his eye at least ten or fifteen feet deeper into the water. The "sculler" propels the boat along very slowly; in the meantime the sponger sits hanging over the side of the dincey with his head at the bucket held by the hand and his eye penetrating the depths below, taking in all that passes within his line of vision. As soon as he sees his prey, he raises his sponge-hook with his right hand, in which he is assisted by the sculler, still keeping his eye at the glass, grapples the sponge, then puts aside the glass and hauls it in.

Frequently his sight is darkened and the view obstructed by the intervention of the monsters of the deep. A huge shark, a sawfish, or perhaps an enormous devil-fish, very often large schools of beautiful fish, "Spanish mackerel," "cavalle," "sailor's choice," "pompene," pass beneath him in such numbers as to seriously interfere with his occupation. Again his sight is regaled with lovely coral formation, deep fissures, grottos, gem-lined within.

When a dincey load is gathered, the sponges are taken to the vessel, where they are placed roots down, eyes up, until they are dead. This part of the sponge fishing is the most disagreeable, and causes the vessel to be almost unbearable, the sponge exuding a bloody, slimy matter of most offensive odor.

The vessel having secured a full cargo puts for port, when the sponges are taken ashore and buried in the sand in a place technically called a "crawl." It is generally constructed of a paling of oak staves driven in the sand, and the lee of some island is selected as the spot. The sponges are left for a week or longer, when the slimy flesh, as it may be called, having rotted off, the sponger goes into the crawl with a "bruiser" (a small paddle) and with a few strokes on the top of the sponge, clears it from the filth and skin, after which it is strung and ready for market.

The sponge on the bar grows something like a bed of cabbages or mushrooms, and presents a beautiful appearance, very dark and seemingly having eyes. The sponge reefs in deep water are called "feather bars," from the feathery or fan-like appearance of the coral, very often seen growing up through the sponge, and in such places the larger sponges are generally found. The different kinds of sponge found on this coast are known as "logger-head," "sheep-wool," "turtle-grass" and "yellow." The sheep-wool and yellow only are marketable. The latter is worth twenty-five cents per pound; sheep-wool averaging one dollar per pound.

There are two sponge seasons proper, during the winter and summer months; should the water continue clear, however, it then lasts all through the year.

The common practice is to gather sponge on shares, the vessel getting one-third and the crew two-thirds, the provision bill being assessed in the same ratio. The sponges gathered in Florida waters are taken from the fishermen at Key West, Cedar Keys and Apalachicola. The amount of money paid out per annum is as follows: At Key West, $120,000; Cedar Keys, $65,000; Apalachicola, $55,000—a total of $240,000.

Sponges are always found in the seas of warm climates, and grow at a depth generally of thirty or sixty feet, though they have been found over a thousand feet below the surface.

The finest and best sponges come from the Levant. The Ottoman fisheries furnish employment to six hundred boats manned by five thousand men, whose chief grounds are on the shores of Candia, Barbary and Syria. The Greeks take many in the waters surrounding their own isles. The fishermen of these two nations gather sponges valued at about half a million dollars annually.

Sponges from the West India islands and Florida are much larger than those found in the Mediterranean, but they are coarser and command a less price. The value of the annual product of the West Indies is in the neighborhood of $100,000. In these fisheries sponge is taken in a manner similar to that practiced on the Florida coast. But in the Eastern waters the sponge is always obtained by diving. The diver takes in his hand a large stone, to which a rope from the boat is attached, and this serves to guide him directly to the spot he wishes to go. He tears the sponges from the rock, places them beneath his arm, and upon giving a signal with the cord, is hauled up by his companions. It is a dangerous business, many lives being annually lost in these fisheries. One person can go down but three or four times a day, and they are often pulled up completely exhausted, and occasionally quite dead.

FRIDAY, JUNE 16, 1876.

National Republican Convention.

Hon. Edward McPherson of Pennsylvania was chosen permanent chairman. A motion to exclude the territorial delegates (understood to be mostly in favor of Mr. Blaine) from voting was defeated. Mr. Geo. W. Curtis received permission to read the address of the Reform Club, and read it; Hon. E. L. Peirce then moved that all other addresses be referred to the committee on resolutions, which was carried. This was a shrewd move on the part of the Bristow men—their side was heard and all others shut off. At 3:45 P. M., the convention adjourned to Thursday forenoon at 11 o'clock.

The Convention was called to order on Thursday at 11 o'clock. Prayer was offered by Rev. George Beecher, and Mrs. Sara J. Spencer was allowed ten minutes to present the claims of women to full citizenship. There was much discussion over the claims of contesting delegations, and the rules of the Convention. No ballot was taken, the Convention at 6 o'clock adjourning to-day, after the several candidates had been formally nominated. The platform declares for a steady and progressive movement towards the resumption of specie payments; demands an amendment to the constitution, forbidding the use of public money for sectarian schools; declares against any more grants of land to corporations; that legislation should be enacted to prevent the further encroachment of the Chinese; that the demands of women for suffrage should receive proper consideration, and that the country will always be grateful to its soldiers and sailors.

New Hampshire Legislature.

In the House on the 14th petitions for the division of various towns were read, and several reports were referred. A bill to authorize the Boston & Maine Railroad to purchase the West Amesbury Branch Railroad was read twice and referred. Mr. Stevens of Nashua offered a resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the expediency of changing the judiciary system of the State and report by bill or otherwise. Adopted.

A select Committee on the Apportionment of the State Tax was appointed. A bill for the appointment of a practical commission to Philadelphia of twenty skilled artisans was read twice and referred; also an act authorizing the Manchester and Keene Railroad to extend its road to Peterboro and Hillsboro; also a bill to prevent the corrupt use of money in elections. A bill to define and establish ward lines in Manchester was read twice and ordered printed.

Bills to amend the charters and define the ward boundaries of Nashua and Portsmouth, were read twice and ordered to be printed.

A bill to annex Gosport to the town of Rye was referred to committee on towns and parishes.

A Democratic Opinion.

The New Haven Union, a democratic soft-money paper, talks about the great "reformer" Tilden as follows:

The Register is satisfied that Mr. Blaine is not as good a man as the welfare of this country requires for President, and makes bold to say that it believes him to be a railroad jobber. So far, so good. Now why is it that the Register is not also opposed to Mr. Tilden's nomination on the same grounds? The latter has been an attorney for the leading railroads for many years, and has amassed a fortune of over five millions in their service. Of course no lawyer conducting a legitimate business could amass such a colossal private fortune in a life time, and therefore it is quite certain that Tilden has been a jobber, and for his ability in cheating honest people out of their property he has been amply rewarded. One of the directors of the Terre Haute and St. Louis railroad makes affidavit that Tilden robbed the stockholders of that road to the tune of a hundred thousand dollars; that the steal is one of the boldest on record and is susceptible of proof, and that the foxy Sammy has a notorious reputation as a legal swindler of widows and orphans who have owned stock in various railways. These charges are more emphatic and direct than anything yet brought forward against Blaine, and notwithstanding that the affidavit of the Terre Haute railroad director has been before the country for several weeks, Tilden has not yet made a reply. How inconsistent it is then for such papers as the Register and Hartford Times to wail about Blaine being a railroad jobber and unfit to be even thought of by the republicans as a Presidential candidate, while both are cordially supporting Sam Tilden's candidacy.

News and Notes.

Hon Austin Corbin of Newport, a man eighty-four years old, was found dead in his room Thursday morning. He was in his usual health twenty minutes before he was found dead. It is supposed to be a case of heart disease.

John D. Caswell, formerly a printer in Concord, died at Oakland, Cal., June 1, at the age of 54 years, 7 months, 26 days. Mr. Caswell was a native of Northwood, and learned the printing trade in the Patriot office. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

William Page, of Exeter, 17 years of age, having a dispute with his father about some work, fired a pistol at him, the ball grazing his head.

A Gloucester man remarked, when he heard that the Old South church was to be sold, that "It doesn't do for the Almighty to own a corner lot in Boston."

A canoe of ash from the Indians of Vancouver's Island has arrived at the Exhibition. It is sixty feet in length and eight in breadth, with not a chink nor joint discernible. It is dug out with stones and gouges.

Statistics show that the production of silver in the whole world in 1800 was $35,000,000; in 1850, $42,500,000; in 1854, $47,500,000; in 1865, $62,500,000; and in 1873, $85,250,000.

George R. Smith was run over by the eastern-bound train on the Nashua & Rochester Railroad at Sleeper's Mills, at 8 o'clock on the evening of the 12th. He was intoxicated, and lay down near a culvert he was unable to cross. He lived but a few minutes. He was a shoemaker and unmarried.

Nick Baker, of Columbia Farm Station, Penn., attempted to ravish Mrs. Dougherty, unsuccessfully, and then shot her dead. He subsequently killed Thomas McCool, who, hearing the shot, went to ascertain the cause. The murderer was arrested. Lynch law is talked of.

The largest and handsomest church in Washington belongs to the Catholic negroes.

There seems to have been an outbreak of crime in Nova Scotia, and especially of one crime of the worst character. Within a week three prisoners have been convicted in the Supreme Court of rape, and sentenced to terms of imprisonment—one at Windsor, sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary; one at Kentville, who received a similar sentence; and one at Sydney, sentenced to ten years.—St. John (N. B.) Globe.

The meeting in the Old South, Boston, on the 14th, to take steps to raise a fund to purchase the building and site, was largely attended and enthusiastic. More than one-quarter of the needed amount was subscribed.

Biddeford has elected delegates to the first district convention in Maine, favoring the renomination of Hon. John H. Burleigh.

Governor and Council have nominated Thomas Pearson for police justice of Nashua.

A cow belonging to Luther M. Burns, of Milford, ate a $100 bill, some smaller notes, and a part of the pocket-book, a few days ago.

The Fessenden Mill, at Windham, owned by G. S. Neale, has been leased by a party from Philadelphia for the manufacture of woolen flannels.

Eugene J. Taylor, employed by the Gas Company, while examining a meter in the Worcester and Nashua Railroad freight house at Nashua on Thursday, fell from a barrel on which he was standing, breaking his neck. It is supposed he had a fit.

A court martial for the trial of Pay Inspector Carpenter, U. S. N., met in Washington on the 14th.

Rev. Ezra D. Winslow, the Boston forger, was released from custody by the British authorities on Thursday. That settles the extradition question between this country and England.

Alfred Johnson, the Danish fisherman who proposes for some incomprehensible reason to cross the Atlantic in a dory, if he can, started from Gloucester Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Blaine has thoroughly recovered, his doctors announcing that the only effect of his illness now remaining is weakness, and that his strength is rapidly returning.

A Modest Request.

On Friday afternoon our reporter took from the postoffice a letter addressed to himself and dated at Clearwater. This letter was signed by S. S. Sargent, (a stranger to our reporter,) who cheerfully wrote us to this effect, substantially:

"Dear Sir:—I send you by express today a fish I caught this morning, weighing twenty-eight and a half pounds. Please place it on exhibition, and after exhibiting it, sell it, and after paying expenses, send the balance to me."

Our reporter didn't own a fish-horn, and after a moment's deliberation concluded not to open a fish-market. He threw the letter back into the post office, presuming that some other individual in town was blessed with the same maiden name, and that the letter had been delivered to the wrong party. Imagine his surprise upon going home to a late supper at discovering that the "big fish" had been delivered at his residence by the expressman, and by the directions of his better-half, who presumed it was understood, of course, had been cleaned, sliced up and partially distributed about the neighborhood, while other neighbors had been telegraphed to send over and get some fish in the morning A stack of fresh fish all ready for the griddle was in the ice chest, and the head of the monster, as large as an ordinary platter, was alone preserved for his inspection. That was a pretty kettle of fish, wasn't it? A family consultation was had, and it was decided that in ignorance of the breed of that fish, he wouldn't prove palatable for breakfast, so the collection of fish was thrown away and the neighbors telegraphed to do likewise, and for further information inquire within.

It was subsequently ascertained from a fishmonger, who made a phrenological examination of the head, that the "big fish" was of the genus muscalonge, and might have been eaten with impunity and fried potatoes. The pile of fish has disappeared. Mr. Sargent's desired "exhibition" couldn't come off, and there was no "balance" to send him—so, there it is. Now, this should prove a warning to all others who may catch big fish; and they may as well understand that all attempts to induce our reporter to run a fish-market for their benefit, and without a commission on the net sales, even, will prove futile. As in the above instance, they must send in their muscalonge at their own risks.— St. Paul Press.

—This is the way a Jackson, Miss., paper "goes for" a firm that discontinued its patronage:—"We take out the advertisement of —— to-day, which was in our last issue. They say the times are too hard. Well, they have not much stock, any way, and besides, the other dry goods merchants are selling calico at five and six cents less than them, and they don't care to advertise—and one or two more keep everything in their line at reduced rates."

—An old woman sat on a bench at the depot in Conway, wiping her eyes with her handkerchief, when a portly man, full of sympathy, walking up to her kindly asked: "My good woman, why these tears—why do you weep?" She took down the handkerchief, looked up in surprise, and bluntly answered: "I've got the worst cold in my head I've had for forty-six year."

— A poor shoemaker at Niort, in France, is the father of forty-five children, all of whom are still living. Each of his three successive wives presented him with fifteen children. No wonder he's poor.

—When a woman throws a brick-bat the great problem seems to be, not how to hit the mark, but how to avoid knocking her brains out with her elbow.

NOTICE

Having my ware-room (which is the largest of the city of Boston) full of the best of

MARBLE WORK,

I would respectfully invite the people of Portsmouth and vicinity, who have lost relatives or friends, or have occasion for the use of any kind of stone work, to call before purchasing elsewhere. My stock consists of Monuments, Headstones, Marble Posts, Marble Shelves, Pier Tops, &c., the stock for which was bought and men employed to work the same, at the commencement of the present hard times. I do not sufficient room in which to place more work, and do not wish to disarrange any of my hands. For above reasons, I feel confident that no one can undersell me with the same quality of stock and work. I take occasion to call the attention of all who are repairing or building houses, to my large stock of Mantel Shelves and Pier Tops!

I also have Three LOTS, enclosed with Granite Curbs and Posts, in Harmony Grove and Sagamore Cemeteries, which I will sell at a discount.

John S. Treat,

Corner of Deer and Vaughan Streets.

N. B. It is not so troublesome to show our goods as it is to show dry goods; we will therefore be pleased to see any one who may come, whether they sell to him or not.

Jottings.

One of the most beautiful drives from this city is that out over the North Road to Dover Point, and the sail up the river is equally charming. Mr. Parker Spinney, who has recently purchased the favorite hotel at that place, and thoroughly refitted and improved it, now offers unusual inducements to permanent or transient guests at the "Cocheco House." Those wishing to avoid the expense of a regular hotel dinner will find liberal provision for picnicers at moderate rates.

At a very large gathering of attendants at the Methodist church Wednesday evening in the parsonage, an organization was formed among the young people, to be known as "The Young People's Social Union of the M. E. Church," which starts with a membership of about fifty.

Nashua has appropriated $1000 toward a Fourth of July celebration, the citizens subscribing $500 additional. Dover also is to have a creditable celebration. Portsmouth seems to have concluded to let the Centennial Independence Day pass unnoticed.

The Rockingham Conference of Congregational and Presbyterian churches met in the Congregational Church in Atkinson on Tuesday, the 13th, continuing its session through Wednesday. The exercises opened in the morning at 10 o'clock. A short prayer and conference meeting was held which was followed by a sermon by Rev. Geo. E. Street of Exeter, the text being taken from the words: "If we have faith as a grain of mustard seed," etc. An organization was effected by a choice of officers as follows: Moderator, Rev. George E. Street, of Exeter; Secretary, Rev. E. Robie, of Greenland; Sec. pro tem, Rev. Mr. Peabody, of Stratham.

The most merciless satirist in New Hampshire is the Concord correspondent of the Boston Post. Concerning the democratic candidate for the U. S. Senatorship he says: "The position of the party in the Old Granite State, and the struggle they last March waged against bribery, corruption and fraud, is sufficient to indicate beyond question that their candidate shall represent the principles of good government and reform. For the standard-bearer on the 20th there are mentioned Hon. John G. Sinclair, Hon. Albert R. Hatch, Hon. Harry Bingham and Hon. Edmund Burke." The idea of there being any "principles of reform" in the democratic party of New Hampshire is ludicrous enough, particularly when "the struggle they last March waged" with "bribery, corruption and fraud" as their main reliance, is remembered; but to speak of Bully Bingham or Albert R. Hatch representing such principles, even if they did there exist, is ridiculous—or "cheeky"—to the point of sublimity.

At the fifty-third annual meeting of the New Hampshire Historical Society, in Concord, Wednesday, an interesting paper on the late John Elwyn was read by Rev. James DeNormandie. George E. Hodgdon, Esq., and Rev. Alfred Elwyn have been elected members of the Society.

The insurance companies propose to rebuild the Bowdoin House at York beach, lately destroyed by fire.

The engines of the U. S. S. Enterprise at the navy yard will be started up to-day for a ten days' trial, before the official board of inspectors.

A vote of thanks has been passed by the Legislature to Mrs. S. S. Cushman of this city, for the portrait of Hon. Samuel Cushman, lately presented to the State House gallery of notables.

The Heavy Artillery had a street drill, Thursday evening.

Fourth of July.

The meeting of the general committee on Fourth of July celebration, Thursday evening, was well attended and enthusiastic. A determination to have a celebration, and a good one—one that the city need not be ashamed of "in this Centennial year,"—was more plainly apparent than at any previous meeting. The finance committee reported a good start already made in raising money, and will call on other citizens to-day and to-morrow.

The citizens generally are invited to attend the meeting of the general committee at the Common Council room on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, to hear the report of the finance committee, and the discussion of other business.

We really believe the sleepy old town has got waked up on this subject at last, and that we sha'n't be put to an open shame by Newington, Kittery and Eliot, after all, in the matter of a decent celebration of the Nation's birthday.

Correspondence.

Messrs. Editors: There is an Italian proverb that "He who is silent confesses;" Therefore allow me to say to those friends who are laboring under a wrong impression that I am not "Chromatic." Singing rarely offends me—street singing, never. Since my residence on Islington street I have enjoyed several very sweet serenades, and am always happy to be waked by "music in the air." Even when the hour is late, and the singers go up and down the street they never disturb me; if they did I should hardly think my opinion sufficiently important to justify a complaint. I am glad to hear the songs. Oft-times I wish I could prevent the swearing—but never the singing. We do not listen critically to midnight music; so when the little one by our side whispers, "O, papa, how sweet that sounds!" we are quite inclined to agree with him, and sorry when the voices become faint in the distance; therefore as far as I am concerned "sing on, sing happily on."

EPPING, June 14.

The second semi-annual election of officers of the Epping Reform Club took place Monday evening, June 5th, as follows: Dr. L. J. Gibbs, President; A. T. Rundlett, W. H. Pike, C. A. Adams, Vice Presidents; Miss C. A. Jenness, Secretary; Mrs. M. E. Johnson, Treasurer; Levi Thompson, Chaplain.

The Club was organized in April, and its prospects of success are very encouraging, there being a membership of 160. The weekly meetings are very interesting, having had the aid of some of the ablest speakers in the State. The "home talent" of the Club is by no means of small quantity or poor quality. A lecture from Rev. G. G. Hamilton of Maine, an eloquent and talented young Universalist clergyman, is to be given Monday evening June 19th.

We wish this much needed movement further and unbounded success.

CARROL.

Political.

Tilden considers his Presidential prospects greatly improved by the conviction of George Lord of Rochester, for bribery in connection with the canal frauds. This is the one solitary conviction which has resulted from all the fuss and noise of the past two years, and in this there is a stay of execution.—New Haven Union, (dem.)

When the same club officers come round to Peter Cooper week after week, for money to buy torch lamps with, the old man begins to suspect that the greenback nomination is an empty honor. When a villainous looking, short-haired gentleman from a dirty ward asks the old man if he will set up something for the boys, Peter no longer wonders that Horace Greeley died young.—N. O. Rep.

The charge has been formally made by Col. Fitzhugh, late doorkeeper, that 100,000 volumes of valuable documents, including a large number of expensive reports of medical statistics, have disappeared from the House document room under the democratic superintendent. The committee on accounts has commenced the investigation of this charge.

Mr. J. B. Stuart says the story told by the witness Green, who swore so earnestly against Mr. Blaine, was a tissue of flat-footed lies from one end to the other,—as Green never was counsel for him (Stewart) in any case, nor did he ever make any such statements as Green swore he did. Mr. Stewart concludes as follows: "I can only imagine from my own knowledge of the man and the fertility of his inventive genius that he cooked up his story for the purpose of obtaining a ride to the Centennial Exposition at the Government expense. Certain it is that all his statements involving Hon. James G. Blaine in the business transactions of the Kansas Pacific Railway Company are entirely gratuitous and false."

The Albany (N. Y.) Journal has the following to say concerning recent developments, on the money question, in the House: "The other day a very significant vote was taken in the House touching the subject. And it is noticeable that every republican member voted against a measure calculated to open the way to expansion of the currency, by providing for the repeal of the resumption act. There were in the whole House only sixteen democrats who had the honesty and courage to rebuke this disastrous democratic heresy. All the others, whether from districts which are virtually solid for sound money, or from districts where the inflation craze predominates, voted with the rag-money mad-caps. Now this little test vote proves two important things; it proves that the republican party is solid and firm for hard money; in the second place it shows that the vast majority of the democrats are for rag-money; that the rag-money doctrine dominates the party and forces to its support democrats who in reality are opposed to it."

In the Indiana treason cases of 1864, a witness testified that he had initiated Michael C. Kerr into the order of the Sons of Liberty, an organization designed to aid the rebellion by resisting drafts of soldiers in loyal States. Michael endeared himself to the democrats by his action, but some of them wondered when he took the ironclad oath as Speaker of the House of the present Congress.—N. O. Rep.

The Maine democracy nominated John C. Talbot of East Machias for governor, and adopted a resolution favoring the nomination of Samuel J. Tilden for President.

The conversation of one of our staff with a leading colored delegate, is worth repeating: "Do you think that your race will poll a full vote this fall?" "We are very anxious to do so, and if there is anything like a fair opportunity our vote will be the largest ever given. If the shot-gun policy is inaugurated, and our ballots only to be cast at the peril of our lives, we can do nothing but stay away from the polls. It will depend very much upon the character of the man nominated. If it is a man whose very name carries with it the assurance of our future protection in our political rights, the republican party can rely upon carrying Mississippi, Alabama, Florida and both of the Carolinas. If it is a man whose course on this question is doubtful, all is lost in the South."—Cincinnati Times.

—At the Japan department a young lady examining a quaintly wrought vase, asked the Japanese youth in attendance: "what is that vase made for?" The polite little fellow replied: "Madame, that was made expressly to secure the admiration of the American ladies."

Encouraging Symptons.

The cheering glow diffused throughout the system by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the elasticity of mind and body which they impart, and the disappearance which they cause of those vague, uneasy feelings so difficult to describe, are most encouraging symptoms to the desponding invalid. The cessation of returning health is a most delightful one, and to enjoy it, those afflicted with dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, intermittent or remittent fevers, lack of vitality, sleeplessness, rheumatic, nervous and urinary troubles, should avail themselves without delay of this invaluable tonic and corrective. Besides being specifically adapted to the eradication of these maladies, it is wondrously effective in all diseases involving a diminution of vital power on account of its properties as a general invigorant.

Eminent physicians endorse Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam as the safest and most effectual cough remedy ever used.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Daily Chronicle.

—A Louisville reporter, having accumulated a fortune here, resolved to abandon city life with its glittering shams, and he went South, where he got a situation on a country newspaper. The village being rather dull, he had only seven or eight items when the week was about to close, and one or two of these were puffs of turnips which had been left at the office. They were, however, well written, he thought, and he handed them to the editor. As each of the turnip paragraphs came under the editorial eye, a smile of approval lit up the editorial countenance, and continued to light it until the last item was reached. Here the editorial visage underwent an awful change. The item was about an accident that had happened to a well-known citizen. Reading it over several times, as if to gain time to check the indignation which seemed to be boiling within him, he turned upon the reporter: "Young man," he thundered, "your services are no longer required! I can't have any man about me that doesn't say at the beginning of his paragraphs, 'We are pained to learn.'"—Courier-Journal.

—Reporters should always be even tempered men, but when one rushes wildly ten squares to get a vivid account of a man breaking his leg, he may be excused if he can't find any words in the dictionary to suit the occasion when he finds it is a wooden leg.

—If there is any thing that bring tears to the eyes of an Indian tobacco sign, it is to witness a young lady undergoing the trying ordeal of endeavoring to bring a fallen clothes line, full of clothes, to a realization of its solemn duty.

Indisputable Evidence.

St. Elmo. Ill., July 8, 1874.

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:—I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative properties of your Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery. I have taken great interest in this medicine since I first used it. I was badly afflicted with dyspepsia, liver deranged and an almost perfect prostration of the nervous system. So rapid and complete did the Discovery effect a perfect cure that it seemed more like magic and a perfect wonder to myself, and since that time we have never been without a bottle of the Discovery and Purgative Pellets in the house. They are a solid, sound family physician in the house and ready at all times to fly to the relief of sickness—without charge. We have never had a doctor in the house since we first began the use of your Pellets and Discovery. I have recommended the use of these medicines in several severe and complicated cases arising from, as I thought, an impure state of the blood, and in no one case have they failed to more than accomplish all they claimed to do. I will only mention one as remarkable, (though I could give you a dozen.) Henry Koster, furniture dealer, of this place, who was one of the most pitiful objects ever seen, his face swollen out of shape, scales and eruptions without end, extending to his body, which was completely covered with blotches and scales. Nothing that he took seemed to effect it a particle. I finally induced him to try a few bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery, with daily use of the Pellets, assuring him that it would surely cure him. He commenced its use some six weeks since, taking two Pellets each night for a week, then one each night, and the Discovery as directed. The result is, to-day his skin is perfectly smooth, and the scaly eruptions gone. He has taken some seven or eight bottles in all, and considers himself cured. This case had baffled the skill of our best physicians. Messrs. Dunsford & Co., druggists, of this place, are selling largely of your medicines and the demand steadily increases, and they give perfect satisfaction in every case.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, desired of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.
Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 8th, and wrote you February 20th of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.
Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of aches and pains caused from exposure and hardships in the field. Please send me by return mail another package.
JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been a free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yea, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.
Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, '75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I tried I do not know how many physicians, and could only get partly relieved. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or ten winters, and have been travelling and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the most stubborn they ever met, or had had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and thought that was the only chance for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The impression here seems to be that I will cure me. I will cure you sure say-body. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages at once, and oblige Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.
Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those I go to to buy them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of these Pills. MRS. F. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

LINCOLN BUTTER POWDER.
Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.

The Servians.

Who are the Servians, the people who now occupy such a prominent place in European affairs, and whose action, whether for peace or for war, is of great importance to the whole civilized world? Servia is one of the Turkish Provinces; although partially independent of Turkey, the Porte is its Suzeraine. Servia occupies a central position, and it is surmised that it desires even more than freedom from Turkish rule, that it has an ambition to become the nucleus of a Christian Sclavonic nation in European Turkey. If the Provinces aim at accomplishing this, Servia is perhaps better qualified to take the lead than any other. Servia contains a territory of about 20,000 square miles. Its population is about 1,500,000. The country is mountainous, with a temperate and agreeable climate. About one twenty-fourth of the land is under cultivation, and nine-tenths is densely wooded or wilderness. The people are principally engaged in farming pursuits, but although the resources of the country are said to be very great, they are poorly developed. In the towns it is said the number of males exceeds that of the females by 24 per cent., and in the agricultural districts 6 per cent. The Servians are a warlike race, which is no cause for wonder when we consider that for 1200 years their territory has at frequent periods been the scene of turmoil and bloodshed. In the wars between Hungary and Turkey, Servia was the principal battle ground, when the country was almost completely desolated. In the ninth century the Servians were converted to Christianity, and their religion now is the Greek. From the ninth to the eleventh century they kept up an almost continuous war with the Bulgarians. In the eleventh century they became totally independent of outside rule, and maintained this independence until 1389, when they were conquered by the Turks. From the time of their subjection to Turkish power in 1459 by Sultan Mahmud, they were subject to the direst oppression and treatment most tyrannical. In 1801, encouraged by Russia, the Servians rose in rebellion and succeeded in throwing off the Turkish yoke. Subsequently the Turks reconquered them, when they were treated worse than before. Driven to madness by the tyranny of their conquerors, they again rebelled, and under the lead of Prince Milosch were successful. He was confirmed in his position as Prince of Servia, and his authority acknowledged by the Sultan in 1815. He abdicated in 1839, and was restored to his rank and power in 1858, when the dignity was made hereditary. This Prince died in 1860. He was succeeded by his son Michael, who was assassinated, and he in turn was succeeded by his son, Milan, the present Prince, who leads the present outbreak against Turkey. Single handed, the Servians, it is believed, would make matters troublesome for even the Turkish Empire, although in case of war, there is little doubt that they would have the assistance of the other Christian Provinces. They are a brave people, and almost every man is a trained soldier. Their standing army is 5,000, but these only serve four years, when they are discharged and replaced by others. The discharged soldiers are embodied in the national militia, which is kept up to a strength of 150,000. Then there is a reserve of 80,000 for garrison duty. The militia system is so perfect that 80,000 men can be put in the field fully equipped and armed, drilled, and fit for action, in forty-eight hours. The Servian Government have a powder factory, and it is believed that in their arsenals they have not less than 400,000 stand of arms, with a well equipped establishment of ambulances, hospital service, etc. Such is the country that has almost driven the whole of Europe into war; and it will be seen that it is by no means a power to be despised.

—An Englishman stopping at a country inn in one of the Eastern States, was continually boasting of the superiority of everything in England, and depreciating the productions of America. The landlord, as may be surmised, did not relish this, and therefore thought of a plan to "get square" with the English blower. Procuring a bushel of fine, healthy crabs, he poured them in the Englishman's bed, then telling his guest that the room was ready, he then lighted a candle and escorted him up stairs. Upon reaching the door, the Yankee managed to put out the light. Of course it didn't make much difference to the Englisher, so he undressed himself and jumped into bed. Immediately he gave a terrific yell: "Landlord! landlord! come here! What are these in my bed?" The landlord, who was outside the door, came in, looked in the bed and coolly said: "Them's bedbugs; can you beat them in England?" The Englishman left.

—A Mexican went into business as a snake charmer in Corpus Christi, Texas, and invited a party to see his performance. He made several passes with his hands over a snake, and then gobbled it, but was bitten on one of his fingers. The enraged reptile hung on until shaken off. The finger began to swell at once, but a physician cut it off without delay, and saved the life of the charmer, who has changed his avocation to monte dealing.

—Two Chicago girls, who took a solemn vow last week never to be separated, have played their first game of croquet for the season, and to-day are not on speaking terms.

And RUTHERFORD B. HAYES of Ohio was nominated by the republican National Convention, to be triumphantly elected President of the United States in November next.

Hon. WILLIAM A. WHEELER of New York was nominated for Vice President on the first ballot.

The ticket as made up is perhaps as strong a one as could be made; it will unite the party as one man, and assures a victory at the polls. Could we have selected the nominees we should have made the ticket Blaine and Hayes; others had other preferences; but the supporters of all can and will rally to the support of Hayes and Wheeler. Gov. Hayes' nomination will arouse no antagonisms, for his prominent supporters, while earnestly advocating the claims of their favorite, abstained thoroughout the canvass from petty attacks upon other candidates. His war record is perfect, extending throughout the rebellion; and he has at different times defeated three prominent democratic aspirants for the Presidency,—Thurman, Pendleton and Allen. He will carry Ohio and the whole West with a rush, and Hon. William A. Wheeler will do the same with New York and the East; we shall probably have to let the democrats have a few of the Southern States, but they will not be able to do anything to keep Hayes and Wheeler out of the White House after March 4th, 1877.

The vote of the New Hampshire delegation on the first three ballots was seven for Blaine, three for Bristow.

Extradition.

The British government having decided that a mere act of Parliament is all that is needed to alter a treaty with another power, our government should promptly notify the British authorities that the extradition provisions of the Ashburton treaty will no longer be regarded by this country. There would be no undue haste in this action, as by the terms of the treaty either contracting power is authorized to abregate the extradition provisions at will, on notifying the other party. Had the British government done this there would have been no grounds for complaint; but instead they claim the right to modify the treaty and impose new conditions for its fulfillment without consulting the other contracting party,—an assumption no self-respecting nation could submit to. Thieves, swindlers and criminals of all kinds will rejoice over England's position, as they will now find a secure asylum there. It is not likely another extradition treaty will be made with that country, as there would be little use in entering into another solemn compact—to be sacredly observed on our side and overthrown at any moment on the whim of a Parliamentary majority on the other side. Our government cannot, with a proper regard for the dignity of the nation, entertain proposals for another extradition treaty with England.

The London News is reported as saying that Secretary Fish occupies the most tenable ground upon the extradition question involving the release of Winslow; also that the English Liberal party, including Sir William Harcourt, take the view that Lord Derby is wrong, and Secretary Fish right.

The Next Senator.

The republican caucus to nominate a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Senator Cragin, whose term of office expires in 1877, met at Rumford Hall in Concord on Thursday evening. The caucus was called to order at 8 o'clock by Hon. Levi W. Barton of Newport. On motion of Senator Holman, the absurd rule to exclude the press was revoked, and it was voted to admit the officers of the Senate and House of Representatives, representatives of the republican press in the State and the daily press out of the State. On motion of Major George O. Gilmore of Manchester, the caucus proceeded to ballot. Messrs. Noyes of Chester, Pattee of Enfield, and Holman of Nashua, and the President of the Senate, were appointed tellers to assist in counting the vote. As each member's name was called he stepped to the desk and deposited his ballot. The following is the statement of the vote, but one ballot being taken.

Whole number of votes	217
Necessary to a choice	109
Charles P. Sanborn of Concord	1
Aaron H. Cragin of Lebanon	1
Jacob H. Benton of Lancaster	8
Charles S. Whitehouse of Rochester	9
Levi W. Barton of Newport	12
Aaron F. Stevens of Nashua	16
Onslow Stearns of Concord	20
James F. Briggs of Manchester	20
O. C. Moore of Nashua	21
Edward H. Rollins of Concord	109

And amid great enthusiasm HON. EDWARD H. ROLLINS was declared the nominee of the meeting. O. C. Moore, Esq., in a very complimentary speech, said he should support Mr. Rollins and moved that the nomination be made unanimous; Hon. James B. Briggs, of Manchester, seconded the motion, which was carried, one man only voting against it. Mr. Patton of Kingston, Mr. Moore of Nashua and Mr. Briggs of Manchester were appointed a committee to notify Mr. Rollins of his nomination and request his presence before the caucus. In pursuance of this duty, the committee waited on Mr. Rollins at the Eagle Hotel, and informed him of his nomination. He accompanied them to the hall and was presented to the assembly by the President. On taking the platform, Mr. Rollins said that he had come unprepared to make a speech, but thanked them most cordially for the honor conferred, and the confidence reposed in him. He should go to Washington, if elected, to represent the people of New Hampshire, but not any corporation, clique, or ring. He expressed his thanks to the gentlemen who were candidates against him for their courteous conduct of the contest; and on closing was loudly cheered. The fight has been sharply contested, but the result is accepted by the opposition with the best of feelings. On Tuesday next the two branches of the legislature will meet in joint convention, and Mr. Rollins will be elected.

Mr. Rollins has always labored faithfully for the republican party of the State. He has been for many years Chairman of the State Committee, and always one of its best advisers. He has great skill as an organizer, and is a man of rare executive ability. He has served three terms in Congress, has been Speaker of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, and is now Secretary and Treasurer of the Union Pacific Railroad, a position which he proposes to resign before he enters upon the discharge of his Senatorial duties at Washington. We have never fully felt the force of the logic which declaims against considering a man's past services to his party as a reason for his advancement; it has always seemed to us that the man who does the most service in an honorable manner for the advancement of the principles of his party is best entitled to recognition by the party as the exponent of its principles. Taking this view of the case we could do no less than hope for and advocate Mr. Rollins' election to the honorable position to which he aspired, for no man in the State has done more than he to maintain republican ascendency and advance republican principles. That the interests of the republican party,—which are identical with the interests of the Nation,—will be faithfully attended to by Senator Rollins, his past career is a satisfactory guaranty.

New Hampshire Legislature.

In the House, on the 15th, the committee on engrossed bills reported the appointment of Mr. Abel of Concord as engrossing clerk.

Notice of bills was given as follows: to establish a State Board of Health; to annex a portion of the town of Laconia to Guilford; to amend laws relating to probate court in County of Coos.

The following bills were read twice and referred: to repeal act of 1874 relating to taxation of students, and their right to vote; to amend charter of city of Dover; to fix boundary line between towns of Newmarket and South Newmarket; in relation to railroads.

A bill authorizing cities and towns to appropriate money, not exceeding $2000, for the celebration of the Fourth of July, 1876, was read a third time and passed under a suspension of the rules.

Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C. June 14.

Before you receive this letter the Cincinnati convention will have settled who are to be the next President and Vice President of the United States, and I shall not therefore trouble you with conjectures or calculations on that subject. The contest has been a bitter one, but whoever wins will receive the hearty support of all his opponents in the race and of the whole party. The interests at stake are too vital to permit the control of the country to pass into democratic hands, particularly after they have shown their incompetency, dishonesty and hate as plainly as they have done in the House of Representatives, this winter. Both houses of Congress are virtually adjourned, for no business is being done of any importance. The Senate adjourned on Monday until Thursday, which was as long as it could except by joint resolution, and will then meet and adjourn until Saturday. Pretty much the same state of affairs will exist the week of the St. Louis convention, so that nothing will be done until about the first of July. A prominent democratic House leader said last night to your correspondent that he had no expectation of an adjournment of Congress until August, which confirms what has been said in these letters for some weeks past.

The first of July will come with none of the appropriation bills passed, and I am told that Secretary Bristow says "not one dollar shall be paid out of the Treasury except upon an appropriation," in fact the administration has no choice in the matter, so that in the event that the Post Office bill is not a law by the first of July look out for a stoppage of all the mails and the closing of the Post-offices—and charge it, where it belongs, to the ex-Confederate House, which has refused to give money enough to conduct the affairs of government, because there is a republican administration.

The great topic of interest this week has been the sudden and violent illness of Ex-Speaker Blaine. On Sunday he fell at the door of the church he was about to enter, and remained unconscious for several hours, when he returned to a state of semi-consciousness. He was sunstruck, and is now rapidly recovering and out of danger. His splendid physique and temperate habits saved his life, when most men would have died. Expressions of sympathy from every quarter poured in upon his family, and the whole nation held its breath to hear how the Ex-Speaker was progressing. His hold upon the American public is exceeding strong.

The committee and House have exonerated Speaker Kerr from the charge brought by Harney, and if their judgment is correct Harney will probably be convicted of perjury. Every one rejoices that Mr. Kerr has been found innocent, the more so as it is universally understood that he is now passing away to "the land of the leal," falling before the fell destroyer consumption. There is very little expectation that he will ever resume his place as Speaker, though he may linger on for months to come.

Col. J. B. Stewart has published a card denouncing as false the statement of Thomas A. Green, of St. Joseph, Mo., that he (Stewart) ever gave Mr. Blaine any of the bonds of the Kansas Pacific railroad. Thus another slander on Blaine has been squelched.

Considerable interest is felt in the St. Louis convention, and a strong feeling for Hancock is being worked up here. I think I am in safe bounds when I say that fully half the democratic Congressmen favor Hancock; but I remember that in 1872 four-fifths of them were for Judge Davis at Cincinnati, and scarcely made a ripple on the surface of that convention, though numbers of them went to it and worked industriously for Davis. What effect they will have on the St. Louis convention it is hard to tell. The name of Hendricks is so often coupled with that of Hancock that it inclines one to the belief that a union betweed the friends of these parties has been effected. If this is so Mr. Tilden may step down and out.

MAXWELL.

Political.

"A lie will travel a league while truth is pulling its boots on." Procter Knott in suppressing for five days the Caldwell dispatch has proven that a democratic lie can travel around the globe before truth can make its escape from his clutches. It is quite evident that the old sinner democracy has still enough of the worldly about it to beat the heathen Chinee in ways that are dark and tricks that are vain. If there are any good souls who have been laboring under the delusion that democracy has been converted from the error of its ways, its action in the House of Representatives ought to open their eyes to the truth.

The first Chinaman to vote in Cincinnati cast a democratic ticket.

The recent dismissal of Fitzhugh has called attention to a singular historical coincidence in the history of the American Congress. Only two elective officers have ever been dismissed from the House. The first was in the Congress just before the war, when Robert Hackey, of Virginia, democratic doorkeeper, was dismissed on the charge of swindling the pages. The second was in the first Congress after the war in which the democrats had a majority, when Fitzhugh, democratic doorkeeper, also a native of Virginia, was dismissed for stupidity. In both cases the discharged persons were succeeded by Jerseymen.

Later returns from the Oregon election show that the republicans and independents tie the democrats in the legislature, thus rendering the election of United States Senator by the democrats doubtful.

—A hen belonging to a man in Westport began to sit upon a nest full of eggs a few weeks ago, but soon abandoned them, for the purpose of going to the Centennial, it is supposed. The household cat then began to sit on the eggs, and remained upon them three weeks, hatching out a handsome brood of six chickens. She now goes around with them, and clumsily scratches dirt to aid them in getting a living.—New Haven Palladium.

A daughter of Rev. Mr. Stetson of Cape Neddick, has on account ill health, returned from Burmah, India, where she has been laboring as a teacher under the Foreign Missionary Union. She expects to return to her consecrated duties when her health is restored.

Class Day exercises at Miss Morgan's young ladies' seminary take place on the afternoon of the 20th, at two o'clock, the class reception being at 7:30 o'clock the same evening.

In the House of Representatives, Portsmouth members are appointed upon committees as follows: Mr. Waldron on National affairs, Mr. Hatch upon the judiciary and also chairman of committee on library, Mr. Dixon on military accounts, Mr. Langdon on unfinished business. Col. Sise is upon military affairs, W. A. Hodgdon on Reform School, Geo. E. Hodgdon on education, Hildreth on finance and Call upon insurance.

By the courtesy of the commanding officers of the navy yard, our citizens were favored with an open-air concert on Haymarket square by the Marine Band, on the afternoon of the 13th inst., between five and six o'clock. We understand that a series of these pleasing concerts is contemplated by the officers, to be given on Monday and Thursday afternoons at the same place, as soon as a suitable band-stand is erected.

The Brooklyn (N. Y.) Eagle says Murray's circus is larger and better in every respect than ever before, and adds: The riding is superb, the acrobats astonishing, the gymnasts wonderful, the clowns extremely funny, the trained horses highly educated, and the dramatic representations far in advance of anything ever before seen in a circus ring.

Morse & Ilsley sell by auction at noon to-day, at their office on Congress street, twenty shares Portsmouth Trust and Guarantee Company stock.

One of the largest and most reputable steam bakeries in this region is that of John Pearson, Jr., of Newburyport. And the principal cause of this reputation is the constant application of his energies to the business of his life and his ambition to produce not only good bread, but something ahead of anything else that is manufactured. In conversation with him a short time ago, we were informed that just now he is making experiments, which will soon produce their results in the preparation of wheat for the making of genuine Graham flour, a desideratum much desired by those who have been endeavoring to find a wholesome coarseness in bread that is now made and furnished from what is facetiously termed Graham flour. Mr. Pearson is a native of Portsmouth, and probably early learned the pleasure that a seashore boy takes in a good, sweet, biscuit of "ship bread." But the ship bread of his days and the Pilot Bread which now issues from his ovens were as different as two sorts of the same bread could possibly be. The flaky, crispy biscuit that almost melts like honey in the mouth, is a luxury that has been reserved for the centennial year. If man could live by bread alone this would be the sort; but as it is, we shall have to content ourselves with but two of our three meals a day upon Pearson's Pilot Bread. The advertisement in another column shows where it can be found.—Journal.

The following item of news we find in Friday's papers: "Gold is reported to have been found at the Old Orchard slate quarry, four miles from Saco. State Assayer Bartlett says it will yield $2.25 to the ton." Must be a pretty good quality of gold to yield like that.

"The reading room is supplied with books, papers, and a large bible, the gift of the Baptist church through their pastor, Rev. Dr. Alden. A lady from the Yard sends it a daily Boston paper.

Our first customer, a Swedish sailor on his way to New York, left $2.50 in token of his approval.

Books, household articles, etc., have been received from many friendly hands, people from the naval station also showing a generous interest, for all which we tender hearty thanks.

Nor are we less indebted to our outside friends. A letter from the Ladies' Seaman's Friend Society of Concord, always a faithful ally, was one of the inspiring influences which led to the present undertaking. And having entered upon it, a library was promptly sent to the reading room, followed by a package of bedding and clothing at Christmas. A fine quilt, made by a dear old lady of 93, and an Easter offering of the same character, were most welcome gifts.

Early in December a crew of shipwrecked and frost-bitten men, who had lost their all, were brought to this port, where, finding no suitable shelter elsewhere, they were gladly received and cared for at the Home.

We invite continued co-operation and sympathy for this enterprise, hoping to keep good the words of the man who said, 'It is a clean, Christian spot and many a one will bless God for it.'"

News and Notes.

A dwelling house was burned at Thetford, Vt., Wednesday night, under peculiar circumstances. David Bradley had conditionally deeded it to his wife, who two weeks ago had it insured for $500 for her own benefit and was away securing a divorce. The man moved out Tuesday, and late at night the house was set on fire and consumed.

Mr. F. S. Slack of Thetford, Vt., went out to his pasture to look after his flock of seventy-seven fine blooded sheep, and found eighteen of them huddled together, dead, the head of one driven in the ground. They were killed by lightning during a heavy storm on a previous evening, at which time a discharge of electricity had been noticed to strike in the pasture.

Mr. Carrigan, chairman of the committee to arrange for a Dartmouth college encampment at the Centennial, has reported that accommodation for one hundred students has been provided at Camp Scott. It is expected that about one-half of the college will visit Philadelphia, and that special rates for transportation of the company will be made by the Central Vermont Railroad.

The anniversary exercises of Tilden Seminary for young ladies, at West Lebanon, ended Thursday. The report of the Examination Committee is very flattering to the institution. There was a grand concert on Tuesday evening and rhetorical exercises on Wednesday evening. Seven States were represented by the graduating class.

Section B, First New Hampshire Battery, thirty-eight men, Capt. S. S. Piper, will start for Philadelphia July 1st, to be gone a week.

Lynchers at Liberty, in Montgomery county, Kansas, two weeks ago, hanged a young man to a tree until he confessed the stealing of a twenty dollar bill, and then gave him one hundred lashes. The next day the man from whom the bill had been stolen found it at the bottom of his trunk, where he himself had placed it.

A couple of vultures have made Vulture mountain at Gaysville (Stockbridge), Vt., their home for years, and recently a party of men went up there and by the aid of ropes made their way down the precipice 150 feet, where they bagged four young vultures. Meanwhile the old ones soared above them, just out of reach of rifle balls.

Concord will celebrate the Fourth of July on an extensive scale. Oration by Ex-Gov. Harriman.

Referring to the belief that forged notes are frequently passed through banks in Halifax and St. John, and negotiated on the streets, we have been informed that there is little doubt of it; and more, that they are sometimes accepted by money lenders with a full knowledge of their fraudulent character. This may appear as strange as it is culpable, but a shrewd reason is given. The drawer of a forged piece of paper knows that the penitentiary is his doom if the note be not lifted on maturity. He will therefore strain every nerve and leave nothing undone, even to the making of another forged note, to hide his crime. In the case of a legitimate promise to pay, the case is different. The worst that can happen in case of inability to retire on maturity, is a notice of insolvency, in which there is nothing criminal in the eye of the law, else we presume there would not be so many insolvents. The bankrupt merely failed to pay his debts, and no stain attaches to him. In the former case, discovery would lead to the forger being imprisoned and branded with the stamp of disgrace. So that it is plain, if the forger be dealt with cautiously, he is a surer mark than the drawer of an ordinary note. Hence the willingness of lenders to negotiate such paper. They are generally very sure of their pay. If, however, this statement is true, and the facts could be established, the dealers should be punished as accessories.—St. John's Globe.

In the County Court at Chicago, Thursday noon, on petition of Mr. Edwards, brother of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, a jury was empanelled, and having heard statements from Mr. Edwards to the effect that Mrs. Lincoln is now in a condition to manage her estate, Mr. Swett, who appeared in behalf of Robert Lincoln, said that his client would be only too glad to have the decree of the Court reversed, if the testimony given satisfied the jury. Thereupon the jury gave a verdict that said Mary Lincoln is restored to reason and is capable to manage and control her estate.

The Maine Democrat, a weekly paper published at Biddeford by Marcus Watson & Son, was sold on the 12th to W. S. Noyes of Saco. It will probably be issued from Saco.

A recently dismissed Turkish official on Thursday evening killed the Turkish Ministers of War and Foreign Affairs, an aid-de-camp and a servant of the Grand Vizier, and seriously wounded the Minister of Marine. He was arrested. Revenge for being dismissed was his motive. No wonder the Turks have a habit of putting discharged officials to death, if that's the way they act.

Strawberry Festival.

The young people of the North Church will hold a Festival at their chapel on Middle street, Tuesday evening, June 20th, where Strawberries and Cream, Ice Cream, etc., will be served at moderate prices. The citizens of Portsmouth, and any strangers within our gates, are most cordially invited; our room is cool, and we will try and please you. Ten cents admission will be charged at the door.

Per Order of the Committee.

Encouraging Symptoms.

The cheering glow diffused throughout the system by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the elasticity of mind and body which they impart, the clear appearance which they cause of those vague, uneasy feelings so difficult to describe, are most encouraging symptoms to the desponding invalid. The sensation of returning health is a most delightful one, and to enjoy it, those afflicted with dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, intermittent or remittent fevers, lack of vitality, sleeplessness, rheumatic, nervous and urinary troubles, should avail themselves without delay of this invaluable tonic and corrective. Besides being specifically adapted to the eradication of these maladies, it is wondrously effective in all diseases involving a diminution of vital power on account of its properties as a general invigorant.

Eminent physicians endorse Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam as the safest and most effectual cough remedy ever used.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Daily Chronicle.

— A man, his wife, and their four children tried to drown themselves together in St. Louis, but were rescued by a boatman. They were destitute, and the parents, after a deliberate discussion of the subject, had decided upon suicide. The oldest of the children, a girl of thirteen, had acquiesced in that determination, but the younger ones did not seem to comprehend the importance of the event.

—A writer in the London News says: "It is not, unfortunately, generally known that in case of fire in buildings containing horses, if the harness be merely put on (however roughly) the horses will quit their stables without difficulty. A knowledge of this fact may be the means of saving many a valuable animal from a horrible death."

— A negro was sentenced in Floyd, Ga., to be hanged next September, and he asked the Judge to appoint an earlier day. His Honor remarked that propriety prevented a change. "Never mind the propriety, Judge," said the prisoner. "I'm the man that's going to be hanged, and I ought to have something to say about it."

— John Cody, of Sevier, Tenn., shot the lover of his wife, but the wound was not sufficient to kill, and so on the following day he aimed more carefully, and with deadly effect. The Nashville Banner says: "Cody was not arrested, as the majority of the citizens are of the opinion that he did exactly right."

MAGIC
CONDITION PILLS!
The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!
Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.
No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:
Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain for I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.
WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.
MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.
Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.
Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.
WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.
MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 9th, and wrote you February 20th of wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.
Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.
Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.
WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.
MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have tried no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me you said they would, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of aches and pains caused from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.
JOHN W. LORD.
Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."
EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 10, 1875.
MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and that you doubtless have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get some of these pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been as free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yes, more than you claim are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.
Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.
DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, '75.
MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for near twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I tried I do not know how many physicians, and could only get relief by using I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or ten winters, and have been travelling and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the worst and most stubborn case they had had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and thought that was the only chance for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The impression here seems to be that if your pills will cure me, they will cure anybody. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.
Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.
Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.
LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.
THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of these Pills.
MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.
BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL
is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.
Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, greatly stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.
The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

THE PLATFORM.

The following is the platform adopted by the Cincinnati Convention:

When in the economy of Providence this land was to be purged of human slavery, and when the strength of the government of the people, by the people and for the people was to be demonstrated, the republican party came into power. Its deeds have passed into history, and we look back to them with pride, incited by their memories and high aims for the good of our country and mankind, looking to the future with unfaltering courage, hope and purpose. We, the representatives of the party, in National Convention assembled, make the following declaration of principles:

First—The United States of America is a nation, not a league, by the combined workings of the national and State governments. Under their respective constitutions the rights of every citizen are secured at home and protected abroad, and the common welfare promoted.

Second—The republican party has preserved those governments to the 100th anniversary of the nation's birth, and they are now embodiments of the great truths spoken at its cradle; that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that for the attainment of these ends governments have been instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Until those truths are cheerfully obeyed, if needed to be vigorously enforced, the work of the republican party is unfinished.

Third—The permanent pacification of the Southern section of the Union, the complete protection of all its citizens in the free enjoyment of all their rights, are duties to which the republican party is sacredly pledged. The power to provide for the enforcement of the principles embodied in the recent constitutional amendments is vested by these amendments in the Congress of the United States, and we declare it to be the solemn obligation of the legislative and executive departments of the government to put into immediate and vigorous exercise all their constitutional powers for removing any just cause of discontent on the part of any class, and securing every American citizen complete liberty and exact equality in the exercise of all civil, political and public rights. To this end we imperatively demand a Congress and Chief Executive whose courage and fidelity to these duties shall not falter until these results shall be placed beyond dispute or recall.

Fourth—In the first act of Congress, signed by President Grant, the national Government assumed to remove any doubts of purpose to discharge all just obligations to public creditors, and solemnly pledged its faith to make provision, at the earliest practical period for the redemption of the United States notes in coin. Commercial prosperity, public morals and the national credit demand that this promise be fulfilled by a continuous and steady progress to specie payment.

Fifth—Under the Constitution, the President and heads of departments are to make nominations for office. The Senate is to advise and consent to appointments, and the House of Representatives is to accuse and prosecute faithless officers. The best interests of public service demand that these distinctions be respected; that Senators and Representatives who may be judges and accusers should not dictate appointments to office. The invariable rule for appointments should have reference to the honesty, fidelity and capacity of the appointees, giving to the party in power those places where harmony and vigor of administration require its policy to be represented, but permitting all others to be filled by persons selected with sole reference to the efficiency of the public service and the right of citizens to share in the honor of rendering faithful service to their country.

Sixth—We rejoice in the quickened conscience of the people concerning political affairs; will hold all public officers to a rigid responsibility, and engage that the prosecution and punishment of all who betray official trusts shall be speedy, thorough and unsparing.

Seventh—The public school system of the several States is the bulwark of the American Republic; and with a view to its security and permanence, we recommend an amendment to the Constitution of the United States forbidding the application of any public funds or property for the benefit of any school or institution under sectarian control.

Eighth—The revenue necessary for current expenditures and the obligations of the public debt must be largely derived from duties upon importations, which so far as possible should be adjusted to promote the interests of American labor and advance the prosperity of the whole country.

Ninth—We reaffirm our opposition to further grants of the public lands to corporations and monopolies and demand that the national domain be devoted to free homes for the people.

Tenth—It is the imperative duty of the Government so to modify existing treaties with European governments that the same protection shall be afforded to adopted American citizens that is given to native-born, and that all necessary laws be passed to protect emigrants in the absence of power in the State for that pupose.

Eleventh—It is the immediate duty of Congress to fully investigate the effect of the emigration and importation of Mongolians on the moral and material interests of the country.

Twelfth—The republican party recognizes with approval the substantial advance recently made toward the establishment of equal rights for women by the many important amendments effected by republican legislatures in the laws which concern the personal and property relations of wives, mothers and widows, and by the appointment and election of women to the superintendence of education, charities and other public trusts. The honest demands of this class of citizens for additional rights and privileges and immunities should be treated with respectful consideration.

Thirteenth—The constitution confers upon Congress sovereign power over the Territories of the United States for their government, and in the exercise of this power it is the right and duty of Congress to prohibit and extirpate in the Territories that relic of barbarism, polygamy, and we demand such legislation as shall secure this end, and the supremacy of American institutions in all the Territories.

Fourteenth—The pledges which the nation has given to our soldiers and sailors must be fulfilled; the grateful people will always regard those who periled their lives for the country's preservation with the kindest remembrance.

Fifteenth—We sincerely deprecate all sectional feelings and tendencies. We therefore note with deep solicitude that the democratic party counts as its chief hope of success upon the electoral vote of a united South, secured by the efforts of those who were recently arrayed against the nation; and we invoke the earnest attention of the country to the grave truth that a success thus achieved would re-open sectional strife and imperil the national honor and human rights.

Sixteenth—We charge the democratic party with being the same in character and spirit as when it sympathized with treason, and with making its control of the House of Representatives the triumph and opportunity of the nation's recent foes; with reasserting and applauding in the national capital the sentiments of the unrepentant rebellion; with sending Union soldiers to the rear; with deliberately proposing to repudiate the plighted faith of the Government; with being equally false and imbecile upon overshadowing the financial question; with thwarting the ends of justice by its partisan mismanagement and obstruction of investigation; with proving itself through the period of its ascendancy in the lower house of Congress utterly incompetent to administer the Government. We warn the country against trusting a party thus alike unworthy, recreant and incapable.

Seventeenth—The National Administration merits commendation for its honorable work in the management of domestic and foreign affairs; and President Grant deserves the continued and hearty gratitude of the American people for his patriotism, and his immense service in war and in peace.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, JUNE 19, 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT,

Rutherford B. Hayes,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

William A. Wheeler,

OF NEW YORK.

The Candidates.

Gen. Rutherford Birchard Hayes was born in Delaware, Ohio, October 4, 1822. He graduated at Kenyon College in 1842, and at Cambridge Law School in 1845. He began the practice of law in Cincinnati and secured a large practice, and took a high rank in the profession. From 1858 to 1861 he was City Solicitor.

When the Rebellion broke out, he was one of the first to respond to the call of the country. He was first Major and subsequently Colonel of the 23d Ohio Volunteers. At the battle of Cedar Mountain, he was severely wounded. From December 1862, to September 1864, he commanded a brigade of the Kanawha division. Much of the time he commanded the division. For meritorious conduct at the battles of Winchester, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek, he was promoted to Brigadier-General in October, 1864, and subsequently brevetted Major-General. While in the army, his party friends in his Congressional district recognized him as the man best qualified to carry a close district and besought him to accept a nomination. He refused, saying that he could best serve the country and the cause in the face of the enemy.

At the close of the war, he was elected to Congress from a close district and served with credit from 1865 to 1868. In 1867, Gen. Hayes was recognized by the republicans of the "Empire State of the West" as a fit man for a leader against George H. Pendleton, who was regarded as the most popular democrat in that State and then the most prominent candidate in the West for the Presidential nomination in 1868. The contest was a memorable one, but Gen. Hayes was elected by a majority of 3000. In 1869 he was re-nominated and had for his competitor Senator Thurman, the ablest and best known democrat of the State of Ohio. The contest was a sharp one, but Gov. Hayes had so grown in the confidence and esteem of the people that he was elected by a majority of 7,500 on a much larger vote. Last year the republicans were in a position where they had to nominate a man of the highest character and ability. Several able men were mentioned, including Attorney General Taft, but the convention dropped every other aspirant and with a unanimity which testifies to the ability and popularity of the man, called upon Gov. Hayes to lead the party in the most notable political contest ever known in Ohio. He was not an aspirant for the office. He reluctantly accepted the proffered leadership as a matter of duty. He made several speeches, taking a decided stand against the inflation heresy which had infected a part of the republican party in that State. No man called to lead in a critical period ever bore himself more nobly. He did not waver or equivocate, but in strong, earnest words declared for honest money and national integrity. The result of that brilliant contest is fresh in the minds of all; and the victory was as largely due to his high personal qualities as to any other one cause. Thus Gov. Hayes has defeated successively three presidential aspirants in Ohio—Pendleton, Thurman and Allen. He goes into the pending contest with the prestige of victory.

William A. Wheeler, the nominee for Vice President, has been a leading member of Congress for several terms. He was once spoken of as a candidate for Speaker against Mr. Blaine. In the present contest he was mentioned in New York as a fitter man for the Presidential nomination than Mr. Conkling, and would doubtless have been the republican candidate for Governor in that State. He was made chairman of the House Committee by Speaker Blaine to go to Louisiana and inquire into the nature of the difficulties there which had caused anarchy. As the result of the labors of the Committee, an adjustment was made which has been known as the "Wheeler Compromise." Mr. Wheeler is a man of conceded ability, and his name on the ticket will insure the republicans the Empire State and victory in November.

How They Look At It.

Immediately on the receipt, by the prominent candidates for the Presidential nomination, of the news that Gov. Hayes had been selected by the Convention, the following dispatches were sent to him by them:

I offer you my sincerest congratulations on your nomination. It will be alike my highest pleasure, as well as my first political duty, to do the utmost in my power to promote your election. The earliest moments of my returning and confirmed health will be devoted to securing you as large a vote in Maine as she would have given for myself. J. G. BLAINE.

I heartily congratulate the country, the republican party and you on your nomination. You need no assurance of the cordiality of my support. Sincerely yours.
ROSCOE CONKLING,

I congratulate you upon your nomination for the Presidency and shall labor earnestly for your success.
O. P. MORTON.

I most sincrely congratulate you on your nomination. Pennsylvania will surely give you her vote in November.
J. F. HARTRANFT.

I beg you to accept my earnest and hearty congratulations. Your nomination secures victory in November.
B. H. BRISTOW.

The Legislature.

In the House, on the 16th, a resolution was adopted directing the Committee on Judiciary to inquire if further legislation is not needed in regard to the manner of auditing County Commissioners' accounts, and in regard to the pay, and report by bill or otherwise. The joint resolution to continue the publication of the Provincial records of the State was read twice and referred. Notices of bills were given to reorganize and equalize the Councillor Districts; to reorganize and equalize the Senatorial Districts; to amend the act to prevent incompetent persons engaging in the business of druggists or apothecaries. The use of the hall having been voted for the purpose, an exhibition was given by twenty-five pupils from the Perkins Institute for the Blind, South Boston.

The afternoon session was of just twelve minutes' duration. The House adjourned until Monday at 4 o'clock P. M.

News and Notes.

Capt. Cook says that his Yale crew is all right for Springfield, except that "the regular rowing has been seriously interrupted by college exercises, especially the annual examinations."

Christian Klatz, from the Maryland House of Refuge, employed as a farm hand by Mr. Street, near Clermont Mills, Maryland, chopped the head of Almira Street, seventeen years old, the daughter of his employer, nearly off on a recent morning. The neighbors caught him, took him to a tree, hung him a few moments and let him down alive. He then after confessing that he killed the girl out of "pure devilment," proposed to shoot himself, but followed a suggestion of one of the crowd by climbing a tree, tied a rope round his own neck, bade them good-bye, jumped off into the air, and thus ended his brutal existence.

Dr. Newman Hall's church and the Lincoln Tower, in London, will be dedicated on the 4th of July with great ceremony.

It is officially announced that the British Board of Trade have awarded Cap. Gifford, of the American whaler Young Phœnix, a silver cup, in acknowledgement of his kindness to the survivors of the emigrant ship Strathmere, wrecked on the Crozets islands in the southern Indian Ocean while on a voyage from England to New Zealand a year ago.

On Friday, in Ayr, Scotland, a fire broke out in an extensive carpet manufactory, and rapidly spread to all parts of the building, where the operatives were at work. It is believed that all the men, except one, escaped. A number of women rushed out saying that there were others inside unable to escape. Soon afterward the roof fell in. Twenty-four women were buried in the ruins and perished. One woman, who leaped from the upper window, was so badly injured that she died. It is reported that an overseer named Barr locked the door where the female operatives were working. Barr himself perished in the flames. The works were entirely destroyed. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

The wife of Rev. L. Malvern was severely cut in the face at Laconia Thursday, by falling down stairs with a large kerosene lamp.

At Worcester, Mass., on Thursday, Frank Johnston, seventeen years old, while tending target for several gentlemen, left his shelter to pick up a flag which had dropped. Just as he did so one of the gentlemen fired and the ball passed through the boy's head in front of the ear, passing over the palate and out near the other ear. The boy is able to talk, and his recovery and freedom from disfiguration are hoped for.

When Winslow was caught, quite a number of the "forged" notes he left behind were hastily paid by parties who had at first claimed that their signatures were not genuine, showing them to be as big rogues as Winslow. Now that Winslow is discharged they must be pretty mad to think that in their needless fright they paid debts they had meant to lie out of, and exposed their latent rascality also.

Two years ago schooner Willie Seavey, Capt. White, lost on Sable Banks, an anchor and forty fathoms of cable. A few weeks since the schooner was lying at the same place, when, in weighing anchor the old cable and anchor was found attached.

The steamer Cambridge, Capt. Johnson, left Boston for Bangor on Friday evening, and ran ashore on Southwest Point, near Monhegan, at half-past 2 o'clock next morning, in a dense fog, running about fifteen feet of her keel out of water on a steep ledge. The sea was quite calm, otherwise a great disaster must have ensued, as there was a large number of passengers on board. Five porgie-fishing steamers and a fleet of small boats went to her assistance, and she was got off the ledge at half-past 7 o'clock Saturday morning. She was leaking, but a sail under the bows, and a steam pump, kept her nearly free of water, and she got on for Bangor. She is a wooden side-wheel steamer of 1337 tons, and was repaired last Winter at a cost of $30,000.

The Belfast (Me.) Lodge of Good Templars numbering 800 and the largest in the world, has been presented with an elegant prize, banner by the Grand Lodge.

The New York World has a tough story about one Isaac B. Charles, of Ada, Ohio. From this account it seems he murdered his father and mother some years ago, to get his share of their property, and his wife and child, that he might marry his servant girl. He was appointed administrator of his father's estate, squandered the property, forged notes to cover up his previous rascalities in money affairs, and finally poisoned a batch of thirteen persons, including his two brothers and their families, to cover up his forgeries. Four of the poisoned persons have died, and others are not expected to live. Big rascal, or big lie.

The democratic vision is totally unable to penetrate to the White House, on account of the overpowering haze.

The New Hampshire delegation to Cincinnati voted seven for Blaine and three for Bristow on every one of the seven ballots taken. New Hampshire political men are not much given to swapping horses when crossing a stream; if all the delegates had been like 'em the Convention wouldn't have nominated a candidate in time to be voted for in November. Hooray for fellows what "stick."

A Deserved Rebuke.

Mr. Danford, in his speech in the House exonerating Speaker Kerr, told the democrats some hard truths. He referred to the peculiar circumstances which surrounded the case as presented by Harney—the appointment to a valuable place of a man who resided in a different State, who was antagonistic to him in politics, and whom he never knew until introduced by Harney. Had it not been for these circumstances, the committee would not have deemed the charges worthy of investigation. Mr. Kerr was the victim of circumstances and the malevolence of a bad man, who was a legitimate outgrowth of the system of investigation followed for the past six months by committees of the House. He reviewed the testimony of Moore, and said the committee did not believe Harney's charges were the result of a conspiracy on the part of New York officials whom Moore named; Harney told the same story ten years ago that he swore to before the committee; and after one investigating committee had examined a witness whose testimony was expected to smirch the private character and destroy the domestic peace of the President, and whose testimony had to be suppressed because he was a lunatic, and another committee had seized several hundred pounds of private telegrams, involving the private transactions of thousands of citizens, it was not surprising that an occasional Harney should be found ready to pull down the most lofty character. Great attention was paid Mr. Danford's speech. It was dignified and manly, and receives commendation from both sides of the House. His illustration of the system of investigation now being pursued, and the liability of any public man to be assailed by men like Harney, made an impression upon many of the democratic members.—Portland Press.

—A proposition to prohibit clergymen from becoming members of the legislature was rejected in the Connecticut House of Representatives. The author gave the curious reason for it that it was an attempt to break up a very common practice of congregations inducing clergymen to accept a low salary on condition that they shall be elected to the legislature and thus get $300 more.

— This is the way the newspapers talk in Louisiana: "If that convicted thief and robber, Jim Walker, wants any fuss with us, he can have steel or buckshot in unlimited quantities by poking his nose around our corner."

Jottings.

Samuel Adams, Esq., on Saturday at 2 o'clock P. M. threw to the breeze a campaign flag bearing the names of the next President and Vice President of the United States, Hayes and Wheeler. The first campaign flag raised in the city.

The U. S. District Court will be in session at Exeter, on Tuesday.

Parties in Dover have purchased a New York steam-tug and will place her on the Piscataqua this summer.

John H. Murray's great "Railroad Circus" requires the services of one hundred and twelve men, forty horses and twenty-six ponies; and it takes eighteen cars to transport the establishment. The actors and band will be quartered at the Rockingham, Mr. Murray placing all his assistants at first-class hotels and not feeding a man on the circus ground.

Somebody who likes to make mischief, started the story yesterday that the Eastern railroad would default in the payment of the July dividend to holders of Portsmouth & Dover railroad stock. The story probably originated in the fact that George L. Treadwell, Esq., treasurer of the Portsmouth & Dover road, was in town yesterday to notify our city authorities that he would not personally attend to the payment of the city coupons, due in Boston July 1, as he had heretofore done. The custom has been for him, as treasurer of the Portsmouth & Dover road, to take the money paid over as dividends on the city stock, and pay the city coupons in Boston. His notice yesterday was simply to the effect that the city authorities must attend to the coupons themselves, and not depend upon him to do it. He said very plainly that the Eastern would promptly pay the July dividend, and that the city, and all other stockholders, would get their money. Dover Democrat, 16th.

Morse & Ilsley sold by auction, Saturday, twenty shares Portsmouth Trust and Guarantee company stock for $98 per share, to Mr. Jeremiah Sanborn.

The cavalry company had a meeting Friday evening in Grange Hall, when the committee to whom was referred the matter of State aid reported that they had received assurances that all eqipments and the regular State allowance for uniforms will be furnished. Messrs. M. T. Betton, Horace W. Moses and Plummer D. Norton were appointed a committee on uniforms. The meeting adjourned until Friday evening.

Mt. Sinai Encampment, No. 19, I. O. O. F., has elected the following officers for the year commencing July 1st: Chief Patriarch, Eli Sherman; High Priest, Job Woodsum; Senior Warden, George H. Tripp; Scribe, Joseph H. Gardiner; Treasurer, Edwin L. F. Holbrook; Junior Warden, George A. Perkins; First Captain, Matthew T. Betton; Second Captain, Andrew J. Sides; Trustees, Alonzo F. Craig, Matthew T. Betton, William W. Cotton.

On Wednesday, June 28, the Woman's National camp-meeting will commence on the Seabrook camp ground, and continue two weeks. The meeting will be conducted and managed by Mrs. Annie E. Smith, President of the Woman's Bureau, founded in 1873, assisted by a numerous body of female Advent preachers, who will represent sixteen States of the Union. The object of the meeting is to promote religion, temperance and other good works. The Advent camp meeting will commence on the Seabrook camp ground Aug. 19.

Base Ball.

A lively game of base ball was played at the Plains on Saturday afternoon between the Atlantic and Olympic clubs of this city, the former winning by a score of 11 to 10. Umpire, Edward Russell.

The second game between the Granite State nine and a picked nine from Kittery, will be played at the Plains on Tuesday afternoon at half-past 2 o'clock.

Fourth of July.

On Saturday evening the general committee and a number of citizens met in the Common Council room, to discuss the celebration question. The finance committee reported an encouraging list of subscriptions, and another working member was added to their number. The whole committee are working hard, and all that is needed to ensure a good celebration is the co-operation of the citizens. The finance committee will call upon those who have not been offered a chance to subscribe to the fund, to-day and to-morrow; and to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, at 8 o'clock, will render a final report to the general committee (and all others interested, who are earnestly invited to attend) at the Common Council room, when a programme will be adopted and details arranged—unless it should appear that the citizens do not care enough about a celebration to do what is necessary in the matter, in which case the whole thing will be dropped. This meeting will be final, one way or the other, and we hope the subscriptions and the interest manifested will warrant the committee in going ahead.

Correspondence.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 14.

The finance board held yesterday and continues to-day a secret session in regard to the legal opinions given as to the power of the commissioners. When I wrote before the opening, I stated there was a breach between the board of commissioners and the finance board, the latter assuming powers which the former claimed belong to them. This has developed into an open quarrel, and is I think caused by the arrogance and assumption of the finance board. Like many other small men put in office, the members of this board, to use a common expression, "became too big for their breeches," and claimed to direct where their business was to obey—forgot they were servants and want to be masters. It is well understood that the commissioners will be held responsible for the success or failure of the Centennial Exposition, and they should therefore control the management; but this the finance board prevents them from doing; and as they have usurped control, most of the correspondents and the Associated Press, being indebted to them for favors, uphold them in their usurpation. As I have no favors to ask or receive, paying my way when I enter, I can afford to tell the truth. I am very much in hopes that the commissioners will assert and maintain their rights, and succeed in exposing the jobbing and favoritism by which the finance board has enabled some of its friends to make fortunes.

One of the handsomest buildings on the ground, is that of the shoe and leather dealers, directly alongside of Machinery Hall. Over five hundred firms dealing in these articles are exhibitors in this building. It is really wonderful to note the varieties of that prosaic article "leather" and to see into what forms it can be wrought by the hands of the skillful artisan. There is poetry in shoes we all know when they encase the well formed foot of a beautiful woman, but they have actually been made poetical here, when off the foot. One man has four pairs which represent spring, summer autumn and winter, and the design is very good.

The electro-silver plated fruit and flower stand exhibited by a New York firm is a splendid work of art. The epergne is four feet high and is provided with six arms for holding dishes for fruits and flowers. The figures at the base represent archery and fishing, music and hawking, and the festoons the spoils of the chase. It is exceedingly beautiful and artistic.

The site for the monument to the memory of Bishop Allen was dedicated on Monday, many preminent colored men being present. The Women's International Temperance Convention is assembled in Philadelphia and it is expected that it will speak strongly against the action of the commissioners in closing the Centennial grounds on Sunday and permitting the sale of ardent spirits not only on that day but every other. I have visited the grounds on Sunday and found no trouble in buying any kind of liquors, so I speak by the card. The strawberry exhibit in Agricultural Hall has been open for several days and one cannot help being astonished at the size and perfection to which this berry is brought by cultivation. I was reminded as I looked at them of what Dean Swift said of this berry, "doubtless God could have made a better berry than the strawberry, but doubtless he never did." The California wine company have their display in this hall, and they insist upon every one taking a sample of their champagne and golden wines. I saw one gentleman return with three different parties and he sampled each kind every time, until I thought as he left the last time his eyes were brighter and his gate more unsteady than on his first visit. At one point in the main building you see stationed all day a guard. Inquiry will show you that he is placed there to watch over a little toy for woman's adornment—a diamond necklace worth only eighty thousand dollars. It is escorted under guard to and from the safe in which it is kept at night. I have never seen a woman who knew of this necklace, fail to stop and look at it. A great many models of extinct animals are displayed in Agricultural Hall, and if the world before the flood contained many of the monsters such as the models of are exhibited here we ought to be very thankful to old Noah that he let them all drown and took none into his ark, even though he did save flies and mosquetoes. The receipts for the first month ending last Saturday are in excess of the expenditures but not enough to justify any expectation of making the exhibition remunerative to those who invested their money in it. This does not matter, as the collateral benefits, not only to Philadelphia but to the whole country, will be very great. MACK.

—An old negro was paid his week's wages in New York, recently, receiving the most of it in silver half-dollars. He looked benignly at them as they lay in his palm, chuckled as though in triumph, and exclaimed, "Dat's de stuff de rats can't chaw!"

—A lady writer of the Philadelphia Item, (who apparently speaks by the card,) alluding to the clergyman's remark that "Home without children is like Heaven without angels," says, "We just want to have him get out of bed four times a night for a mouth to keep baby's legs covered up in his little cot."

—A traveller visiting a cathedral was shown by the sacristan, among other marvels, a dirty, opaque glass phial. After eyeing it some time the traveller said, "Do you call this a relic? Why, it is empty." "Empty!" retorted the sacristan, indignantly, "Sir, it contains some of the darkness that Moses spread over the land of Egypt."

Strawberry Festival.

The young people of the North Church will hold a Festival at their chapel on Middle street, Tuesday evening, June 20th, where Strawberries and Cream, Ice Cream, etc., will be served at moderate prices. The citizens of Portsmouth, and any strangers within our gates, are most cordially invited; our room is cool, and we will try and please you. Ten cents admission will be charged at the door.

Per Order of the Committee.

—Flies have begun to come down to dinner at the sound of the gong.

—A Georgia man, who was under examination recently to demonstrate his fitness for serving upon a jury in a murder case, was told by the judge to look upon the prisoner. He did so, and said, "Yes, judge, I think he's guilty!" He was excused from serving.

Encouraging Symptons.

The cheering glow diffused throughout the system by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the elasticity of mind and body which they impart, and the disappearance which they cause of those vague, uneasy feelings so difficult to describe, are most encouraging symptoms to the desponding invalid. The sensation of returning health is a most delightful one, and to enjoy it, those afflicted with dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, intermittent or remittent fevers, lack of vitality, sleeplessness, rheumatic, nervous and urinary troubles, should avail themselves without delay of this invaluable tonic and corrective. Besides being specifically adapted to the eradication of these maladies, it is wondrously effective in all diseases involving a diminution of vital power on account of its properties as a general invigorant.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

—A very narrow aperture—The crack of a whip.

—You can buy a cane fish-pole for twenty-five cents and catch just as many fish with it as you can with a jointed one that costs seventeen dollars; but you can't take it apart and slip it under your coat when you go fishing on Sundays as you can one that is in sections, and a religious outside appearance is worth sixteen dollars and seventy-five cents to most men.

—A Virginia City paper gives the following account of the satisfactory working of a local law: "The law requiring all saloons to be closed on election days works well. The whisky bottles are decorously covered with towels, and when a thirsty party or politician enters, the bar-keeper shakes his head and walks gravely away. The thirsty politicians then take a mean advantage of his temporary absence, slip behind the bar, lift up a towel or two, help themselves to water, etc., and slip out. When the bar-keeper returns he is surprised to find some silver coin lying on the counter, which was not there when he went away. The law works very well."

Indisputable Evidence.

St. Elmo. Ill., July 8, 1874.

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:—I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative properties of your Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery. I have taken great interest in this medicine since I first used it. I was badly afflicted with dyspepsia, liver deranged and an almost perfect prostration of the nervous system. So rapid and complete did the Discovery effect a perfect cure that it seemed more like magic and a perfect wonder to myself, and since that time we have never been without a bottle of the Discovery and Purgative Pellets in the house. They are a solid, sound family physician in the house and ready at all times to fly to the relief of sickness—without charge. We have never had a doctor in the house since we first began the use of your Pellets and Discovery. I have recommended the use of these medicines in several severe and complicated cases arising from, as I thought, an impure state of the blood, and in no one case have they failed to more than accomplish all they claimed to do. I will only mention one as remarkable, (though I could give you a dozen.) Henry Koster, furniture dealer, of this place, who was one of the most pitiful objects ever seen, his face swollen out of shape, scales and eruptions without end, extending to his body, which was completely covered with blotches and scales. Nothing that he took seemed to effect it a particle. I finally induced him to try a few bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery, with daily use of the Pellets, assuring him that it would surely cure him. He commenced its use some six weeks since, taking two Pellets each night for a week, then one each night, and the Discovery as directed. The result is, to-day his skin is perfectly smooth, and the scaly eruptions gone. He has taken some seven or eight bottles in all, and considers himself cured. This case had baffled the skill of our best physicians. Messrs. Dunsford & Co., druggists, of this place, are selling largely of your medicines and the demand steadily increases, and they give perfect satisfaction in every case.

Respectfully, W. H. CHAMPLIN,
Agt, Am. Exp. Co.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.

Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 9th, and wrote you February 23d of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.

Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir;—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking Dr. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of coughs and colds caused from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.

Yours with respect, JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the great good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no purpose. At times it would so cripple him he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been as free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yes, I more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.

Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, '75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for near twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I tried I do not know how many physicians, and spent a great deal of money. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or nine months, and could not travel, and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the worst and most stubborn case they had had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and thought that was the only chance for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The impression here among all who know me is that your pills will cure anybody. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.

Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., JAN. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those Pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of those Pills. MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs,

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Good Fresh Butter All The Year Round.
BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes the butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc.; and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

THE BEST USE.

MARY ANNIE DE VERE.

Out of the bud the bright rose bloweth,
And all the soul of her sweetness goeth
Abroad to the sun and wind and rain;
But ah! ah never, in any weather,
Can she fold up her leaves together,
And close herself in a bud again!

But if the sun and the wind be sweeter,
And Summer's beautiful dress completer,
Because of the rose's graceful part,
Were it not wiser far and better,
Then bound and locked in her fair green fetter,
To die with an untouched virgin heart?

Birds vs. Insects.

The importance of a more complete knowledge of the insects that infest our crops, becomes more and more manifest from year to year. The loss to the farmer from this source alone is something enormous, and the only way to stop it, seems to be to study and to know the habits and characteristics of the insect tribe. We shall find specimens enough in the gardens, the orchard and the grain field. It is estimated that the wheat crop of Illinois was damaged in one year to the extent of seventy-three millions, and the estimated annual destruction by insects in the United States is four hundred millions of dollars. The effect of this loss is felt not alone by the farmer, but extends to all classes.

Commencing with the earliest vegetables, we find maggots among the radishes, green worms and lice on the cabbage and cauliflowers, striped bugs on the cucumbers, tobacco worms as large as your finger on the tomatoes, in the currant bushes a borer, and webs of worms in the branches. Grape blossoms are eaten by the rose bug, curculios sting the plums and apricots, and then the codling moth takes the best of the apples and pears; green lice and red spiders infest the greenhouse plants, cut-worms the beds of pansies and outdoor flowers. And so all through, there seems to be hardly enough plants to go around and satisfy the enemy. There are thirty species of insects which subsist on garden vegetables. The grape vine has about fifty insect chemies, the apple tree seventy-five, our different shade trees over a hundred, and wheat and grains fifty.

The first and most obvious remedy for these depredations, is to spare and protect the birds that feed on insects. We do not prize them half enough. These are among our best friends and do us untold good, and if here and there they take a little grain, let us offset this by the vast amount of benefit they confer on us. We shall always find that it is a noticeable fact that as the birds decrease, the insect world advances in numbers.

Dom Pedro at Bunker Hill.

The janitor who has charge of Bunker Hill Monument, arriving at about half-past seven Friday morning to open the premises, found two strangers in waiting. One, a tall, gray bearded man in a slouch hat, asked if they could ascend the monument.

"Yes," said the custodian, "you can for twenty-five cents" (holding out his hand.)

The stranger produced the money, and the custodian unlocked the door and forthwith commenced sweeping out, raising a cloud of dust, and paying no attention to his visitor, who was looking about him curiously, until half chocked with dust, he inquired "if these were the steps."

"Yes, all right, go ahead, go right up till you get to the top."

The visitor and his companion did as they were bid, and stayed some half an hour enjoying the beautiful panoramic view from the summit, after which they descended, and were quietly walking away when they were hailed by the custodian with—"H'yar, just write your names in this book: all visitors that go up the monument sign their names here."

The gray-bearded man laughed, and signed his name, and the two departed. The custodian never looked at the book, but some hours afterwards was electrified by one of the officers of the Monument Association who chanced to come in, asking him, in the most agitated manner, when Dom Pedro, the Emperor of Brazil, had been there?

"Has'nt been here at all," was the reply.

"Has'nt been here. Why, here is the signature on your visitor's book. What does this mean?"

"What!" said the custodian, rushing up to the volume. "Why, good gracious! that was written by a tall man with a slouch hat."

And so it was, but the tall man was the Emperor of Brazil, and this was the way he ascended Bunker Hill monument, just like "any other man."—Commercial Bulletin.

Saw It All.

Not long since, being at Yorktown, Virginia, I fell into discourse with a very old negro man, who was quite communicative. As nearly as I can recall the words, his narrative was as follows:

"I see General Washington? Yes, sah—why, I was here all de time. See the British? See Cornwallis? To be sho'—wan't I here, right here—all de time? Suttenly. I see 'em all. Now, I tell you, massa? I see General Washington an' he was settin' on his hoss an' eatin' of a peach; an' Cornwallis he come out, a slippin' around to get de creek, an' he start up to run down toward de creek, an' he start up to run, but General Washington he see him d'rectly, an' he started after him, an' General Washington he didn't want to take no advantage of him, so he run well—an' pretty soon he catch Cornwallis, and he catch him by the neck an' say, 'You d—n scoundrel, I got you.' An' Cornwallis he turn round an' handed Mr. General Washington his sword, an' General Washington he jess took it an' cut his head off. See it? To be sho' I see it—I was right heah all de time, massa. How I gwine help to see it? Jess as I tell you—General Washington was a settin' on his hose, an' eatin' of a peach——"

But it is not necessary to repeat the old man's story as often as he did. Suffice it to say that he never varied in any particular, thus furnishing one of the best indicia of veracity and accuracy.—Fredericksburg News.

Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, JUNE 20, 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT,

Rutherford B. Hayes,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

William A. Wheeler,

OF NEW YORK.

How They Look At It.

The republican press of the country heartily endorses the nominations.

The New York Tribune, which was strong for Blaine, says the ticket will have the cordial support of the whole party, and liberals and independent reformers will sustain it. The reform element of the party will feel its just demand has been consulted.

The New York Times (anti-administration) says the Convention has given the party a ticket and a platform that must win.

The New York Herald (anti-almost-everything) says the ticket is a fair one, and represents the average common-sense, sober-minded classes, and will poll the party vote.

The New York Sun (anti-every-thing but Charles A. Dana's superhuman virtue) says Gov. Hayes is no reformer. That means the Sun won't be able to run his administration.

The Boston Globe (anti-Blaine and both political parties, but strong for Bristow,) gives the candidates its commendation as being unobjectionable men if not men of the most positive character, and says "the action of the convention will have the effect intended of uniting the party, and will give it on the whole an excellent prospect in the race."

The Boston Journal, one of Mr. Blaine's supporters, says the Convention "has done its work nobly. It has given us a ticket which every republican in the land can support with pride and heartiness—a ticket suggestive of at once the great principles of our organization and of its heroic achievements both in peace and in war—a ticket clean and pure, free from all rings, combinations and things needing explanation," a ticket which is "not only satisfactory to every true republican, but must command the confidence, and we trust the support, of every friend of reform, of official purity and sound administration."

The Boston Advertiser, one of Mr. Blaine's most earnest advocates, says: "The ticket is a good one, a strong one and a winning one. It has no weak point. The candidates represent all that is good in the party, and they will undoubtedly carry this and every other republican State by old-fashioned majorities, and be triumphantly elected in November."

The Boston Herald ("independent" but bitterly anti-republican,) says "the nomination is just good enough to take the wind out of the sails of a third party;" and of General Hayes: "He is a gentleman of culture and refinement, high-toned, not very ambitious, and above the low arts of politicians. His record in the army was good, and he is a friend of honest money and reformed civil service."

The Providence Journal says: "With such a man upon the Cincinnati platform, the victory of the republican party in the coming election is assured. He is the just and proper complement of the principles announced by the convention. A soldier and a statesman; residing in the very heart of the country; known and esteemed by his own people; in the very prime of life; this nomination has come to him without any effort on his part, and his whole past is a guaranty of a wise and patriotic future. With Rutherford B. Hayes at the head of the Presidential ticket, the republican party will march to an easy success, and will secure to the country the dominance of law, the fulfillment of every national obligation, and the speediest return to a general and lasting prosperity. Mr. Wheeler will give strength to the ticket, and will worthily bear the high honor which the American people designate for him."

The Worcester Spy says the ticket will be supported with enthusiasm and elected in defiance of all opposition.

The Newburyport Herald says: "The republican party have a new candidate, of clean record, against whom the tongue of scandal has never yet wagged. The stories which may be invented against him will be considered as campaign lies and in this respect he will have the advantage of either Blaine or Bristow. All the scandal and personal abuse has got to be manufactured or raked up from the gutters in the future. This will be pretty hard work. Governor Hayes has a record as a man, as a soldier, and as a statesman which is above the reach of slander, if so much can be said of any character in these days when scandal is so prevalent and so effective. He will unite the party, and as the campaign progresses, will be satisfactory as either Blaine or Bristow, and his nomination will tend more to harmonize the party than either of their names could have done."

The Portland Press and Bangor Whig, and other republican papers in Maine which have so heartily advocated the claims of Maine's distinguished statesman, come out in proper style in support of the ticket nominated, and pledge the State for one of her old-time majorities.

Extradition.

The London Times, commenting on Winslow's release, says:

Arguments have been advanced on our side which we cannot but hold as quite untenable, while a disposition is manifested by the Government at Washington to sacrifice the objects of real and permanent importance through a disputatious spirit.

That must mean that while England is wrong in assuming that an act of the British Parliament is more binding on the Nation, in its dealings with another, than is a duly ratified treaty between the two, yet the United States, in refusing to yield to such ridiculous assumptions for the sake of securing a petty criminal, was actuated by "a disputatious spirit." There was a time once, (according to British man-o'-war's-man's tradition,) when the men-of-war of other nations were obliged to lower their topsails whenever they met a British cruiser on the ocean; but that very same "disputations spirit" at last cropped out in those olden days, and finally resulted in England's finding out that though she ruled the wave" she didn't entirely own it. The Times further says:

When Mr. Pierrepont, the new Minister of the United States, is settled here, and the present political agitation at Washington has subsided, we will confidently expect approval of the new extradition article proposed by England.

We don't expect anything of the kind. The press of this country, irrespective of party, has been nearly unanimous in supporting Secretary Fish's demand that the treaty should be observed while it stands, any act of Parliament to the contrary notwithstanding; and we believe the press would be equally unanimous in denouncing any consideration of another treaty until England is ready to acknowledge that such a treaty is binding on both contracting parties until it is regularly annulled.

Unknown.

The democrats feel very badly because the republicans have nominated two "unknown" men for President and Vice President. They will know all they want to about them before their first term of office is up. Indeed at least three prominent democrats, Messrs. Pendleton, Thurman Allen, know Gov. Hayes pretty well already, having each had the honor of being defeated by him in hotly-contested elections in the State in which all of them belong.

Should the democrats nominate Tilden the republicans will not need to ask who he is. He is well known as the man who, as chairman of the democratic State committee of New York during the worst days of the Tammany-Tweed rule, receipted to Boss Tweed for $5000 contributed for the good of the party—money which it is hardly possible he did not know was stolen from the public by that great democratic thief—and who was hand and glove with the Tammany leaders until the furious onslaught of the New York Times rendered the connection disreputable, when he hastily turned around and became a "reformer." He is known as one of a ring of operators accused with attempting to get possession of a large amount of railroad shares and securities, by means which were stigmatised by the bench of a United States court, before whom the matter was brought, as "trickery and fraud." He is known as a man who has been accused, on the affidavit of a railroad director, with having wrongfully pocketed a large amount of the bonds of the railroad, a charge concerning which no defence has as yet been attempted though the charge was made many weeks ago. And he is known as the champion presidential advertising agent of the century, too—as a man who is willing to pay liberally for enough "spontaneous enthusiasm" to secure his nomination at St. Louis. He is well enough known, whether the republican candidates are or not.

Shot-gun Politics.

It is about time the senseless talk about colored men not being well treated, and protected by the laws, in the South, was given up. The ridiculous absurdity of Morton's waving of the "bloody shirt" is shown by the following item from the Pensacola (Florida) News of June 3: On Wednesday we got on the train at Shade's Station, P. & L. R. R. In the front car was a lady with four daughters, and one other passenger, in the rear were four white men, Hester, Schell, Kelly, and one whose name we did not learn, all armed with shot-guns and pistols. They stopped the train just out of Molino, by ordering a colored breaksman, with cocked guns to enforce the order, to tell the engineer to stop and back down to get some money they had lost, which was just ten cents. When we get on board, Mr. Mallory had the armed men tolerably quiet; no further outbreak was looked for, although they halloed at every person the train passed, and varied this amusement with an occasional shot from the car. When the train arrived at Gonzalia, Hester shot a negro, who ran from him. Hester and Schell followed the man through an old store-house, firing another shot, the man falling just in front of the engine. Hester drew a broad bladed knife, stabbing him several times in the back and once in the neck, breaking the blade off in the negro's body. As Hester left him, he shouted "I'm a white man, I am!" No provocation was given for the attack; the men Hester and Schell simply cut and shot him because he was black. The four men got off the train at Oakfield, as they said to kill another colored man near Ferry Pass. A warrant was issued for the arrest of these three men; and the delay of its execution, which gave them a chance to escape, is yet to be explained.

Business in England.

The manufacturing and other business interests of England are stagnant, though England has free trade, specie payments and a "Conservative" government. The great iron works are many of them at a standstill, as are most of the extensive saltworks; and there is but a poor market for cotton and woolen goods. Labor is plenty and employment scarce, and heavy failures of large business houses follow each other with startling rapidity. By the recent failure of a heavy linen-manufacturing company in Ireland between 3000 and 4000 people have been added to the long list of the unemployed. All this is not encouraging to the hopes of those who look for a revival of business on this side of the ocean.

The Liverpool Courier says the number of magnificent steamships lying idle in Liverpool and Birkenhead docks is unparalleled in the history of commerce, and the probability is that the number will increase instead of diminish.

The great iron-shipbuilding yards on the Thames, the Clyde and the Mersey have been but partially employed for years, and their business is constantly lessening. This state of affairs in England is a striking commentary on the miserable demagogism which for years has sought to make political capital in this country by charging the decline of American shipbuilding (which commenced before the inception of the republican party) and American commerce to "radical legislation" and "the Grant administration." England indeed managed to "put the evil day afar off" to the extent of twenty years or so, by getting up a furore in favor of iron ships as against wooden ones; but not even acts of Parliament can give employment to a fleet of ships too large for the carrying trade of the world. In ship building, as in other branches of industry, the business has been overdone, and the inevitable reaction has hit England at last.

Political.

High courage has been well said to be the conservator of every virtue, and James G. Blaine possesses high courage, the recent display of which would have ennobled him, if it had been manifested in a high cause. The personal attachment he has evidently inspired in those who are nearest to him, and who may be held to know him best, must count largely in his favor. No man who is not himself faithful in his friendships ever could have retained such a hold on the fidelity of others as Blaine has. Arrayed against him was the administration of his party; its leading journals; its most conspicuous, adroit and skilful leaders, and he only failed to defeat all these influences, and at last pulled down his opponents when he fell himself.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Sunset Cox says of Hayes: "He is a first-rate fellow." Ben Hill of Georgia says: "I dread Hayes' nomination more than that of anybody else."

Mr. Blaine earnestly desired if his friends could not secure his own nomination, that Gov. Hayes should be the candidate.

Hayes won the nomination for the Presidency, while Blaine came out of the fight as much the leader of the republican party as Henry Clay was of the Whigs in their palmiest days. There never was a leader so bravely supported.—N. Y. Herald.

The New Hampshire delegation steadily divided at Cincinnati. Mr. Blaine got seven votes on each ballot, while Mr. Bristow got three votes on every ballot but the last, when they were transferred to Governor Hayes. We think the three were wiser than the seven, although all is well that ends well. New Hampshire will ratify Hayes and Wheeler by 3000 easily, and by 5000 if the republicans go into the campaign with their usual vim, as we have no doubt they will.—Nashua Telegraph.

A Florida paper calls the Governor of the State "an extraordinary one-clawed bloat." The explanation of this gentlemanly courtesy is found in the fact that the paper is democratic, while the governor lost an arm in fighting bravely for the Union.

The democrats in Washington are said to acknowledge that Tilden will have no chance to win against Hayes, and that Hancock and Hendricks is the only ticket on which they can even hope to defeat the republican candidates.

We were in error in saying the New Hampshire delegation at Cincinnati voted alike on each of the seven ballots; on the last one the three Bristow men changed to Hayes. The seven Blaines hung on as they commenced.

— An exchange thinks the Eastern question really is, "What part of the Turkey do you prefer?"

—"I say, Sambo, where did you git de shirt studs?" "In de shop, to be sure." "Yah, you jest told me you hadn't no money." "Dat's right." "Where did you git 'em, den?" "Well, I saw on a card in de window, 'collar studs,' so I went in and collared 'em."

—Capt. Hammond, of the Newport Police, has a wonderful dog. He took his friend Burlingham over to see him. Thomas thought it was a fine dog, and inquiring as to his points, asked if he would fetch and carry. "Fetch and carry?" said the Captain, "you better believe! Look here!" and in saying so he took from his pocket a bright silver half dollar, and tossing it away from him, directed the canine to "go fetch it." The animal "couldn't see it." Then he took the coin and lubricated it with his saliva and threw it, when the dog started for it and had it in his mouth in a twinkling. "There, see that!" said the Captain to his friend. "Now bring it here to me." The dog was instantly forthcoming. "Drop it!" was the command of his master. But it didn't drop. "Drop it, I say!" and he forthwith sent his finger on an exploring expedition through the brute's mouth. "Why, the rascal's swallowed it," ejaculated the Captain, and sure enough he had.—Providence Press.

NOTICE.

Having my ware-room (which is the largest this side of Boston) full of the best of

MARBLE WORK,

I would respectfully invite the people of Portsmouth and vicinity, who have lost relatives or friends, or have occasion for the use of any kind of stone work, to call before purchasing elsewhere. My stock consists of Monuments, Headstones, Marble Posts, Mantel Shelves, Pier Tops, &c., the stock for which was bought and men employed to work the same, since the commencement of the present hard times. I have not sufficient room in which to place more work, and do not wish to discharge any of my hands. For the above reasons, I feel confident that no one can undersell me with the same quality of stock and work. I take occasion to call the attention of all who are repairing or building houses, to my large stock of Mantel Shelves and Pier Tops!

I also have Three LOTS, enclosed with Granite Curbs and Posts, in Harmony Grove and Sagamore Cemeteries, which I will sell at a discount.

Honor to Whom Honor is Due.

Messrs. Editors: Thanks are due Mr. Stephen B. Pearson and others for very kind and humane conduct to a stray dog. Particularly noticeable among those who are humane in transporting sheep and calves are Messrs. Elihu Dennett, James W. Nutter, and Chas. Brackett, who carry them in racks instead of practicing the barbarous custom of tying their legs and allowing their noses to grind on the wheels. We hope others will soon follow their good example.

Jottings.

If you are in favor of having a Fourth of July celebration, attend the meeting of the committee and citizens at the Common Council room at 8 o'clock this evening.

A particularly interesting game of base ball is to be played at the Plains this (Tuesday) afternoon, between the Athlete Club of Kittery and the Granite State nine of this city. The members of each club are in good practice, having been training for a contest that would finally decide the respective abilities of these two clubs, and therefore all interested should witness it.

A "young sperm whale,"—at least that was what it was labelled,—weighing about a hundred pounds, was brought in from the Shoals and exhibited at one of the fish-markets on Saturday. It was a sperm whale of the species known to old sailors as a "puffing-pig," the smallest of the porpoise tribe.

Messrs. Editors:—Why cannot the city of Portsmouth furnish at least one public drinking fountain for man and beast? The necessity and value of such an institution is obvious enough to need no argument for its adoption. Won't our Board of Aldermen consider and act upon this matter next Thursday evening? We need it now; so don't refer it to a committee to report at some subsequent meeting. C. W. G.

By an advertisement in another column it will be seen that excursion tickets on the popular steamer "Appledore," Capt. Robinson, for Tuesdays and Thursdays, can be purchased at reduced rates of Dr. Wm. R. Preston.

A base-ball-playing friend says the game played by the Atlantic and Olympic clubs at the Plains on Saturday was the best one ever played in this city. That only shows he didn't see the splendid performances of the Heavy Muffers and Foul Batters, some four or five years ago. The Olympics and Atlantics only managed to score twenty-one runs in a full game of nine innings for each side, whereas the Heavy Muffers scored double that number in their first innings, though they got beaten at last, the Foul Batters on their second innings making so many runs that the scorer filled his paper chock full and had to mark down some on the fly leaves of a testament one of the Foul Batters had in his pocket.

The New York News says of Murray's circus, which is to exhibit here on Wednesday: "This is supposed to be the most popular equestrian organization in America, and is the only legitimate circus in the United States. No features of an objectionable nature are ever introduced. Mr. Murray can well feel proud of his great success in New York. May he be greeted as warmly by his friends in the country."

A Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children was organized in this city last week and officers were elected as follows: President, Rev. Charles A. Holbrook; Secretary, Miss Susie A. Christie; Treasurer, Dr. James R. May; Directors, Mrs. John J. Pickering, Miss E. H. Pearson, Miss Mary C. Lyman, Miss Eliza A. Haven, Miss Mary A. Foster, Miss Annie Jenness, Mrs. A. W. Haven, Miss C. A. Morrison, Thomas E. O. Marvin, T. W. Williamson, James R. May, Augustus W. Odiorne.

"The Wentworth," at Newcastle, is to be called "Hotel Wentworth" for the future.

The Newburyport reform clubs are to visit this city on Thursday of this week, and not on the 29th as before incorrectly reported.

Three men stole a wherry from Kittery, Friday night, (having previously, as is supposed, broken into Mr. Charles Bartlett's store in that town and stolen a small quantity of goods and five or six dollars in money,) and took her to Newcastle, where they traded her off for a whaleboat belonging to the Wentworth, without troubling the proprietor about the matter, and then put out to sea. On Saturday they were off Hampton beach, trying to make a landing, but could not manage it on account of the heavy surf, and at last went off in the direction of the Shoals, to which place the City Marshal went on Monday to see if he could bag them, but could find no trace of the thieves.

News and Notes.

Fishing schooner Lucy Develin, at Boston on Saturday, reported having spoken transatlantic dory "Centennial," Capt. Johnson, all well.

Miss Lydia Simpson, a school teacher, of Nashua, while engaged Saturday evening in decorating a church, in stepping from the church window to the roof of an adjoining building for some flowers, fell a distance of about twenty-five feet, fortunately escaping with slight injuries.

Secretary Bristow on Saturday sent in his resignation to the President, to take effect to-day. It is asserted that Secretary Chandler will succeed him as Secretary of the Treasury.

The town of St. Johns, province of Quebec, was almost destroyed by fire on Sunday. Loss $1,500,000. Two-thirds of the town was burned.

The Hartford and Louisville base ball clubs played a game at Hartford on Saturday, which was won by the Hartfords, 1 to 0.

F. W. Boynton of Laconia, an invalid of 92 years, fell from a carriage Saturday and was run over and probably fatally injured.

Mrs. Reagan of Bedford was run over, Sunday, by the North Weare milk train, at Kelly's bridge, and died of her injuries.

Bears are making sad havoc with sheep in Colebrook and vicinity.

The tax collector of Deerfield has sold twelve farms for the payment of taxes.

Charles Upton, a well-known expressman of Nashua, died Sunday morning, of pneumonia. He was a Mason, Odd Fellow, and a member of the Grand Army.

Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 16.

The long, tedious agony relative to the nomination of a candidate at Cincinnati becomes more and more intense as the supreme moment comes nearer to hand. Congress has made a pretense of doing some work during the week, but the republican members who are corporally present are absent in spirit, and the democrats are no less distracted and inattentive to every mundane and spiritual thing save the announcements that come flying over the wires from that Western city, from time to time. Business in the Departments and other public offices is largely left to conduct itself, and the officials, with the private citizens, are collected about the various telegraph offices, discussing, wisely and unwisely, the prospect. The fierce rays of the sun are unheeded and the invalid has forsaken his or her bed to swell the excited crowd. Before sun-set many light hearts will have become heavy and many heavy hearts correspondingly lightened; the bread and butter brigade will make haste to come down from its perch on the fence and array itself in line of battle upon the side of the winning candidate, and shout with all the vehemence of a life-long devotion to the successful man.

Mr. Blaine's astonishing progress toward complete recovery is a subject of congratulation on every hand,—and corroborates the diagnosis of his physicians that the cause of his sudden illness was nervous prostration, resulting from the almost superhuman efforts of the past two or three weeks to free himself from the meshes of the conspiracy against him, aggravated by the prostrating effects of the hot rays of the sun to which he incautiously subjected himself last Sunday. It is conceded by all that only a little time is now necessary to his complete restoration. Whether it shall be well or ill with him at Cincinnati, he cannot fail to regard the almost universal evidences of personal devotion which have been manifested toward him in the hour of his peril as a panacea for any wound that may be inflicted on him at that gathering.

As the close of the present fiscal year, now at hand, brings more clearly to view the chaos and distress which must result from a failure of the customary appropriations, the indignant remonstrances—more ominous and "more terrible than an army with banners" come pouring into this city by mail and telegraph from the North, South, East and West. If the speech of Wood of New York is to be accepted as the sentiments of the ex-rebel and democratic majority in the House, the programme of crippling the government, as announced by Sam. Randall and other law-givers, is to be adhered to, under the very attenuated guise of economy and reform. The army bill has been discussed in the House to some extent, but no vote has yet been reached upon it. It still further reduces our military force, two regiments of infantry and two of cavalry being the reductions in those arms of the service. Consistently with the traditions of the party of African slavery and a "white man's government," the colored citizen is denied recognition in the future organization of the army. The color line is clearly and distinctly drawn. The amount of appropriation by the bill is something over $23,000,000—$4,000,000 less than last year. Two silver bills have passed the House, issuing some millions of silver to take the place of fractional currency which is to be called in and destroyed. The House has refused concurrence in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill as it was returned to it amended, by the Senate; a conference committee has been appointed upon it, but there is little or no prospect of any present agreement, either upon it, or by the committee of conference upon the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

Mr. Hooker of Mississippi yesterday made a speech arraigning Northern men in the South for having robbed the people of that section, after having secured control of State governments by arraying the colored freedman against his former master. Mr. Lynch, a colored member from the same State, in reply stated that Northern men who acted with the republican party in the South were ostracised and persecuted and stigmatized as carpet-baggers and swindlers; but when they deserted the republican party and united with the democrats, carrying all their sins with them, they were received with open arms and promoted to places of the highest trust and honor. The case of Ex-Governor Warmouth of Louisiana was given us as an instance of the hypocrisy animating that party of Ku Klux Klans and White Leaguers.

Mr. Kerr has improved somewhat in health and has secured a leave of absence. Very little business of importance will be transacted in Congress until after the meeting of the St. Louis convention. It would surprise no one here if Congress were in session on the first day of September.

MAXWELL.

— People will never undertand that kerosene is explosive or that a pistol is leaded.

—This is a sample of the arithmetical problems proposed at Storey County (Nev.) Teachers' Institute: "A man puts down a certain sum of money on the corner of the ace, to take the tray, in a $25-limit game. They both win through. At the end of the deal he finds that he has $57. How much did he put down, and how much did he win!"

Strawberry Festival.

The young people of the North Church will hold a Festival at their chapel on Middle street, Tuesday evening, June 20th, where Strawberries and Cream, Ice Cream, etc., will be served at moderate prices. The citizens of Portsmouth, and any strangers within our gates, are most cordially invited; our room is cool, and we will try and please you. Ten cents admission will be charged at the door.

Per Order of the Committee.

Encouraging Symptoms.

The cheering glow diffused throughout the system by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the elasticity of mind and body which they impart, and the disappearance which they cause of those vague, uneasy feelings so difficult to describe, are most encouraging symptoms to the despending invalid. The sensation of returning health is a most delightful one, and to enjoy it, those afflicted with dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, intermittent or remittent fevers, lack of vitality, sleeplessness, rheumatic, nervous and urinary troubles, should avail themselves without delay of this invaluable tonic and corrective. Besides being specifically adapted to the eradication of these maladies, it is wondrously effective in all diseases involving a diminution of vital power on account of its properties as a general invigorant.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. Daily Chronicle.

A SPRING EVENING.

Across the glory of the glowing skies
A veil is drawn of shadowed mists that rise
From invisible hands of God's late gift, the rain.
So, after farewell said, fond memories
Of words and looks, now over, come again
Across the glowing heart, a veil of pain.

—This world is full of deceit. The other day Trump Ponder's roan mule raised one of her hind feet and turned her head as if about to scratch herself behind the ear, as mules are prone to do, but instead of this she scratched a colored man behind the left eye brow and the brim of the hat. It is proper to remark that this essay on deceit is not written at the instance of the colored man. It will probably be two weeks before he finds out what killed him.

—A clergyman who was invited to preach before a medical association returned answer that he would do so from the text: "In his disease Asa sought not to the Lord but to the physicians; and Asa slept with his father's and died." The time for the delivery of the sermon has not yet been fixed.

— The Yonkers Gazette wisely remarks: "When you see a young married man contemplating baby carriages with a calm and thoughtful eye, you may reasonably infer that the matalmonial sky is bright, serene, and a little sonny." But "you had daughter" not be too sure of that.

— A lady put her watch under her pillow, but couldn't keep it there because it disturbed her sleep. And there, all the time, was her bed-ticking right underneath her, and she never thought of that at all.

Indisputable Evidence.

St. Elmo. Ill., July 8, 1874.

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:—I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative properties of your Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery. I have taken great interest in this medicine since I first used it. I was badly afflicted with dyspepsia, liver deranged and an almost perfect prostration of the nervous system. So rapid and complete did the Discovery effect a perfect cure that it seemed more like magic and a perfect wonder to myself, and since that time we have never been without a bottle of the Discovery and Purgative Pellets in the house. They are a solid, sound family physician in the house and ready at all times to fly to the relief of sickness—without charge. We have never had a doctor in the house since we first began the use of your Pellets and Discovery. I have recommended the use of these medicines in several severe and complicated cases arising from, as I thought, an impure state of the blood, and in no one case have they failed to more than accomplish all they claimed to do. I will only mention one as remarkable, (though I could give you a dozen,) Henry Koster, furniture dealer, of this place, who was one of the most pitiful objects ever seen, his face swollen out of shape, scales and eruptions without end, extending to his body, which was completely covered with blotches and scales. Nothing that he took seemed to effect it a particle. I finally induced him to try a few bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery, with daily use of the Pellets, assuring him that it would surely cure him. He commenced its use some six weeks since, taking two Pellets each night for a week, then one each night, and the Discovery as directed. The result is, to-day his skin is perfectly smooth, and the scaly eruptions gone. He has taken some seven or eight bottles in all, and considers himself cured. This case had baffled the skill of our best physicians. Messrs. Dunsford & Co., druggists, of this place, are selling largely of your medicines and the demand steadily increases, and they give perfect satisfaction in every case.

Respectfully, W. H. CHAMPLIN,

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.
Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 8th, and wrote you February 22d of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.
Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of aches and pains caused from exposure and hardship in the field. They cured me by return mail another package.
JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been an free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yes, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.
Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, 75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for near twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I feel I do not know how many physicians, and could only get partly relieved. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or ten winters, and have been traveling and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the worst and most stubborn that they had had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and that was the same thing as there for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The impression here seems to be that if your pills will cure me, they will cure anybody. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.
Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Red Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all, who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those Pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of those Pills.
MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.

MAGIC

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter countries around Philadelphia.

Domestic Diplomacy.

Mrs. Jones was standing in her back-yard feeding the chickens, when Stonewall Jackson came running in, crying as though his heart would break, and told her that Bill Brown had slapped him for nothing. Mrs. Jones never said a word, but she grit her teeth hard, and went into the house to cut cabbage, and chopped it so fine, thinking it was Bill Brown's head, that you might have sifted it through a cob-web. While Jones sat eating his dinner that evening, Mrs. Jones told him of the outrage that had been committed, and asked him what he was going to do about it. Jones pondered. Bill Brown was fully twenty-one years old, a shining light in the Fire Department, pitcher in a base-ball club, and had the general reputation among experts of being "a good man." After considering these things carefully, Jones came to the conclusion that the best course to pursue was "to treat Brown with silent contempt," and so he told his wife, adding by way of parenthesis, "My dear, such cattle are beneath our notice."

"All right, Mr. Jones," said Mrs. Jones, "if you're not man enough to protect your family, thank God! I've got a brother," and she swept from the room with a look that Jones only knew too well. He had seen that same look on his wife's face once before, when he brought a friend home to dinner on washing day, and he knew it meant war. There was no help for it; it flashed upon Jones with the swiftness of lightning; there would be no peace in the Jones family until the insult of the morning had been wiped out with blood. That night the boys were all sitting in a neighboring beer saloon, and the genial proprietor was telling them what he would do if he got the nomination for Alderman. This gentleman, whom we will call Mike, because that was not his name, was an ex-prize fighter, could barely write his own name, and was, in many other respects, especially qualified for an Alderman. He kept good beer, and offered it with that lavish liberality and recklessness of expenditure for which Vicksburg candidates are famous. Jones came in, took his pro rata of beer, and sat himself down to meditate upon the Brown affair. At last a happy idea seemed to strike him; he called for another "shoo-fly," and slapped his knees in gleeful anticipation. At last he said to Mike, with a careless air, "Mike, is Bill Brown one of your supporters?"

"You can just bet your muckeymuck on that," said Mike; "there's a boy I do stand solid with."

"That's strange," said Jones.

"What's strange?" said Mike, with that uneasy, suspicious air so common among candidates.

"Oh, nothing," said Jones, mysteriously; "I don't think I ought to tell."

"Jones," said Mike, solemnly, "if you're a friend of mine, you'll tell."

"Well, I will," said Jones, "but you must keept it confidential."

"All right; go ahead," said Mike anxiously.

"Well," said Jones, "I just came from the Centennial bar-room, and heard Brown say that you didn't know your head from a shot-gun; that he caught you one day reading a newspaper upside down; that he'd sooner vote for the lowest-down nigger in the ward than vote for you, and that if you were elected city scrip'd go down to five cents on the dollar, and taxes go up so high you couldn't reach them with a balloon."

Mike put on his hat and coat and made a bee line for the Centennial bar-room. Jones went home, and sat down on the front gallery, smoking his cigar with that peace of mind which only one can know whose bosom is distended with the proud consciousness of having done a good action. About half an hour afterward he said to his wife, who was sitting inside:

"Mrs. Jones, I don't think Bill Brown will hit our boy any more."

"Why?"

"Come and see."

Mrs. Jones stepped to the window, and looked out. They were bringing Brown home on a shutter, with both of his eyes bunged up and his nose dripping with blood at every pore. Mrs. Jones turned to her husband, and said:

"Darling, can you forgive me?"

Jones drew himself up haughtily, and replied, with withering sarcasm: "Mrs. Jones, I don't think I am able to protect this family; you'd better send for your brother."

Mrs. Jones was crushed.—Vicksburg Herald.

—An economical Western editor refuses to go to the musical part of the Centennial Exhibition because he has a Thomas concert in his back yard every night.

—"Be them antiquities old?" asked a sharp-nosed dame when looking at the papyrus and other ancient things in the Egyptian department of the Centennial Exhibition.

—It is perhaps needless to remark that the song of the dying swan is mythological. Upon the approach of death the bird quits the water, sits down upon the banks, lays its head upon the ground, expands its wings a trifle, and expires, uttering no sound.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT,

Rutherford B. Hayes,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

William A. Wheeler,

OF NEW YORK.

The Legislature.

The House met Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, passed four unimportant bills, and adjourned after a fifteen minutes' session.

On Tuesday, at noon, the House proceeded to the election of U. S. Senator, the vote being as follows:

Daniel Morey 1, Gilman Marston 1, Jabob Benton 1, Aaron F. Stevens 2, John G. Sinclair 170, Edward H. Rollins 200, and the name of Hon. Edward H. Rollins was ordered to be placed upon the records as having received a majority of all the votes cast.

The vote in the Senate stood, E. H. Rollins 8, John G. Sinclair 2. One Senator was absent.

A Queer Congress.

A "Centennial Congress of Liberals" is to be held at Philadelphia on the first four days of July, for the purpose of forming a National Liberal League throughout the country. The practical objects aimed at by the league are, taxation of churches and other ecclesiastical property; the abolition of chaplains in Congress, State legislatures, the army, navy and militia, and all institutions supported by public money; a cessation of all public appropriations for institutions of a sectarian character; the abolition of all religious services sustained by the Government, and especially of the use of the Bible in the public schools; the abandonment of the practice by the executive officers of the nation and States of opening religious festivals and fasts; the abolition of judicial oaths in the courts and departments of government, and the substitution therefor of a simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury; the repeal of all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath; the abrogation of all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality, and the conformity of all laws to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights and impartial liberty; and the adjustment of State and National constitutions and administration of law on a secular basis, so that no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion. The attainment of these objects, it is claimed, is necessary for the "absolute secularization of the State." The scheme is a pretty big one. Among the well known men who have expressed their sympathy for the purposes of the congress, and contributed toward its expenses, are Rev. O. B. Frothingham, of New York, Colonel T. W. Higginson, James Parton, Hon. George W. Julian, of Indiana, and others.

Political.

Mr. Blaine made what we might call a Henry Clay canvass. We cannot but admire the gallantry and the resolution of his friends. Never was a leader so bravely supported. There was something like chivalry in the way his friends nailed his colors to the mast and went down with them floating in the breeze. What is to us the attractiveness of Mr. Blaine's canvass was really its weakness. It was a series of cavalry charges.—N. Y. Herald.

The advocates of the Tilden and Hendricks combination claim that the Cincinnati nominations make their ticket an absolute necessity. They argue that it will be impossible to defeat Hayes in Ohio, and the only hope of success lies in carrying Indiana in October and New York in November. With Hendricks for Vice President, they say Indiana would be secured, and the effect of the republicans carrying Ohio would thus be balanced. With Tilden for President they claim that they could carry New York in November, and thus win the battle.—N. Y. Tribune.

News and Notes.

One good effect of these so called "hard times" is to lead the American people to do their pleasure-seeking at home instead of rushing off to Europe to spend their money. The Atlantic steamship lines are sensibly affected, only one or two running regularly, and the Inman line, which formerly had a dozen vessels in commission, has now only three. The Cunard line, which in former years has always run two steamers during the summer, has only one sailing per week now, and other lines are running at long intervals.

Hassan, the assassin of the Turkish cabinet ministers, was hanged at Constantinople on Saturday.

George Dickinson, of Swanzey, an erratic person, discharged his revolver at a dog that had growled at him on the sidewalk in Keene, Sunday, the ball grazing the foot of Brigham Cass. Dickinson being such a poor shot was lodged in jail.

A storehouse belonging to the Monadnock Mills at Claremont, was burned Sunday morning. Spontaneous combustion is the supposed cause. Loss light; fully insured.

By the explosion of a tug-boat at a pier in New York, on Tuesday, six men were killed and the tug and a canal boat destroyed.

Another defeat of the Spanish forces by the Cubans is reported, the Spaniards having two hundred men killed and losing their field pieces and six hundred Remington rifles.

By a dynamite explosion in Glasgow, Scotland, on Monday, six men were killed and several houses wrecked. On the same day, in Cardiff, Wales, ship Atalanta, loaded with coal, was blown up by an explosion of coal gas, and six men were killed and others injured. The ship was badly damaged.

David Reed, his wife and two sons were drowned while attempting to cross a mountain stream near Huntington, Penn., on Sunday.

There has been a defalcation of $25,000 or more in the Methodist Book Concern, a clerk having used the money in Wall street speculations.

One woman was burned to death and several other persons badly injured, during the burning of St. Johns, P. Q., on Sunday.

Charles Brent, the Louisville forger, recently under arrest in England awaiting extradition, was released on Monday.

A firm of grain dealers in Cardiff, Wales, failed on Monday with liabilities of half a million dollars or more.

An elopement of a novel nature happened in Northwood recently. The parties were one Charles Witham, a young man of 18 summers, and the wife of George W. Kelley, a woman of 40 years and upward, the mother of thirteen children, twelve of them living, the youngest being eight months old.

A new method of decorating buildings has been lately discovered by M. Collinot, the French manufacturer of earthenware. Instead of applying a decorated faience to the wall, he purposes enamelling the stone itself, by putting up a light scaffolding and using the blow-pipe instead of the oven. The advantages of this scheme are cheapness and durability. Experiment has proved that the process is less expensive than separate plates, and the decoration is calculated to last as long as the stone itself.

Rose Eytinge, the well known actress, attempted to commit suicide at Milwaukee not long since, by taking laudanum enough to have killed a dozen ordinary women. Her life was saved by a stomach pump, and several hours' work by a number of doctors. Domestic unhappiness is supposed to have caused the act. She is the wife of Mr. George H. Butler, Gen. B. F. Butler's nephew, who became notorious some years ago for his conduct while U. S. Consul in Egypt.

At Truckie, Cal., Sunday night, a number of men, supposed to belong to the "Caucasian League," set fire to a Chinese cabin, occupied by three Chinamen. As the Chinamen ran out they were fired upon by the mob, and one instantly killed and another seriously wounded. About forty shots were fired.

Correspondence.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 16.

The New England log house, "all of the olden time," is a veritable curiosity. Miss I. D. Southwick of Boston is the originator of the idea and the designer and manager of the house. It is built of logs, the cracks chinked with mud. It contains two low-ceiled, square rooms, which look old and are filled with old furniture and revolutionary relics. The great, open fire-place covers nearly one end of one of the rooms. The doors and windows are low and narrow. Strings of dried apples, peppers and corn depend from the ceiling. The old-fashioned crane hangs in the fire-place, and old cooking utensils sit on the hearth. General Stark's spurs, John Allen's desk and the cradle in which Peregrine White (born on the Mayflower in 1620) was rocked, the silver pitcher used by Lafayette while in Boston, Captain Nathan Bennett's sword, worn at the Concord fight, Governor Endicott's folding chair, a chest of drawers two hundred and a clock four hundred years old, are all displayed here, with many other relics too numerous to mention. Miss Southwick has fifteen young ladies to assist her. They are all dressed in gingham dresses made after the fashions of a hundred years ago. Some of them sit in high-backed chairs with big rockers, and knit and sew, while others spin and weave; a good meal of beans, brown bread and old-fashioned pudding is served in the old style, and the place is continuously crowded.

The Arkansas building is opened to-day with its wondrous display of the agricultural products of that little known and underrated State. The cabinet of minerals attracts great attention by the variety and richness of its ores and the uniqueness of the cabinet itself, which was made in Little Rock and contains thirty-five varieties of native wood. The fountain in the centre cools the whole building and the handsomely furnished ladies' parlor, with its grand piano, will be a place of general resort for the lady visitors.

In the Egyptian exhibit is shown a statue of Rameses the Second, made 1350 years before Christ. It gives us some idea of sculpture as it was before Joseph was sold by his brethren into Egypt, and marks the contrast between the civilization and culture of that time and the present.

Dom Pedro need not be ashamed of the display made by his country. In the main building, the pavilion is built in the Moresque style. Its greatest height is forty feet. The sides are composed of clusters of pillars and columns and the facade is ornamented with richly designed glass tiles. The whole structure is made brilliant with high colors. The show cases are of plate glass, ornamented with gold and lined with maroon colored cloth. Near the entrance is a case filled with artificial flowers made from the feathers of the brilliant plumaged birds of the Brazilian forests. Coffee, the great staple of the country, is shown in all its forms. Cocoa, rice, mandioc, ginger, yams, sarsaparilla and many varieties of tropical fruits are displayed in abundance. Useful and ornamental woods, including the castor tree, rose-wood, Brazil-wood, caoutchouc, cedar, logwood and mahogany, are also shown. A large number of National curiosities and articles illustrating the habits of the people are displayed. Brazil has besides the main pavilion, very creditable exhibits both in Agricultural and Machinery Halls.

Near the pavilion of Brazil is that of the Netherlands. It is surmounted by a gracefully-arched frame-work and is hung with curtains of maroon velvet. The department of public works contains many valuable diagrams and suggestive models. There is a collection of carpets from Delft, that attracts all who pass that way. These are made in imitation of Smyrna carpets, but are superior in every way. That portion of the pavilion devoted to the Dutch colonies contains grains, barks, native woods, fruits, metals in abundance, and oils, all produced in the colonies. Barbarin arms, filagree work, shining silks and beautiful embroideries made by the savages of the colonies attract much attention. The model farm establishment in miniature would not be accepted by our grangers, as the home and farm for them. The sub-tropical plants and trees of the United States, in Horticultural Hall, are wonders of Nature to those of our people who have never visited the southern portion of the country. Everything is working more smoothly. MACK.

Deserves a Medal.

He was a very small boy, all in tatters, and his clothes were dripping. In his arms he held a miserable little dog, and both boy and dog were shivering in the cold January weather. This is about what he told me: "You see, Mister, Bill Bostwick and me was a playing by the river, betting cents on the chunks of ice, a seeing which one would go first over the dam, when this 'ere little dog came trotting past. Says Bill to me—says he, 'Let's have this 'ere dog for a passenger.' So we took him and put him on a real big hunk of ice, and Bill, who is an everlasting mean kind of a boy, was for shoving him off into the water just so, but I wouldn't. I had a bit of twine in my pocket, and I hitched it to a jagged bit of the ice, so as it couldn't get off. Oh, we had lots of fun at first with that 'ere pup as a passenger. But Bill is an awful ornary boy, Mister, so when it was his turn to play two-horse with the chunk of ice and the dog for a passenger, he just let the cord slip on purpose, so he did. Then I pitched into that ere Bill Bostwick and guv him fits. But you see there was the ice, and the pup as was passenger, sliding down the river like thunder. I felt sure the passenger was going to be drowned; as I happened to know that pup's mother I felt kind of sorry, so I went again for Bill Bostwick, and went for him good. Just then the cake of ice, with the poor pup a yelping and keiyeiing on it, was just over the dam. I dursn't look, Mister. That ere night, though I must have slept good, that pup's howling I kind of dreamed about. Well, arter breakfast, I ventured to look out on the river, and there was the pup still a yelping, just like Moses in the bullrushes. The ice had kind of sot during last night, as it was cold, but wasn't real hard. I just skinned across that dam on the logs—sakes! but it was slippery, and I tumbled in over my head twice, and was just able to get that pup off, as was passenger, by the scruff of his neck. Now, Mister, I am going to keep that ere dog until he is grown up, and just as sure as ever Bill Bostwick whistles to him, I am going to teach him to bite Bill, and if he is too small to do it, I ain't too little to lick two boys like Bill. I say, Mister, if you know of a society as gives medals to boys as saves dogs' lives, send 'em to me, as my name is George Washington Ostergood, of Perry, Iowa." If there should exist, we thought, such a thing as a society awarding medals to heroic urchins for saving an animal's life, we feel certain poor, ragged George would have been entitled to one of them.—Perry (Iowa,) Chronicle.

—Fringes are very fashionable now. A handsome dark fringe over a beautiful bright eye is about the correct thing for a lady to wear.—Whitehall Times.

—A Chicago paper says: "Mr. Blaine was stricken down at the door of a church. Yet religious papers will keep right on encouraging the dangerous practice of going to church."

—A young man at the Southend discovered a brass collar-button in a piece of mince-pie he was masticating the other day. He is looking for a new boarding-place. He says he wants the comforts of a home—not the excitement and confusion of a dollar store.

"Give Me to Drink."

Permit me, Messrs. Editors, to second, with my whole heart, C. W. G.'s motion. It is really a shame that a city of our size, with such an abundance of the best water in the world, should not have a single one of those most desirable articles, Drinking Fountains. They are imperatively needed both for men and animals. Horses and oxen, indeed, can use the water from the unornamental pumps, which are far better than nothing; but no means are provided for either dogs or men to quench their thirst; —and the water is not such as the latter, at least, crave.

If the city cannot or will not do the whole, will not the Reform Club, and the S. P. C. A., take hold and help, in behalf of their respective proteges? I know that the latter society seriously agitated the subject at one time, but then there was a scarcity of water, and the matter was dropped. Now that there is "water, water everywhere," don't let us be any longer "without a drop to drink." But, as C. W. G. says, what is done must be done now—at once.

A THIRSTY SOUL.

Burglaries in Greenland.

On Tuesday morning, when Mr. J. E. Holmes, who keeps a general store and the post-office in Greenland, near the parade, entered his place of business, he was at once convinced there was a screw loose somewhere. The floor was strewn with half-burned matches, and the goods in the store showed a general and not very careful rummaging, while a lot of eggs which he had in stock the day before had been thrown about the place and smashed among the shelf goods and paint pots, etc., and against the walls. The marauders had effected an entrance through a cellar window, overhauled things to their hearts' content, stolen some fifty or sixty dollars' worth of property in money, cigars, tobacco, clothing, etc., unbarred a side door and left. From the store it appears they went across the street and sucked a lot of eggs taken from the store, the empty shells being found on the sidewalk in the morning. In the store, at the time the thieves entered, was a little terrier dog; and in a bed-room partitioned off from the rear of the store a young man was asleep. The dog was found dead by Mr. Holmes, his collar having been twisted so tightly as to choke him to death; and the young man was sleeping soundly and very peacefully, with every chamber of his revolver loaded and the door of his room bespattered with broken eggs, he not having been in the least disturbed by the performances just outside his room.

This is the ninth time within twelve years that Mr. Holmes has been favored with the patronage of fellows who come at midnight to buy goods when the proprietor isn't 'round, and in only two cases have the thieves been detected and punished. In one instance the culprit got off pretty easily on account of his extreme youth, but some two years ago a fellow was sent to State Prison for opening the store before business hours. Since the last mentioned rascal's raid an armed watchman has slept in the store every night,—and unfortunately he slept there all Monday night, too.

On the same night the cellar of Mr. Wm. H. Brackett's house, opposite Mr. Holmes' store, was entered, probably by the same parties, and corned beef, pork and canned blueberries stolen. Mr. Brackett was asleep just over where the thieves entered, but was not disturbed by them.

A Righteous Judge.

We have already commented upon the difficulty experienced by the police in securing the conviction of any of the North End roughs who may commit offences against the peace, owing to the sympathy with the rowdies of the major part of the population of that locality, and the fear to testify against them of the few who would willingly do so if they dared. A case in point occurred last week, on the trial of one Couhig for a brutal assault on a man named Mullen, one of the crew of a Bangor schooner. It seems Couhig was first brought up on the Monday previous, the case being continued to Friday to await the result of Mullen's injuries; the judge at first fixing bail at $100, but promptly raising it a hundred when the injured man was brought into court by the City Marshal. On Friday Couhig was again arraigned, and produced a swarm of witnesses, all of whom swore point blank that they saw Mullen assault and beat Couhig, but not one of whom saw Couhig or any one else do any damage to Mullen. One or two witnesses who were much wanted by the police, as the latter believed they had power to force them to tell the truth whether they were willing or not, could not be found—it was reported they had left the State. Having listened to the evidence the judge kindly intimated to the crowd of witnesses that he was satisfied they had all deliberately committed perjury; that it was impossible they could all have seen one part of a fight and not one of them have seen the rest of it, and that their nice story was flatly contradicted by the appearance of the two principals in the affair when he (the judge) saw them on the Monday previous, when Couhig did not show a mark while Mullen's head and face presented a horrible appearance, looking as though he had been stamped upon by a crowd,—as we think he probably had been. He then imposed on Couhig a sentence of thirty days in jail and to pay the costs of prosecution. An appeal was taken; and bail, fixed at $500, was offered for Couhig's appearance at the Circuit Court, by two somewhat prominent democratic politicians, one of them an alderman; but the bail offered was rejected by the magistrate, and the prisoner's friends had to hunt for other sureties. Acceptable bail was produced at a later hour, and Couhig was released.

Military Visit.

The Sixteenth Regiment Association, Massachusetts Volunteers, numbering eighty or more, visited this city on Tuesday as the guests of Capt. Frank W. Hilton, landlord of the Rockingham House, who is a member of the Association. They were received at the depot by the Heavy Artillery, Capt. Williams, and escorted to the hotel, the Marine Band making the music. The Rockingham was decorated for the occasion by Mr. Thomas S. Gay, and presented a very handsome appearance, a profusion of flags, streamers and bright colored bunting being very tastefully and effectively arranged. After a brief halt at the Rockingham the visitors were escorted to the steamer "Major," on which they embarked, with the band, for a trip to the Shoals, from which they returned at 3 o'clock P. M. and again marched to the Rockingham House, where a sumptuous dinner had been provided by the host. Full justice was done the feast, and after the usual post-prandial exercises the Association reformed, and under escort of the Heavy Artillery proceeded to the depot and at about 5 o'clock started on a special train for Boston.

After escorting the visitors to the depot the Artillery had a dress parade on Market Square, omitting going through the manual of arms on account of a shower. The company turned out with fifty or more muskets, and the excellent marching and proficiency in drill of the men showed that they mean to retain the good name they have deservedly won.

Kittery.

Eds. Chronicle: It is evident that this neighborhood is infested by an organized gang of tramp thieves. On the night of Tuesday, June 13, the house of Sergeant Durling, on Rice's hill, was entered by an open window and the bottom of a castor cut off, the thief having apparently been then frightened away without finishing his intended job. Early on Friday morning the clerk at Ireland's store saw two hard looking tramps pass through the village, one of whom was seen later in the day hanging around Bartlett's store, which was robbed that night. On Friday evening three or four men got off a freight train at Kittery depot, and were seen to meet the two who had been around all day, in Rice's hollow, and together proceed towards the village. At about 10 o'clock the party were seen near the spot from which Mr. Remick's boat was stolen. On Saturday night Remick's boat was left near the "Wentworth," in Newcastle, and one of the hotel boats stolen. On Sunday, John Parsons and Capt. Staples saw two men answering the description of two of the tramps, in the Wentworth house boat, in a cove half a mile westerly of Bald Head Cliff, on the York coast; went alongside, and were told by the men that they were from Newburyport and bound to Cape Porpoise. They were afterward seen at anchor off Ogunquit.

It is evident part of the gang are still hanging about here. On Sunday night an attempt was made to break into Shannon's stable, by a man who was frightened away by a boy in the next house, and ran toward the water. On the same night a man while attempting to force open a window in a house was frightened away by a woman inside, who lighted a match, upon which the fellow ran away; and on the same night, as I am informed, an attempt to break into the Wentworth at Newcastle was frustrated by Dr. Jewett's firing upon the would-be burglars. People living away from the immediate vicinity of a night watch would do well to load their shot guns and revolvers, as a matter of precaution. C.

Jottings.

"The Circus" comes to-day, and gives two performances—one in the afternoon and one in the evening. Murray's circus has always given good shows here in the past, and our exchanges speaks of the establishment now as being better than ever before. See advertisement.

The game of base ball between the Granite State club of this city and the Athletic club of Kittery, at the Plains on Tuesday afternoon, was won by the latter by a score of 34 to 21.

At half-past eight o'clock, Tuesday evening, the fire department was called out to extinguish a fire in the attic of the house of Mr. A. F. Craig, corner of Union and Middle streets. The fire did less damage than the water which was put on to extinguish it.

Mr. M. Mooney, mate of schooner Senator Grimes, fell overboard near the Shoals on Saturday, and was drowned. He belonged in Eastport, Me., and leaves a wife and three children.

On the 25th of April, 1874, the schooner "Patriot," of Newcastle, Capt. Robert F White, while riding out a heavy gale on "the Banks," out of sight of land, lost an anchor and cable. On the 25th of April, 1876, exactly two years afterward to a day, the schooner "Willie Seavey," in command of the same Capt. White, while getting under weigh after a severe gale, hove up the lost anchor and cable marked with the "Patriot's" name. The coincidence is remarkable, as it was Capt. White's intention, each year, to anchor in the same place.

Governor Ames.

A New York correspondent indulges in a little sneer at Governor Ames, of Mississippi, "who resigned to avoid impeachment." The history of that resignation has lately come to our knowledge. General Pryor was one of Ames' council. On his way down to Jackson he stopped at Washington, and was there informed that no matter what the evidence that was brought up, the Confederate Senate of Mississippi was going to convict. When he arrived in Jackson he was informed by members of that Senate, who had been under his command in the rebel army, that the report he had heard in Washington was true. They were bound to convict any way. Moreover, it had been decided that the entire expense of the trial should be borne by Ames, although similar expenses, when Governor Davis was on trial, had been met by the State. It was estimated that the trial would cost Ames not less than $30,000. Under these circumstances Pryor advised Ames to plead guilty, and this advice was followed. He acknowledged himself guilty of what? At the very worst, taking his adversaries' account of the case, the merest and most technical irregularities. There wasn't a charge made against him that would not have been hooted out of any Northern legislative body. The most heinous offence that was alleged against him was the appointment of a man to the office of County Judge whose residence was in a county other than that for which he was appointed. The impeachment details were so monstrously weak as to be ridiculous. They were laughed at from one end of the country to the other.

Governor Ames was an excellent Governor. He was scrupulously honest. The finances of the State are in a sound and healthy condition. The debt is merely nominal. The Governor was advised by the best men in the party, men whose honesty, whose integrity, and whose high character could not, and have not been, impugned. He made an excellent Governor in every way. He was sacrificed to the cursed spirit of rebel spite which denies all rights to a man because he professes republican principles.—Cincinnati Times.

—It isn't work that kills a man; it's the dodging around trying to get away from the woman who gives the orders.—Brooklyn Argus.

—A celebrated gourmand once said: "To enjoy a stuffed turkey thoroughly there should be only two present—yourself and the turkey."

—"A great deal of good is often done in this world by people who don't know that they are doing it," was the remark of an agriculturist as he observed a Western statesman leaning against his fence and carelessly squirting tobacco juice over his tomato plants.

Encouraging Symptons.

The cheering glow diffused throughout the system by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the elasticity of mind and body which they impart, and the disappearance which they cause of those vague, uneasy feelings so difficult to describe, are most encouraging symptoms to the despoiling invalid. The sensation of returning health is a most delightful one, and to enjoy it, those afflicted with dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, intermittent or remittent fevers, lack of vitality, sleeplessness, rheumatic, nervous and urinary troubles, should avail themselves without delay of this invaluable tonic and corrective. Besides being specifically adapted to the eradication of these maladies, it is wondrously effective in all diseases involving a diminution of vital power on account of its properties as a general invigorant.

Leave It to the Jury.

In five States the law of hanging has now been abolished. These are, with the dates of the abolition, as follows: Michigan, 1846; Rhode Island, 1852; Wisconsin, 1853; Iowa, 1872; Maine, 1876. In Indiana, Illinois and Minnesota, there is an "option jury law"—a law which permits the jury, after convicting the accused, to elect whether he shall be hung or imprisoned—imprisoned for life, in Indiana or Minnesota, but in Illinois the jury is allowed to decide that it shall be for life, or for any shorter period, down to fourteen years—and it strikes us as the very best mode of administering justice. There are cases which require very quick hanging, and others where guilt is mixed with extenuating circumstances, and why not let the jury determine the punishment.

Many of the papers in Maine seem to think that the State has done a wrong thing in the abolishing of capital punishment, and upon this the Belfast Journal says that three murders had occurred in Maine this year since the enactment of the law repealing capital punishment, being at the rate of one a month. Since that time there have been two attempts at murder—one at Farmington and one at Bangor. In the latter case a young man, Ansel Hall, sent a bullet through the leg of George F. Russell. Afterward Hall remarked, according to a dispatch giving the particulars, that "he could afford to lie in jail for the privilege of shooting Russell." That tells the story about the efficacy of law in protecting human life. No person contemplating murder will hold that he can afford to be hung for the gratification of his revenge. But he can and will afford to undergo imprisonment, with the chances of escape and pardon.—Patriot.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. DR. QUAIN'S

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.

Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 9th, and wrote you February 23d of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty; but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.

Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of aches and pains caused from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.

JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head; or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been as free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yes, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.

Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, 75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for near twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I swear I do not know how many physicians, and could only get partly relieved. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or ten winters, and have been raving and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the worst and most stubborn that they had had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and that was the last hope given him here me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mathis, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. Some may think he seems to be that if your pills will cure me, they will cure anybody. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.

Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those Pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of those Pills.

MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croupe, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

— USE —

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10, of the Revised Ordinances, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in our city to aid them in the execution of their duty:

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or th ow them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contes. of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

SEC. 6 No vendor of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet, or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

SEC. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

SEC. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the Health Officers.

SEC. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect, forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the Health Officers in the name of the city.

SEC. 15. The Health Officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein: and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said Health Officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel, or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue, or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove, or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

A Republican Success Necessary to Protect the Public Credit.

A short time since, when the chiefs of the democratic party were laying out their plans for the coming Presidential campaign, one of the most influential of our democratic contemporaries in the West advised them to attack the republican party on its record as the best means of securing democratic success. No republican can have the slightest objection to such a course. It is an appeal "to the law and to the testimony;" and such an appeal is always to be welcomed, because the record of the republican party has passed into history, and the most plausible doubts will be resolved into the most brilliant certainty in the light of facts which can be produced on all points wherein the country has been served with honesty or protected from injury which the partisan spirit of the democracy deliberately sought to inflict upon it.

Take for instance the injury inflicted upon the national credit at home and abroad by the democratic party. The democratic party is responsible as an accessory both before and after the rebellion of the South. Democratic leaders were in communication with the disloyal leaders of the South, and knew how treason was spreading and what preparations were made for the outbreak of the war. The democratic party were in power up to the year 1860. In view of what the democratic party knew as about to take place in the South it would admit to the public services but two classes of men, viz: Southerners who were prepared to destroy the Union to preserve slavery, or Northern men with Southern proclivities. These men were sent abroad as ministers and consuls; and the consequence was that in every court of continental Europe, in England, and the other courts of the world, the utterances of the public servants of the United States, paid by the people, were impudently disloyal. These public servants, professing to worship slavery, gravely announced to foreign statesmen that the Union would be destroyed by violence if the intelligent freemen of the North did not cease to interfere with the South and its peculiar institution. So earnest had been the communications of some of the ambassadors, and so boastful had they been of the high and Christian character of Southerners, "born to command," as they said, but failing to say "the plantation slaves, ignorant as cattle though in the form of men and women," that statesmen were perplexed, and had to wait the arrival of republican successors before they could understand events.

The effect of the labors of disloyal ambassadors and other emissaries was to misrepresent the resources of the South by ridiculous boasting, and to undervalue the resources of the North; the combined effect of which was to discredit the national securities and alarm the holders abroad. The same course was pursued at home; and the Government had to raise money on the best terms it could, but often at a less amount than the face value of the bond, and at a high rate of interest. This early and great loss to the people is distinctly traceable to the disloyal utterances of the democratic party at an important crisis in the country's history.

At last the country put aside the democratic party as utterly untrustworthy, and the republican party assumed the control of every national interest. Its first duty was to save the Union. To do this on the battlefield, on the men-of-war, and in the council of State was the natural instinct of republicans. The grand armies of the republic were recruited under the command of soldiers who loved the Union, and were willing, men and officers, to shed their blood for its preservation. While the war was being fought republican statesmen were preparing the ways and means for raising money. The public mind had to be disabused of the evil seed the democratic party had sown in it. Patriots, in whom the people trusted, had to come forward and pledge the faith of the Nation that the pledges of the republican party should be kept. These pledges were enacted into law; and as the Nation's honor was in the keeping of a republican Congress the faith reposed in the republican party at home extended to capitalists abroad, and the bonds of the United States were lifted from the cloud which oppressed them, and they rose to par and then to a premium; and they are at a premium today. But the democratic party have never had patriotism enough to greet the recovery of our bonds with favor. Leading democrats have always shown a desire to break faith with the Nation and the Nation's creditors whenever the finances have been the the subject of debate in Congress. And those debates seem always to have been aimed to affect disastrously our credit abroad. But the wisdom and sincerity of the Government were too apparent to cause any permanent derangement, and the bondholder has come to look upon the republican party as his greatest safeguard.

Persons who hold American securities abroad are by no means ignorant of the republican party. They know, too, the record of the democratic party and will not put any trust in it. They say that a political party like the democratic party, that would permit the Southern slave owners to destroy the Union, is worthy of no confidence whatever.—Republic.

Daily Chronicle.

THURSDAY, JUNE 22, 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT,

Rutherford B. Hayes,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

William A. Wheeler,

OF NEW YORK.

News and Notes.

The depot of the Athens and Schenectady Railroad, on the river opposite Hudson, N. Y., was burned Sunday night. A steam propeller, two canal boats and one hundred loaded freight cars were destroyed, involving a loss of about $400,000.

A bottle was picked up twenty miles from Sambro Head, near Halifax, containing a piece of paper on which was indistinctly written, "Ship Rosamond, sailed from Liverpool May 1st, 1876. The vessel is going to the bottom with all hands."

Treasurer New and Solicitor Bluford Wilson have resigned.

Senator Morrill, of Maine, has been appointed Secretary of the Treasury.

Charles Hunt, youngest son of Oliver Hunt of Danville, was drowned on the 20th in Symonds pond in that town while bathing. He was seventeen years of age.

The Fourth of July will be celebrated in Keene by a historical sketch of the town by Rev. W. O. White, reading of the Declaration of Independence, etc.

Margaret Dougherty of Manchester, ruptured a blood vessel in the leg on the night of the 16th, and died in fifteen minutes. She had been at work in the mill during the day.

The United States District Court assembled at Exeter, on the 20th, Judge Daniel Clark presiding. No jury was present and the business was confined to the reading of the docket and a suit in equity, all occupying but a few hours.

Some of the girls of the Manchester High School graduating class have decided not to wear eight-cent prints for graduating dresses, but will substitute cambric at twenty-nine and a half cents advance.

The Great Falls Manufacturing Company will reduce wages and salaries July 3, in order to prevent the shutting down of the mills.

The City Government of Manchester has appropriated $2000 for the Fourth of July celebration, and appointed a committee of five to superintend the expenditure of the money.

The Exeter Manufacturing Company went into bankruptcy on the 20th. This has been contemplated for months. Several attachments were on the mills, but all are dissolved by this movement, which would have been impossible if delayed another day. The liabilities of the company are about $225,000. Under ordinary circumstances the property would bring twice the amount; what it will now bring is problematical. The mill has not been operated for over three months.

"Uncle" Benjamin Colby, a sergeant in the 1812 war, died at Dover on the 21st, at the advanced age of eighty-two. He was almost the last survivor of the war in that vicinity, and was well and honorably known. He leaves a sister.

President Grant has sent a message to Congress in which he takes firm ground against the assumptions of the British government on the extradition question; says the position taken by that government can but be regarded as the abrogation of the extradition treaty, and that no more criminals will be asked for or given up to England, without the expressed wish of Congress.

Manchester has for some time past been disturbed by numerous indecent assaults and attempted outrages upon women. Not many weeks ago a young girl named Etta Lord was ravished by a gang of roughs; and on Friday afternoon, the 16th, two young women named Margaret and Lizzie Driscoll were outraged in a field near the city, by a gang of eight or ten young villains. Four of the latter, all Irish, have been arrested and positively identified by the women.

Leander W. Cogswell of Henniker, John G. Kimball of Nashua, and Amos J. Blake of Ware have been appointed Bank Commissioners, by the Governor and Council.

William G. Sawyer, of Utica, N. Y., a student of Phillips Academy, Exeter, died on the 20th from injuries received by being overturned in a carriage while riding with a young lady on the evening previous. The lady was unhurt.

The Senate Committee on Appropriations, in reporting the Naval Appropriation bill on the 20th, propose to increase various items from the amounts voted by the House as follows: For pay of officers and seamen and for coast survey service, from $5,750,000 to $7,200,000; for civil establishments of Navy Yards, from $85,000 to $100,000; for the equipment of vessels, coal, etc., and for labor in equipping vessels and the manufacture of articles in the Navy Yards, from $970,000 to $1,250,000; for the general maintenance of yards and docks, from $440,000 to $760,000; for expenditure by the Bureau of Steam Engineering, from $885,000 to $1,500,000, and for expenditures by the Bureau of Construction and Repair, from $1,500,000 to $2,500,000. The Committee entirely strike out the House proviso that $200,000 of the above sum shall be used in the employment of labor to place live oak timber in wet docks, and that labor for this purpose shall be employed during the months of July, August and September, and shall be discharged before the 1st of October, and that during October and November not more than fifty persons shall be borne on the lists as laborers at any Navy Yard. The Committee retain the House provision in regard to the Marine Corps, with the exception that they modify it by allowing promotions to be made during the proposed reduction by natural causes, and provide that hereafter all appointments of Second Lieutenants in the Corps shall be made from graduates of the Naval School. The provision that the Naval Hospitals at Annapolis and Washington shall be closed during the coming year is amended so as to allow the latter to be continued until a report is made by the Secretary of the Navy as to the best method of selling both properties.

Political.

Even the New York Sun says: "The republican candidate for President will receive every republican vote in November, and he also stands a chance of getting a good many votes from among those who do not wear the livery of any party. It is a very strong nomination."

Thurlow Weed predicts that even against Tilden, New York will go for Hayes by from 30,000 to 50,000 majority. We have no doubt of it. The strength of the democratic party in New York is not in Tilden, but in Cardinal McClosky, and as that will be seen before November there will be an issue in the Empire State that has not been taken into calculations.—Newburyport Herald.

In the case of the people of the State of New York against W. C. Stevens, Thomas Gale and others, Justice Westbrook rendered a decision granting the non-suit asked for upon two grounds—first, the action is barred by a former judgment of the Supreme Court, rendered in an action in which the same plaintiffs were parties; and officers of the State and the legislature thereof, having with full knowledge of the alleged unlawful combination by which the price fixed in the contract was secured, ordered, and required the performance thereof, the State is in no situation to receive damage by acts which itself, through its offiers and legislation, directed and required. The New York Express says, relative to the foregoing: "That the canal frauds were committed there is no doubt, but the blame lies not with the Canal Board as Gov. Tilden's commission assumed, but with the legislature which granted extra compensation and changed the form of contract after the Canal Board had let the same. A large amount of such appropriations were made in the winter of 1872, when Gov. Tilden was a member of the Assembly and there is no record or tradition that he ever voted against such appropriation or made the faintest protest."

The New York Canal frauds, the detection of which has been regarded as a distinguished feather in Gov. Tilden's cap, are brought home to the permission of the legislature rather than of the Canal Board, and pending cases have been non-suited. The legislative action which rendered these frauds possible was taken when Gov. Tilden was a member of the legislature, and without his opposition, if not by his actual concurrence.

From the tone of the letters of the Washington correspondents of the democratic papers, it is evident Sham Tilden is to be thrown overboard at St. Louis. The impression is strong among the leading democrats that no other ticket than Hancock and Hendricks will give them a ghost of a chance to win in the contest with Hayes and Wheeler. The "reformer" must advertise his goods more largely.

Exposed at Last.

The perpetrator of a series of remarkable robberies committed in Roseville, a Pennsylvania village, some time ago, has just been unmasked in a peculiar manner. About a year ago a blacksmith named Monroe was surprised at midnight in his house by three masked men, who, by threats and torture, compelled him to hand over a $3,500 legacy which he had just received. No trace of the robbers could be found. Shortly afterward a neighboring house was broken into, the watchman bound, the safe blown open and $30,000 abstracted. In February last five men, masked, effected an entrance into the house of an old German miser, and by the most fiendish torture compelled him to deliver up to them $1000 All efforts to discover the bold burglars proved unavailing until recently, when a fashionably-dressed young woman arrived in town, and going to a Justice's office she gave her name as Lottie Sargent, and said that she desired to give him some information as to the robberies that had been committed in Roseville. She said that for three years she had been the mistress of Charles Webber, son of one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens of Roseville, and that it was he who had committed all the burglaries; and to substantiate her statements she produced three letters from Webber, dated at Roseville, in which he gave the details of the robberies to her. The Justice sent for Mr. Webber, senior. He came to the office, and when the affidavit of the woman was read to him he was thunderstruck, but despatched a messenger for his son. The latter answered the summons, but on seeing the woman in the office turned and tried to escape. On being confronted with her and her evidence he acknowledged the truth of her statements and was promptly arrested. The aggrieved father promptly refunded to the victims of the robberies all the money that had been stolen from them, and since then the son has succeeded in making his escape. The woman appears to have made the disclosure because of jealousy, Webber having cast her off for a woman named Grey. The exposure creates the most excitement because young Webber, who is but 25 years old, is a leading member of the church, and was considered a model young man in every respect.

An Early Bird.

An individual whose coat was buttoned closely to his chin, said chin being covered with a three day's beard, with a slight hectic flush on his bowsprit, and appearance of having been so preoccupied for a few days as to have forgotten to take off his clothes at night—an individual of his description was walking down one of the principal streets of Boston very early in the morning, when he suddenly came to a halt before a dwelling-house, in the window of which was displayed a large lithographic print. This picture portrayed a solemn man with a long beard. In the right hand was some sort of bottle, and, from the expression of the face of the picture, either the bottle smelt unpleasantly or the party had taken a drink from it which did not agree with his digestion.

To the pedestrian first described the picture was, however, at once symbolical and significant, and without hesitation he marched up the steps and into the house and almost over a servant, who inquired, "Want to see the doctor, sir?"

The seedy gentleman steadied himself by the stair rail, and answered:

"Yes! Doctor, Colonel, General, or whatever he calls himself; knew 'em all but forget their titles; is the ol' barkeep, I want," and plunged into the room where the original of the dark-bearded picture in the window, summoned by the frightened servant, presently found him examining with uncertain gaze a row of glass jars, bottles, etc., and was promptly saluted with: "On deck, ole fel'; th' ain't many th' boys round yet is there? Jess give 'bout eight inches whiskey straight."

The person thus hilariously saluted drew himself up in a dignified manner and replied: "We do not deal in whiskey here, sir; we administer oxygen."

"All right," said the unabashed caller; "less have some minister Knox's gin, then; I'm as dry as a dust hole'n ain't particular. Jine me, won't you?"

"Sir," said the interrogated one, 'this is a place where inhale—"

"Yes, I don't care where the devil it is either, so long as you hist a bottle over 'thout any more remarks."

"I tell you," yelled the other party, "this is not a bar-room. It is a doctor's office; we practice inhalation of medicated, super-carbonated oxygen!" and he flung open the door for the exit of the early and unwelcome caller, who muttered:

"What in thunder d' ye have a picture in the window of a fellow taking a drink for if you don't keep a bar-room?" and he meandered down the street in search of a more hospitable establishment.—Commercial Bulletin.

—One of the boys while reading Whittier's "Centennial Hymn" recently to a little circle in the back room of a certain house in the city, was interrupted with, "What! Old Whittaker writing hymns? Well, well! Why, I knew the old feller in '49 in 'Frisco,' and a harder, tougher, fightcuer cuss you never saw. S'posed he passed in his chips long ago. And he's alive, is he? and writing hymns? Well, well! If old Whit can get away with hymns, bust me if I don't commence writing missionary tracts." Then the old "'49er" gazed with astonishmeut upon the smiling features of those around him, and proposed "licking" anyone who doubted his knowing "Old Whit" in "Frisco" in '49.—Helena (Montana,) Herald.

—A base-ball player named Miller, formerly catcher of the St. Louis Club, died in Philadelphia recently. In his last moments he was delirious, and fancied he was at his place in the ball-field facing his old pitcher, Bradley. His last words were: "Two out, Brad—steady, now—he wants a high ball—steady, Brad—there, I knew it—that settles it."

The Exhibition.

One of the most agreeable and finished exhibitions ever given in this city was witnessed by the numerous patrons and friends of Miss Morgan at her Seminary for Young Ladies on Tuesday, the 20th inst. The new school room which the success of the institution has rendered necessary was thrown open for the occasion, and the guests were much pleased with the airy and commodious room—to the occupancy of which in the Autumn the pupils are looking forward with lively anticipations of happiness, for Miss Morgan has the rare gift of making her pupils happy at the same time they are gaining a thorough and finished education. The exercises consisted of exquisite playing upon the piano and violin, fine singing, very distinct and effective reading of selections from the works of distinguished authors, and recitations in German and French, given with perfect precision in pronunciation which the native teachers of each language employed by Miss Morgan have imparted. During the evening Harlow's Orchestra furnished their usual excellent quality of music, to which the pupils enjoyed their well earned diversion of dancing until the hour for separation too soon arrived.

The following was the programme: Music (duet,) Misses Lizzie and Rena Clement, Peabody, Mass.; salutatory, Miss Nellie Robinson, Portsmouth; readings; piano solo, Miss Fannie Peterson, Greenland; "Bon Bons" (English play;) piano solo, Miss Annie Winchester, Boston; essay, "Hawthorne," Miss Mattie Wentworth, Philadelphia; readings; song, Miss Annie Winchester; reading, trial scene from "Merchant of Venice;" music, violin with piano accompaniment, Miss Nora Bartlett, violinist, Miss Lucy Watson, accompanist, Portsmouth; essay, Miss Cora Hutchins, Concord; German readings; poem, original, Miss Mattie Wentworth; readings; song and duet, Misses Lizzie and Rena Clement; song, Miss Cora Hutchins; duet, Miss Mary Loring, Washington, D. C., and Miss Carrie Todd, Concord; concluding with a French play. †

A Pleasant Neighborhood.

YORK, June 19.

Messrs. Editors: Under the above heading some very appropriate remarks appeared in the GAZETTE of last week, regarding the North end of Market street. Several times recently I have had occasion to travel that street at a somewhat late hour, and think I will add my testimony that it is indeed "a pleasant neighborhood;" and for a man to leave the gas-light at Market Square, and grope his way through the utter darkness of that street, across railroads and over ledges on Noble's island, to the toll house, he ought to have the courage of a Daniel.

Isn't it a burning shame and disgrace to so pleasant and wealthy a city as Portsmouth to allow such a street to go unlighted?

It seems to me if the authorities could, or would, view this matter in the right light, they would no longer compel strangers to travel that thoroughfare when it is right dark. P.

Jottings.

Steamer Clara Bateman, Capt. Rand, arrived at this port on Wednesday, the 21st, from Great Bay, with oysters.

The following-named vessels, of Doane's fishing fleet, arrived on the 21st: schooner George L. Treadwell, Nickerson, with 360 bbls. mackerel; schooner Daniel Marcy, Cahoon, 450 bbls. mackerel; schooner Mayor Jones, Jeraulds, 250 bbls. mackerel; schooner Velocipede, Jamieson, 35,000 lbs. split cod.

During the shower on Wednesday afternoon a mare belonging to Mr. John S. Sides was killed by lightning in her pasture near the Trotting Park.

Owing to the fire interruption, and the drill of the cavalry company Tuesday evening, the meeting called to take final action on a Fourth of July celebration adjourned to this (Thursday) evening at 8 o'clock.

The reform clubs from Newburyport will visit this city to-night, and become the guests of the Portsmouth Reform Club. The Dover club has also been invited, but at this hour of writing has not accepted the invitation, and it is not known whether they will come or not. A mass temperance meeting will be held at the Temple, which will be conducted by the visiting brethren. At the close of the exercises at the Temple, the visitors will be escorted to Rechabite Hall to partake of a collation after which they will leave on special trains for home. The Kearsarge Drum Corps will furnish the music for the street and hall. Our good people need not be afraid to attend this meeting, as some of the best and most influential citizens of both Newburyport and Dover are active in the temperance cause and will be present on this occasion.

Rockingham Conference.

The Rockingham Conference of Congregational and Presbyterian churches met on June 13th and 14th, at Atkinson. This is a pleasant old town settled one hundred and fifty years ago; but the parish was not set off from Plaistow till fifty years after its settlement. The church was founded, and Rev. S. Peabody ordained, in 1772. The academy, one of the oldest institutions of the kind, was incorporated in 1791. This and the church stand on a hill, where they cannot be hid.

The services of the Conference commenced punctually, at 10 A. M., by devotional exercises conducted by Rev. J. K. Aldrich of Rye. After prayer and addresses, Dr. C. W. Wallace, of Manchester, spoke in behalf of the Orphans' Home, at Franklin, urging the pastors to take up collections to aid in supporting it. The opening sermon was delivered by Rev. Geo. E. Street, of Exeter, upon Matt. 17:20 in which he showed the necessity of faith, in order to succeed in any important enterprise; and that a man must have faith, 1st, in himself; 2d, in man; 3d, in the times; and 4th and especially in God. The congregation was much larger than usual, upon such occasions.

The reports on the state of religion in the churches were extremely interesting. Most of the churches have received some accessions; but the reports of North Hampton, Plaistow, Hampstead and some others told of a deeper interest in the service of God, than has existed for many years past.

The evening was devoted to Centennial thoughts—religion in New Hampshire 100 years ago, religion and patriotism, reverence for the fathers, etc. The first speaker was Rev. J. H. Stearns, of Epping, whose grandfather, Rev. Josiah Stearns, was settled in Epping 108 years ago, and was pastor there thirty years, where he died in 1788.

He was followed by Rev. J. S. Batchelder, of Hampton, a descendant of Rev. Stephen Batchelder, who was the first pastor at Hampton in 1638, 238 years ago. Revds. F. D. Chandler, Joseph Bartlett, and A. B. Peabody, Dr. Bremmer and C. T. Melvin spoke to a crowded house, that listened with deep interest and occasioned applause.

At 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. G. E. Lovejoy of Candia. Rev. Geo. Street was moderator and Rev. A. B. Peabody Secretary. The subject of pastoral visiting was discussed by Rev. C. Tenney, of Chester, Revds. Huntress of Derry, J. Chapman and T. V. Haines of North Hampton, and others. The next topic was the text (Rom. 12:2) "Be not conformed to this world;" or "What principles should govern Christians in their social relations with the world?"

At 2 P. M., an able and impressive discourse upon 1st Peter, 2:17, was delivered by Rev. I. C. White, of Newmarket, after which Rev. C. Packard of Windham, and Rev. T. V. Haines of North Hampton, conducted the services of the communion.

The Conference adjourned, to meet at North Hampton, on the 2d Tuesday of May, 1877.

The Rockingham County Woman's Missionary Society met at the Hall of the Academy, Wednesday, A. M., and had, I am told, an interesting meeting. Perhaps some or those present may give you a report of the proceedings.

Though the town is near the southwest corner of the County, thirty miles from Portsmouth, the number of pastors and delegates, and others, from a distance, was much greater than usual. Still the hospitality of the good people of Atkinson did not fail. Their kind attentions to our welfare will be long remembered by many grateful guests. C.

Ancient Discoverers.

Warned by the trials which other voyagers had had when trying to find new lands, Flokko carried in his ship three ravens which had previously been consecrated by the pagan priests of Norway. Two ravens were supposed to bring to Odin, or Woden, the chief deity of the Northmen, news of all that happens in the world. And Flokko relied on the ravens to tell him when land was in sight. The first raven, when set free, returned to the land whence the ship had sailed; therefore, this was yet the nearest shore. The second was let loose some days afterward, and after wandering in the air, came back to the ship, showing thereby that there was no land in sight. But this and the third, when set at liberty after two days, mounted up into the sky, circled about as if to take a view of the horizon, and then took a straight flight into the West. Flokko followed in that direction, and so reached the island for which he searched.

The colony did not thrive. It was broken up, and the colonists returned to Norway, bringing an evil report of the land, which they called Iceland. But in 875, ten years after Flokko's failure, one Earl Ingolf, who had quarreled with one of his neighbors and had killed some of his thralls, or bondmen, found it necessary for him to flee from the wrath of the king, Harold Haarfager (Harold the Fair-haired), and he accordingly took his ship and went to Iceland. Here he founded a colony which has lasted through all the centuries—a remarkable community.

Though Iceland was thus settled by the Vikings, and although these sea-rovers still followed their wave-wandering life, we must believe that they were no longer like the "pyrates" of the mainland. One of these sailors was Gunnbiorn, who, driven westward by a storm, soon after the settlement of Iceland, fell upon the shores of Greenland, to which region he gave the name of Gunnbiorn's Rocks. He made his way home again, for the strait between Greenland and Iceland is not so wide but one may see the shores of each, when midway between them, of a clear day. He gave, like all discoverers, a very glowing account of his new land, but none went thither until the next century.

In 985, Eric the Red, who, like Ingolf, had been obliged to quit his own country on account of his violence and crimes, went to the new land in the West. He established a home for himself, and three years later, he was back in Iceland with a wonderful tale. In the quaint language of the chronicle, "In order to entice people to go to his new country, he called it Greenland, and painted it out as such an excellent place for pasture, wood, and fish, that the next year he was followed thither by twenty-five ships full of colonists, who had furnished themselves richly with household goods and cattle of all sorts; but only fourteen of these ships arrived." The other eleven, we are left to surmise, were wrecked on the way.—St. Nicholas for July.

—As an advertisement, and as a certificate of the character of the gentle inhabitants of the far West, the following is worthy of attention. It is found in a description of the scenery on the line of a western railroad: "This place is called the Garden of the Gods, but is really the property of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company,—there being no God west of Dodge."

Keep the Liver Active.

The above is a sound health maxim. In order that the functions of digestion, evacuation and secretion shall be discharged with that degree of regularity and vigor which is essential to the well being of both body and mind, the liver, upon whose activity they are dependent for their due performance, must be kept in good working order. Calomel and blue pills, besides being hurtful mineral drugs, only partially and temporarily rectify disorders or sluggishness of the great biliary gland. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, on the contrary, accomplish thoroughly what the above medicines fail in doing, and are besides a safe as well as potent remedy for disorders of the stomach, bowels and organs of urination, as well as an unequalled general invigorant. They are, moreover, a sterling antidote to malaria.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

To Neutralize Offensiveness.

In many forms we use disinfecting agents. Impure breath, caused by bad teeth, tobacco, spirits, or catarrh, is neutralized by SOZODONT. Tis a healthful beautifier, and a great luxury as a dentifrice. The repulsive breath is by its use rendered as fragrant as a rose, and coldness by friends or lovers will no longer be noticed.

Spalding's Glue mends everything.

Adam was the first man, and Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam is the first and only remedy that cures coughs and colds every time.

Pyle's Dietetic Saleratus.—Universally acknowledged the best in use. Each package bears the name of JAMES PYLE. None genuine without. tje76

☞ That yellow tinge of the complexion is a sure indication of bile in the blood. It is effectually removed by using GILBERT'S EXCELSIOR LIVER LOZENGES.

Important to persons visiting New York or the Centennial. The Grand Union Hotel, New York, opposite the Grand Central Depot, has over 350 elegantly furnished rooms. Elevator, steam and all improvements. European plan. Carriage hire is saved, as baggage is taken to and from the depot free. Guests can live better for less money at the Grand Union than at any other first-class hotel. Stages and cars pass the Hotel constantly to all parts of the city, and to the Philadelphia depot.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, looks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

The London Cabman.

New to the life of London streets, I was prepared to do battle with cabby there in the same way I had so often fought with the hackmen of New York. At the end of my first drive in a hansom I asked, "What's your fare?"

"I'll leave it to you, sir," said cabby respectfully.

"No. Don't leave it to me, for I know nothing about it. What's your fare," I repeated!

"Why, sir, I'd be very much obliged to you for a 'arf a crown, sir."

"What?" I spoke up sharply, looking daggers at him.

He sprang from his perch with a bound that was like a flash, and bending obsequiously, said in a low, insinuating, musical tone, (so unlike a hack driver!) "I said, sir, that I should be very much obliged for a 'arf a crown, sir."

"Why, you haven't the impudence to tell me you expect ten shillings for such a trip as this?" I shouted.

"Oh, no, sir," very gently.

"Ah! confound my stupidity!" I muttered. "I've made a blunder. I confused the sovereign and the crown—I thought you wanted half a sovereign."

"Oh, you couldn't think I wanted ten shillin', sir!" very sadly and deprecatingly, as if I had suspected him of an enormality which grieved him to the heart. "Thank you, sir," as I handed him three shillings, and he jumped up to his perch and drove off.

I stood staring after him in mingled admiration of his virtue and politeness and contempt for my own financial abilities. To think I should have been so dull as to confuse a sovereign and a crown! Any booby might know the Queen's crown must be less valuable than the Queen herself. But what would have been that cabby's sensations if he had been told that the ten shillings which so horrified him would be easily, and as a matter of course, demanded for the same distance by one of the Tammany politicians who drive hacks in New York?—WIRT SIKES, in the Galaxy for July.

The "Housekeeper" of Our Health.

The liver is the great depurating or blood cleansing organ of the system. Set the great housekeeper of our health at work, and the foul corruptions which gender in the blood and rot out, as it were, the machinery of life, are gradually expelled from the system. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with small daily doses of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are pre-eminently the articles needed. They cure every kind of humor from the worst scrofula to the common pimple, blotch or eruption. Great eating ulcers kindly heal under their mighty curative influence. Virulent blood poisons that lurk in the system are by them robbed of terrors, and by their persevering and somewhat protracted use the most tainted system may be completely renovated and built up anew. Enlarged glands, tumors and swellings dwindle away and disappear under the influence of their great resolvents. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

"Claude, a child about three years old, was greatly afflicted with sores on his legs and feet, so that he could not wear his shoes and stockings. Had a great deal of trouble with him. Had tried many remedies ineffectually. At last we tried the Golden Medical Discovery, and in about three weeks he was entirely cured, his sores were all healed, and health much improved.

Respectfully yours, J. W. Boyer,
Vermillion, Edgar Co., Ill., Jan. 29, '75."

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and will cure the worst cases almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Anodyne. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.

Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 20th, and wrote you February 23d of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eight-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.

Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for Dr. Quain's Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking Dr. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure that class of aches and pains caused from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.

JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I know the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and the good they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A month ago I advised him to get some of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been as free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yes, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. But, I did not lend

The Councillor Districts have been equalized with the same fidelity to the requirements of the Constitution as were the Senatorial Districts. These two bills were the result of a competitive examination of schemes submitted by gentlemen from different parts of the State, but the above, as presented to the House, were from calculations made by Hosea B. Carter, Esq., of East Hampstead, late member of the State Committee. The preparation of these bills involved great care and labor. In the arrangement of the districts effort has been made to secure compactness and uniformity, rather than partisan advantage.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

William A. Wheeler,

OF NEW YORK.

Editorial Pencilings.

CINCINNATI, O., June 17.

This city has been in a constant state of excitement for a week and once more relapses into ordinary quietude on the departure of the politicians. There is much to amuse and entertain the stranger in Cincinnati. It has good theatres, supports an orchestra second only to that of Theodore Thomas, and has public resorts where music is an unceasing element of attraction. The beer gardens are unique affairs, made to accommodate in some instances thousands of visitors. A mile from the central part of the city are three famous resorts of this kind, chief among which is the "Lookout." Here are choice concerts on Wednesday and Sunday evenings, which are attended by the best citizens. The "Lookout" is located on the heights 300 feet above the city, and is lighted by a calcium light and Chinese lanterns. In the most sultry days this place furnishes a cool retreat. The method of reaching it is novel, the route being called the "inclined plane." The cost of ascent is five cents a passenger. Two cars are attached to each other by wire ropes, one taut and one slack, the repes running through a pulley. One car goes up as the other comes down, on parallel tracks, a stationary engine furnishing the motive power. It was my good fortune to find two former residents of Portsmouth, Mr. Morrill and Mr. Albert Parks, who showed New Hampshire men present at the convention the chief points of interest in the city environs. We went rapidly up the inclined plane in the evening, less than a minute sufficing to reach the summit. The view is a magnificent one by day or night. For miles away the city lights stretched into apparent proximity like a vast torch-light procession. Elsewhere the hills could just be discerned in the darkness of the night. A conflagration was illuminating a distant quarter of the city, and a mile away the vicinity of the Burnet House was blazing with rockets, and changing fires, the work of the enthusiastic advocates of the nomination of Mr. BLAINE. Near by was a monster torch-light procession of the BRISTOW men, and not far away could be heard the music of the splendid bands from New York and Pennsylvania.

Within was a chattering assemblage of men, women and children, listening to the choice music of the Cincinnati orchestra and imbibing by families the famous Cincinnati lager. Lager seems to be a second nature to the German and 3000 lager beer shops cater to his pleasure. He is jolly and not quarrelsome, takes his wife and smallest babe, and marches off to an evening of enjoyment, sitting tranquilly for hours sipping lager. It is a vast improvement on the American fashion of leaving wife and children to amuse themselves, and proceeding to drink vile whiskey only to make home miserable in returning. Women and children drink as freely as the men in these beer gardens. There is no drunkenness, the most perfect order and a never failing fund of entertainment.

Living with the German the American follows his illustrious example, except that a glass of lager lingers longer in the Teutonic throat, while the free American-born citizen holds to the perpendicular style of drinking so emblematic of his countrymen. The German lacks style and has little use for soap, but he is imperturbably good natured. There are 90,000 of him in Cincinnati and he rules the roost. He lives economically, lays up money out of a rusty nail, is persevering and sentimental. He is as wise as Solomon and as harmless as a lamb. He makes Cincinnati a desirable place, and no visitor has seen him in his glory until he crosses "the Rhine," as the Miami Canal is called.

BUTLER, KY., June 19.

After an absence of fifteen years, yours truly finds himself once more in Pendleton County, a locality left two days after the fall of Fort Sumter. Then the Nation was in commotion and Kentucky Unionists believed the only way to save the State from secession was to prevent the opposing armies from crossing it. The Nation was in a blaze of excitement and in every village, town and city from Ohio to New Hampshire hung myriads of flags, marched scores and hundreds of citizens preparing to defend the Union, and rolled the "rat-tat-tat" of the drum, while the glistening bayonet reflected back the rays of the sun. At the depots there were most affecting scenes of parting between soldier and family, the most cheering assurances that those left behind should be well cared for, and the signs of preparation for still greater sacrifices. Kentucky was in a doubtful position, a house divided against itself, with slavery not yet wiped out and with its bravest men enlisting on both sides of the momentous conflict. Very naturally the State was expected to become again "the dark and bloody ground," ere the years of war should end. The confederates first broke the compact and entered the State, necessitating a corresponding action on the part of the general Government. Belmont was among the first engagements of the war, and there Gen. Grant first came to public notice.

The Kentucky of to-day is prosperous beyond measure. Its fears of the sword were but slightly realized and it passed through the "unpleasantness" with few scars save the occupation of this county by Generals Morgan and Granger, who alternately retreated from each other without direful results. But the State contributed heroes to both sides during the rebellion, brave men and true who cast their lives and fortunes into the scale of State pride or duty and went forth to battle never to return. There were few slaves in Pendleton County even then, but republicans were almost as scarce as in the Fejee islands. A little colony of Portsmouth people had settled three miles above this place, a dozen or more in number, and had given to it the name Boston, which it now retains. All but one have left the State, and he, Mr. NATHANIAL S. PATTEN, having become absorbed by one of Kentucky's fair daughters is a leading man of Butler and has a flourishing mill business in a wide-awake village which has outstripped its neighbor, Boston, and is on the high road to greater possibilities. Boston has grown to some extent and has some of the aspects of a small New England village. Its one mill has given way to an extensive structure costing $80,000, whereat a large amount of lumber is annually turned out. The Licking River has been dammed and booms erected for the protection of the company's timber in the season when the river rises. Logs seldom come down the river in rafts as formerly but are marked and set loose, the "drive" being more expeditious though still more liable to occasion loss. New England has furnished the enterprise and energy that make Boston a desirable station. Butler has more varied interests and is not dependent wholly upon one branch of industry. It is a growing town with beautiful surroundings and a good class of citizens. Its roads are being greatly improved, and buggy riding is liable to give place to horse-back locomotion.

The cultivation of tobacco is largely entering into the operations of this section and is said to be very remunerative. The hog crop keps up its annual yield and grain is ripening on the hills. Some of the best brands of whiskey are distilled in the immediate vicinity. Land has risen in value since the rebellion and cash is the chief element in trade, whereas fifteen years ago credit was the rule, and settlements were in many cases made only by recourse to law. Disconsolate Mormons from the East will find here some of the handsomest of the fair sex in Kentucky, a State which is noted for "raising" the "most beautiful women in the United States."

The Legislature.

In the House on the 22d, the bills to alter the ward lines in Manchester and to re-arrange the Councillor and Senatorial Districts were ordered printed, and a bill to change the time of election of members of Congress from March to the Tuesday following the first Monday of November, commencing this year, was referred. The following committee on the Constitutional Convention was announced by the Speaker: Messrs. Stevens of Nashua, Sinclair of Bethlehem, Marston of Exeter, Nason of Dover, Davis of Roxbury, Banfield of Wolfboro', Chapman of Hill, Lang of Meredith, Barton of Newport and Bragg of Carroll. Notice was given of bills to secure purity in elections, and in relation to spirituous liquors; also addresses for the removal of a swarm of democratic office-holders; joint resolution to pay the expenses of sending the present members of the House and Senate, under the care of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, to the Philadelphia Exhibition; bill to incorporate the Boston & Dover Air Line Railroad.

At a caucus held in the evening by the republican members of the Legislature, the following candidates for State officers were nominated: Secretary of State, Benjamin F. Prescott of Epping; State Treasurer, Solon A. Carter of Keene; State Printer, Edward A. Jenks of Newport, manager of the Republican Press Association; Commissary-General, Frank W. Miller of Portsmouth.

News and Notes.

Three large ships, the Rembrandt, of 1850 tons, the Mary E. Manton, of 2200 tons, and the Grecian, 1700 tons, were launched at Kennebunk on Thursday.

Nine prisoners in the Utah penitentiary escaped on Thursday, after overpowering the guard, capturing all the guns and ammunition in the building, killing a cook who attempted to run away, and stealing all the horses in the jail stable.

An unknown man was found in the depot of the Albany Railroad at Boston, Thursday evening, mortally wounded in the breast with a knife. A railroad employe named Jordan has been arrested on suspicion of having killed him, though it is considered quite possible the deceased committed suicide.

By an explosion in a torpedo factory, in New Jersey, on the 21st, two boys were killed, a boy and a girl fatally injured, and five other young persons seriously hurt.

The adventurer Johnsen, who is on his way across the Atlantic in a dory, is reported as having been seen to the eastward of Cape Sable on Thursday.

The Albany (N. Y.) Law Journal, a recognized authority, says this country has nothing to complain of in regard to the attitude of England on the extradition question. Per contra, the London Times, News and Pall Mall Gazette sustain Secretary Fish's views.

A pleasant little shooting match between five Southern ladies and five Northern ladies came off at Savin Hill, Mass., on the 21st. A New Orleans gentleman was the proposer of the affair, and offered a beautiful gold medal, valued at a hundred dollars, and a rich silk dress pattern as a prize for the best shooter. Naturally competition was lively, and when the trial came three hundred spectators were on hand to see the contest. A red, white and blue target was planted, the distance being about 35 paces. The contestants were Emma Stayner, Minnie Smith, Natick; Grace Murphy, South Boston; Abbie Warner, New York; Cecilia Kelley, Philadelphia; Josephine Chevalier, New Orleans; Rosina Jordan, Richmond, Va.; Nellie Reynolds, St. Louis; Kitty Lovett, Julia De Foe, New Orleans. Miss Chevalier of New Orleans tied Miss Stayner, and they had a second trial, resulting in Miss Stayner's winning the gold medal and the silk dress pattern. Miss Chevalier immediately sat down on a camp-stool and challenged any lady this side of the line to shoot with her at 60 paces, three shots, for $1000 a side, shooting to take place at the Centennial grounds, Philadelphia, Fourth of July, an announcement which was received with tumultuous cheers.

At Abbott, Maine, recently, a widow lady named Brown, 68 years old, was assaulted, savagely beaten and outraged by William Cole, an Irishman, who was captured. He acknowledged the crime and seemed to care very little about it.

The Cape Ann Advertiser has information that on the 20th Mr. Albion Oliver of Bristol, Me., picked up, between Matinicus Rock and the Wooden Ball, a trunk belonging to the wife of Mr. John O'Brien, formerly of Cape Breton, but now of Gloucester, and containing pictures, clothing, etc. Mrs. O'Brien was a passenger on board the packet schooner Kittie, Capt. Forrestall, which sailed from Port Mulgrave for Boston on Sunday, April 2, and is supposed to have foundered in the severe gale of the 4th, and that all of the sixty-three persons on board were lost. The trunk is the first article picked up from the wreck. The place where it was found indicates that the vessel was lost on Cape Sable.

Elijah Sommers of West Hartford, Vt., has been arrested in Keene on suspicion of being implicated in the Foster murder. Parties claim he was seen there the day before the murder, while he says he can prove himself elsewhere. The woman, Lizzie A. Cram, and a man named Bartholomew have also been locked up for further investigation. The County Solicitor has telegraphed to Walpole for the clerk who sold the chloroform to visit Keene to see if he identifies the man Sommers as the one who bought the chloroform. It seems that Sommers has been seen with the Cram woman. Foster, it will be remembered, was found dead in a schoolhouse yard with a sponge saturated with chloroform bound over his mouth and nose.

Political.

The republican State convention of Maine on Thursday renominated Gov. Conner. Hon. James G. Blaine was unanimously recommended to be appointed U. S. Senator, to fill the unexpired term of Hon. Lot. M. Morrill. The convention lustily cheered for Mr. Blaine, and finished with three rousing cheers for Hayes and Wheeler. Mr. Blaine was appointed on the State committee for the 16th consecutive year, and unanimously chosen chairman, which position he has always held on the committee.

Col. Tom Scott has written a letter to Proctor Knott, in which he says that the only telegram he ever sent to Josiah Caldwell, at London, was in answer to one received from Caldwell by cable. The telegram from Caldwell does not appear in the telegrams published, though Scott's answer does appear.

At the convention of the 4th Congressional District of Maine, on Thursday, Llewellen Powers was nominated by a vote of 197 to 33 for H. M. Plaisted.

The Temperance Mass Meeting.

Probably the largest temperance rally that ever occurred in Portsmouth took place on Thursday evening. Three trains, with three different reform clubs, arrived between half-past seven and half-past eight o'clock, with between four and five hundred visitors; the Reynolds Club from Newburyport, with about one hundred and fifty ladies and gentlemen, the Dover Reform Club with upwards of one hundred, and the Pike Club from Newburyport, one hundred and fifty strong. The first-named club arrived at half-past seven o'clock and was received at the Eastern Depot by the Reform Club of this city, which turned out in good numbers, and made a good appearance on the march down Congress street on the way to the cars, under the marshalship of Capt. M. T. Betton. Upon the arrival of the Reynolds Club, the procession, headed by the Kearsarge Drum Corps, took up the line of march for the Temple, followed by throngs of the interested and the curious. Arriving at the Hall the visiting brethren were conducted to seats, (some on the stage and the balance in the farther wing of the house,) and left there to be entertained and cheered by music, vocal and instrumental, under the skilled leadership of Dr. E. B. Goodall, while the Portsmouth club returned to the depot to receive the other two Clubs from Dover and Newburyport, which were expected to arrive nearly together and at about half-past eight o'clock.

There was however a little delay in the coming of the Dover train, but the crowd waited patiently, and at twenty minutes before nine the procession was again marching to the Temple with the remainder of the temperance hosts. On its way there, the column halted in front of the residence of Alfred W. Haven, Esq., who is notably active in the temperance reform work, and at a signal from President Treat gave three rousing cheers for him and his philanthropic lady.

A fine brass band accompanied the Pike Club, and during the evening gave some very good music. After all had been comfortably seated in the Temple, (which was not accomplished until the nine o'clock bell had ceased ringing,) John S. Treat, Esq., President of the Portsmouth Reform Club, called the meeting to order, and the exercises were opened with an invocation by Rev. Mr. Dunlap of Newburyport. President Treat then cordially welcomed the visitors in behalf of the Portsmouth Reform Club, and remarked that while he regretted the lateness of the hour, the welcome was none the less hearty, and he trusted that all might get well repaid for coming.

Speeches were made by Messrs. Pettengill of the Reynolds Club, of Newburyport, Guppy of the Dover Reform Club, Pike of of the Pike Club, of Newburyport, Rev. Mr. Ray, Starling, Ricker, Rev. Wm. A Rand, and a number of others whose names we failed to learn.

The speaking was interspersed with selections by the band from Newburyport, whose music, as we have before intimated, was appropriate and pleasing At the close of these exercises the visiting brethren with their ladies were escorted to Rechabite Hall, where they were treated to a bountiful collation of meats, pastry and coffee. If any went away hungry or thirsty it was not for the lack of food and drink, as there was enough left to have satisfied quite a crowd of hungry ones. The ladies of the Woman's Temperance League, as well as those of the Reform Club, were especially active in preparing this bountiful repast; and to them is mainly due the success of the occasion. An uncomfortably large crowd was present at the Hall and in and about the door, but everything passed off smoothly and with little or no disturbance; and between 11 and 12 o'clock the visitors quietly took the several trains for their homes, pleased with their visit and uniting in the wish that it might not be the last.

The officers of the Portsmouth Reform Club tender their thanks to the police force of this city, for their gentlemanly courtesy in accepting an invitation to lead on the march, as well as for their efficient services in preserving order on the route, at the Temple and at Rechabite Hall.

Aldermanic.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the application of Washington Freeman for permission to encumber Sheafe street for building purposes was granted under the usual restrictions.

The application of Marcellus Eldredge for leave to remove a tree in front of his house on Islington street, was referred to the committee on streets with power to act.

The applications of the estates of Stephen Pearse and Albert J. Badger for leave to relay their sidewalks on Daniel street, of Joseph C. Langley for leave to relay his sidewalk on Deer street, and of Wm. W. Cotton for leave to relay the sidewalk in front of No. 46 Court street, were referred to the committee on streets, as was also the petition of James F. Shores for the relaying of the cross walk at the junction of Middle street and Richards avenue.

The committee on fire department, to whom was referred the subject of selecting a suitable location for steam fire engine No. 1, reported, recommending that the engine be located at the Hanover street reservoir and that a building be built facing on Hanover street, to be built of wood, with a tinned roof, and a cement or brick floor. The report was accepted, and the same committee with the Mayor added was instructed to carry the recommendation into effect.

The committee to whom was referred the petition of Wm. Hunter and others for the widening of Dennett street between Ward's distillery lot and the northern corner of the Manson house, reported recommending that the prayer of the petitioners be granted and that the street be widened in accordance with a plan drawn by A. C. Hoyt. The report was accepted and the recommendation adopted.

The proposition of the United States Marine Band to give open air concerts during the summer, providing the city would construct a suitable band stand, was accepted, and the Mayor authorized to have the same constructed.

Adjourned.

Jottings.

Mr. Christopher Kellenbeck, of this city, an industrious fisherman, while fishing for lobsters around Boon Island on Thursday, was capsized by a breaker which made up suddenly and took him unawares. Mr. Kellenbeck was caught under his wherry and went down, but succeeded in clearing himself and getting to the shore, where he was helped up and kindly cared for by the occupants of the light-station, who furnished him with dry clothing. The wherry was totally wrecked and most of the nets lost—a serious loss to a poor man.

In the list of democratic officials marked for decapitation we find the names of Samuel Rowe, Sheriff, Joseph F. Wiggin, Judge of Probate, and William M. Hunnewell, Register of Probate of Rockingham county; Calvin Page, Police Judge of Portsmouth; John G. Moses, Richard Waldron and Enoch G. Adams, Pilot Commissioners of Portsmouth.

We are to have a Fourth of July celebration after all. The requisite amount of money to entitle the committee of arrangements to the city's appropriation having been secured, things will now go ahead.

Mr. Samuel S. Frye was thrown from his team on Middle street, Thursday evening, his head striking on the curbstone. He was insensible for several hours, but fortunately did not receive any permanent injuries.

Ship Wm. L. Marcy, Marcy, arrived at Liverpool on the 22d, 106 days from San Francisco.

The canker worms are doing a great deal of mischief in some sections hereabouts, the apple trees looking as if fire had run through them, but their ravages are generally considerably less than they were last year.

Portsmouth in 1773 contained 160 slaves, according to the census of the Province of New Hampshire taken by order of Gov. John Wentworth in that year.

Capt. T. E. O. Marvin's Light Artillery Company are to occupy the hall in Badger's new block on Daniel street when it is finished. They are at present using Washington Hall. The company will make a fine appearance in their handsome uniform.

The Portsmouth Guide Book is a neat, handy, little volume, which must prove of great service and a strong addition to the pleasure of a visitor to one of the most famous old cities in America. The historical claims, and equally the natural beauty of Portsmouth, make the annual list of visitors there large, to whom the Guide Book will be a welcome offering. It is nicely arranged and prettily issued.—Traveller.

A scheme has been set on foot in the legislature for the members of the Senate and House to go to the Centennial at the expense of the State. Don't you vote for anything of the kind, gentlemen of the legislature. Go to the Centennial if you want to, but pay your own bills like honest men. We don't know who is engineering the job, and don't think we want to know; but if it is carried through we shall consider it (unless some better argument is advanced in its favor than now occurs to us) an excellent imitation of stealing,—less defensible, indeed, than the back-salary steal which did not hurt the standing of Fernando Wood and Sam. Randall in the democratic party, but did relegate to private life so many republicans who voted for it.

Judge Page, it seems, is to be guillotined along with the rest of the democratic officeholders. Sorry for it; he's a good magistrate.

An engine, baggage car and a portion of the Pullman car of an Eastward bound train on the Eastern Railroad ran off the track between Wells and Kennebunk on Thursday afternoon. The engine and tender went down the embankment and were badly wrecked. The baggage and Pullman cars were but little injured. The engineer, Charles Waterman, and the fireman, Henry Drake, stuck to the cab and went down the bank with the engine; the fireman escaped unhurt and the engineer was not seriously injured. The passengers on the train promptly raised a purse of $90 and presented it to them as a token of their recognition of their courage and faithfulness.

See advertisement of sale of new dwelling on Union street at auction at noon this, day by H. F. Wendell.

The man who is learning to play in the band resides in this city. When we are 'roused out of our sweetest nap, at about quartar to six in the morning, by the mellifluous strains of his trombone as he goes running up and down the scale and vainly endeavoring to hit Q flat—strains sweeter even than the warblings of a mule—we laugh to scorn Dante's "Inferno" as the crude, half-finished production of a man who lived before trombones were invented. "What is home, without a mother?" What is (another place whose name commences with "h") without the presence of a learner on the trombone? Now, if a kind Providence would only translate our trombone friend to the place where he by right belongs, quick!

The steamer "Willard Clapp," of Haverhill, is to leave that city on every fair Sunday during the summer for excursion trips to the Shoals.

In compliance with a special order from the Adjutant General, Capt. Frank Williams of the Portsmouth Heavy Artillery presided at the organization of the new cavalry company on the evening of the 21st. The officers recently elected were nominated for approval by the State officials. Capt. E. G. Peirce, Jr., was unanimously reelected and accepted the position. It was voted to have regular weekly drills. The cavalry will appear publicly as soon as the equipments are received from the State.

The Boston Transcript's special, who wrote up the account of the military reunion here the 20th, closes as follows: "A report of the occasion would not be just, without mentioning, and so acknowledging here, on the part of the association and all who participated, the generous services as escort of the Portsmouth Heavy Artillery and Harlow's Band. The quality of music of the band is very well known but it may not be so well known, to our military friends that they will find a company in Portsmouth that will somewhat astonish them for excellence in all respects when they see it. The escort and music were an entire surprise of the occasion, and were most creditable and thoughtful things to do on the part of the volunteers." Capt. Hilton has forwarded to Capt. Williams and his command a highly complimentary letter.

Keep the Liver Active.

The above is a sound health maxim. In order that the functions of digestion, evacuation and secretion shall be discharged with that degree of regularity and vigor which is essential to the well being of both body and mind, the liver, upon whose activity they are dependent for their due performance, must be kept in good working order. Calomel and blue pills, besides being hurtful mineral drugs, only partially and temporarily rectify disorders or sluggishness of the great biliary gland. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, on the contrary, accomplish thoroughly what the above medicines fail in doing, and are besides a safe as well as potent remedy for disorders of the stomach, bowels and organs of urination, as well as an unequaled general invigorant. They are, moreover, a sterling antidote to malaria.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

To Neutralize Offensiveness.

In many forms we use disinfecting agents. Impure breath, caused by bad teeth, tobacco, spirits, or catarrh, is neutralized by SOZODONT. 'Tis a healthful beautifier, and a great luxury as a dentifrice. The repulsive breath is by its use rendered as fragrant as a rose, and coldness by friends or lovers will no longer be noticed.

Spalding's Glue mends everything.

Adam was the first man, and Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam is the first and only remedy that cures coughs and colds every time.

Pyle's Dietetic Saleratus.—Universally acknowledged the best in use. Each pound bears the name of JAMES PYLE. None genuine without. tjo76

☞ That yellow tinge of the complexion is a sure indication of bile in the blood. It is effectually removed by using GILBERT'S EXCELSIOR LIVER LOZENGES.

Important to persons visiting New York or the Centennial. The Grand Union Hotel, New York, opposite the Grand Central Depot, has over 350 elegantly furnished rooms. Elevator, steam and all improvements. European plan. Carriage hire is saved, as baggage is taken to and from the depot free. Guests can live better for less money at the Grand Union than at any other first-class hotel. Stages and cars pass the Hotel constantly to all parts of the city, and to the Philadelphia depot.

PILOT BREAD.

This kind of bread having come into extensive family use, it has been my purpose to furnish, from choice materials, an article which should meet the approval of the most fastidious as to neatness, tooks and taste. Whether I have succeeded in giving to the public a PILOT BREAD,

SUPERIOR IN EXCELLENCE,

the consumer may be the judge; that the quality will not be suffered to depreciate, the past with the present is my best pledge. That I can compete with all the various qualities of Pilot Bread in the market, as to price, I make no pretensions,—but in price, all things being equal, I fear no competition.

Daily Chronicle.

The method of voting in the democratic convention will differ materially from that of the republicans at Cincinnati. The democratic convention has fewer members than that of the republicans, for the reason that the democrats do not admit delegates from the Territories, as was done at Cincinnati. The only exception to this rule regarding the Territories will be Colorado, which will be represented at St. Louis, and the reason for this distinction is that it may be admitted as a State in time to vote at the election. Thus the democratic convention will consist of 738 members. Its votes, however, will be cast by States, each State being entitled to the same number of votes as it has Representatives and Senators in Congress, instead of double the number. Thus, while there are 738 members, the total number of votes that may be cast in the convention is only 369, each delegate having but half a vote. This is the reason why in the reports of the democratic convention we shall see half votes cast for different candidates. Two-thirds of the whole number of votes will be necessary to nominate a candidate for President if the two-thirds rule is not suspended, and the candidate who gets 246 votes will be nominated.

The "Housekeeper" of Our Health.

The liver is the great depurating or blood cleansing organ of the system. Set the great housekeeper of our health at work, and the foul corruptions which gender in the blood and rot out, as it were, the machinery of life, are gradually expelled from the system. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with small daily doses of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are pre-eminently the articles needed. They cure every kind of humor from the worst scrofula to the common pimple, blotch or eruption. Great eating ulcers kindly heal under their mighty curative influence. Virulent blood poisons that lurk in the system are by them robbed of terrors, and by their persevering and somewhat protracted use the most tainted system may be completely renovated and built up anew. Enlarged glands, tumors and swellings dwindle away and disappear under the influence of their great resolvents. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

"Claude, a child about three years old, was greatly afflicted with sores on his legs and feet, so that he could not wear his shoes and stockings. Had a great deal of trouble with him. Had tried many remedies ineffectually. At last we tried the Golden Medical Discovery, and in about three weeks he was entirely cured, his sores were all healed, and health much improved.

Respectfully yours, J. W. Boyer,

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

No medicine ever offered to the public has given such universal satisfaction as Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. Their praises are on every tongue where their merits are known. They strike at once at the seat of disease and show their healing power almost immediately. Thousands of voluntary testimonials of their merits have been received by the agent, from those who have been cured by them, of which the following are samples:

Dyspepsia Four Years, Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels Three Years, Confined to my Room Two Years, Pain so I Could Not Sleep Without Morphine. One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills Made Me Eat Well, Sleep Well and Free from Pain, after being given up by Physicians.

WEST LEBANON, ME., Feb. 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I have been sick for four years with Dyspepsia, and for the past three years Constipation and Inflammation of the Bowels. I have suffered all the pain I could endure and live. I have been confined to my room for two years, and could not sleep nights without the use of morphine. I have been given up by physicians as past cure. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. I sleep well, I eat well and have no pain. They are all they are recommended to be. Please send me three packages, as two of my neighbors wish to try them. I enclose $1.50.

Your truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Another Letter from Maj. John W. Lord, one month later. Wonderful Cures by Dr. Quain's Pills Effected on Him in Thirteen Days. First time Free from Pain for Three Years.

WEST LEBANON, ME., March 22, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE:—I commenced taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS February 9th, and wrote you February 20th of their wonderful effect. I have continued to improve ever since. My appetite is good, and I sleep as well as I ever did in my life. I am free from pain for the first time in three years. When I was taken sick four years ago, I weighed one hundred and eighty-six pounds; I now weigh one hundred and thirty, but, as I am gaining in strength, I have faith I shall regain my flesh this summer, by the use of the Pills. I shall continue taking them for some time to come.

Yours truly, JOHN W. LORD.

Dr. Quain's Pills the Remedy for Soldiers' Aches and Pains.

WEST LEBANON, ME., June 1, 1875.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I am now able to walk out every day, and am gaining in strength very fast, all of which is due to you as agent for the best Pills in the world. I have taken no other medicine, and my improvement has been steady since first taking DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done everything for me, and I will say to you, advertise them direct to the soldiers, for they will certainly cure them of aches and pains arising from exposure and hardship on the field. Please send me by return mail another package.

JOHN W. LORD.

Rheumatism for Twenty Years Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills—"The Best Medicine in the World."

EAST ANDOVER, N. H., Dec. 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir:—As I knew the value of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and how highly they have done me, I take pleasure in giving them praise; so I send you another testimonial. My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for twenty years or more, and has tried everything that could be thought of, but to no good. At times it would be so bad that he could not lift his hand to his head or do any work at all, especially in cold weather. A short time ago I advised him to get one of these Pills. He believed nothing in them, but I gave him the last package I had of you, as I did not need them, and he has not been as free from the Rheumatic Complaint for years. No Rheumatism, no pain. What helped him? It was DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, the best medicine in the world. There is nothing like them. I know it, for I have tried them, and they are all, yes, more than they are recommended to be. Give them a fair trial and you will say so. I write this because I know the goodness of them and wish others to know the same. Some may think I am telling a big story. I am. But remember I am not giving them half the praise they ought to have.

Yours with respect, ED. F. PEVARE.

DAINGERFIELD, MORRIS CO., TEXAS, Nov. 15, '75.

MR. THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir:—I have been afflicted for now twelve years with Neuralgia in the face and head. I tried I do not know how many physicians, and could only get partly relieved. I also tried many patent medicines with the same result. I have been confined to my room most all the time for eight or ten winters, and have been traveling and visiting medical springs, and I still suffered most intensely. The physicians pronounced my case the worst and most stubborn that they had had anything to do with. One told me I could never get well; they all advised me to go South and spend the winter, and thought that was the only chance for me, and I was trying to get ready to go to Florida, when through the kindness of Rev. H. M. Mobley, my attention was called to the advertisement of Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills. I immediately sent to you for a package. I have taken four doses and I am almost free from pain. The impression here seems to be that if your pills will cure me, they will cure anybody. I have five applications to send for the pills. Enclosed please find three dollars; send five packages to me and one to Mrs. Laura Sherrell, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.

Yours truly, J. S. PATTON.

Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache.

LACONIA, N. H., Jan. 29, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE—Sir:—I have been troubled with Bad Blood, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, Dropsy and Headache. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS. They have done me more good than all the medicine I ever took; I have taken considerable medicine within the last five years. For the nerves I think there is nothing so good as those pills. I can recommend them to all who are similarly afflicted, they have done me so much good. I think they will recommend themselves wherever they go. I shall recommend those Pills to all who need them. Please send me two packages more, one for myself and one for a lady friend of mine. Many thanks to the inventor, agent and advertiser of those Pills.

MRS. P. L. ELLIOTT.

PULMOCINE.

MAGIC

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

-- USE --

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

BUTTER IN 20 MINUTES.
Lincoln Butter Powder is an entirely harmless article made from a celebrated English recipe, and now in daily use by many of the most noted farmers in the butter counties around Philadelphia.
In hot weather this Powder makes butter much firmer and sweeter than it usually is, and keeps it from turning rancid. It also removes the strong flavor of turnips, weeds, corn stalks, cotton seed, etc., and the increased yield of butter much more than pays the trifling expense of using it.

THE BAR-TENDER'S STORY.

BY JOHN RAY.

When I knowed him at first there was suthin'—
A sort of a general air—
That was very particular pleasin'
And what you might call debona'r.
I'm aware that expression is Frenchy,
And rather high-ditty, perhaps;
Which accounts that I have the acquaintance
Of several quality chaps.

And such is the way they converses,
But, speakin' of this here young man,
Apparently nature had shaped him
On a sort of a liberal plan;
Had gav him good look and good language,
His manners expressin' with vim
His belief in himself, an that others
Was just as good fellers as him.

I have noticed (I'm rather observin')
That them that is cheerfulest here
Is the sort that is seldomest given
To indulging themselves in the fear,
That they ain't bein' thought of sufficient,
Whatever's the company by,
Or that somebody, some how or other,
Is toppin' off 'em into the sky.

But this chap I mentioned was pleasin'
And neither stuck up or down;
And was thought to be jolly agreeable,
Whenever he went around town.
He used to come in for his beverage
Quite regular every night;
And I took a considerable interest
In mixin' the things about right.

But he got to increasin' his doses,
And took 'em more often, he did;
And it growed on him faster and faster
Till into a bummer he slid.
I was grieved to observe this here feller
A shoving hisself down the grade,
And I lectured him onto it sometimes
At the risk of spilling the trade.

At last he got thunderin' seedy,
And he lost his respect for hisself,
And all his high notions of honor
Was bundled away on the shelf.
But at times he was dreadful remorseful
Whenever he'd stop for to think;
And he'd swear to reform himself frequent,
And end it by takin' a drink.

What saved that young feller? A woman,
She done it in the singlerist way;
He come into the bar-room one evenin'
(He hadn't been drinkin' that day),
And sot hisself down to a table
With a terrible sorrowful face,
And he sat there a groanin' repeated,
And callin' hisself a gone case.

He was thinkin', and thinkin' and thinkin'
And cussin' hisself and his fate,
And endin' his thinkin', as usual,
By orderin' a Bourbon straight,
He was holdin' the glass in his fingers,
When into the place from the street
There came a young girl like a spirit,
With a face that was powerful sweet.

And she glided right up to the table,
And took the glass gently away;
And she says to him, "George, it is over;
I am only a woman to-day!
I rejected you once in my anger,
But I come to you lowly and meek,
For I can't live without you, my darling;
I thought I was strong, but I'm weak.

You are bound in a terrible bondage,
And I come, love, to share it with you;
Is there shame in the deed? I can bear it,
For at last to my love I am true;
I have turned from the home of my childhood,
And I come to my lover and friend—
Leaving comfort, contentment and honor,
And I'll stay to the terrible end.

Is there hunger and want in the future?
I can share them with you and not shrink.
And together we'll join in the pleasures,
The woes and the dangers of drink."
Then she raised up the glass firm and steady,
But her face was as pale as the dead—
"Here's to wine and the joy of carousals,
The songs and the laughter," she said.

Then he riz up, his face like a tempest,
And took the glass out of her hand,
And slung it away stern and savage.—
And I tell you his manner was grand!
And he says, "I have done with it, Nellie,
And I'll turn from the ways I have trod,
And I'll live to be worthy of you, dear,
So help me a merciful God!

You have saved me, my love and my darling,
On a noble and womanly plan;
Go back to your home till I see you,
In the garb and strength of a man!"
* * * * * *
I seen that same feller last Monday,
Lookin' nobby and handsome and game;
He was wheelin' a vehicle, gen'lemen,
And a baby was into the same.

THE TWO RUPERTS.

Pretty, saucy Kitty went swinging up and down, her light muslin dress waving and fluttering in the breeze.

"Glorious, Rupert, isn't it?" she cried, calling to her pet and companion, a huge, shaggy dog. "But where are you, why don't you answer, sir?" And swinging more slowly, she looked everywhere around her.

Kitty was down at the bottom of the old-fashioned garden, back of her father's farmhouse, where a swing had been put up for her in a little grove of trees.

Suddenly a merry voice cried out, "Here," and a handsome young man leaped the low fence, and advanced toward her, laughing and doffing his hat.

Kitty was out of the swing and on her feet in an instant, her eyes flashing, her figure drawn up to its full height. She looked prettier than ever in her indignation.

"I beg your pardon," said the intruder, bowing half-mockingly; "but I was taking a short cut across the field, when I heard you call me."

"Call you!" Kitty looked as if she would annihilate him.

"Certainly," with the utmost coolness, "You called 'Rupert,' didn't you?"

"I was calling my dog, sir," said Kitty with infinite hauteur.

"Well, I'm not exactly a dog," was the laughing answer, "but I've often been called an 'impudent puppy,'—at your service, miss!" And he bowed again profoundly.

"I should think so," snapped Kitty, stamping her little foot. And she muttered to herself, not expecting to be heard, "Impudence."

The stranger heard the word, nevertheless. His manner changed. He became as serious and deferential as the most chivalrous knight of old in presence of his mistress.

"I beg pardon. I'm afraid I'm trespassing. But the path through the field was trodden as if one had the right of way, and I heard you call—well, I made a mistake." Again the mirthful look danced in his eyes. "Good morning!"

He swept the very ground with his hat as he executed another profound bow, and then turned, and putting his hand on the top of the fence, vaulted over, and the next moment he was out of sight.

Kitty did not swing any more that day, but went back to the house, muttering. 'The impudent fellow!" while the real Rupert, who had been off chasing a rabbit, re-appeared just at this juncture, and accompanied her, frolicking and barking round her. But this was not the Rupert she meant when she said, "The impudent fellow."

A week passed. Kitty saw no more of the stranger, though she often wondered who he could be, and if he were staying in the neighborhood. At the end of that time, she attended an evening party at General Stacy's. Almost the first person she saw on entering the room was the handsome stranger.

"I wish to introduce you to my nephew," said the General, leading that personage up to Kitty. "His name, by baptism, is Rupert Mortimer, but he is such a saucy fellow that he is best known among his friends as 'that impudent puppy!'"

The eyes of the two young people met. Young Mr. Mortimer's were dancing with fun. For the life of her, Kitty could not help laughing. So they laughed in concert, and he said, bowing low, and repeating the words he had used in the garden, "Yes, 'that impupent puppy'—at your service."

"He is making sport of me," said Kitty to herself, and drew herself up haughtily; and for the rest of the interview was cold and reserved, confining herself to monosyllabic replies. Very soon, at the appearance of her many admirers, she excused herself and went off to dance.

"A bit of Tartar, I'm afraid," soliloquized Rupert Mortimer. "But how pretty she is! She looks, too, as if she had a noble character; and she can take her own part, as I have found to my cost. But I'm afraid she has been spoiled by admiration. To get into her good graces, one must go on his very knees to her; and faith! it is almost worth while. But no! Rupert Mortimer, my boy, keep your self-respect." Then, with a laugh, "Is my servant a dog, that he should do this thing?"

Yet, often that evening, Rupert, found himself, as if by some magnetic attraction, drawn to Kitty's side. Kitty, too, could not help, occasionally, glancing admiringly at his handsome face and graceful figure. She saw, very soon, that he was the best dancer in the room. So when a waltz struck up, and he asked her to join in it, she could not resist.

"It I don't dance with him," she said to herself, "the other girls will say he didn't ask me; and that will never do.'

Kitty had never enjoyed a waltz so much. She forgot the ridiculous episode in the swing, forgot the stranger's cool effrontery, forgot everything but the dreamy music and the rythmical movement of her companion. When the band stopped, she sighed involuntarily, wishing it was all to go over again.

Balls, picnics and croquet parties followed each other in rapid succession, for the summer was a gay one. Kitty and young Mr. Mortimer were almost constantly together. Somehow, Kitty fell into the habit of expecting Rupert always, as her especial escort; and he began to feel that no one but he had a right to Kitty, and to be very jealous when others attempted to pay her attentions. As yet, however, no words of love had ever passed between them; for Rupert, now thoroughly enamored, feared to ruin all by too premature an avowal; especially as, once or twice, when he had ventured to approach the subject, Kitty had suddenly grown haughty and cold.

Concluded to-morrow.
